NOTES ON THE INDIAN WARS IN NEW ENGLAND.

CHAPTER I.

Causes of Indian Wars.—Land not the Cause.—Other Causes.—Lands not taken from them without their Consent.—Plymouth vindicated by Gov. Winslow.—Plymouth's Care for the Indians.—Voyagers kidnap them.—Hunt, his Apology.—Smith's Encounter with some.—Weymouth's Conduct.—Harlow's.—Exploit of Pechmo.—Escape and Exploit of Epenow.—His Attack upon Capt. Dermer.

THERE is an extensively prevailing opinion that the Indian War of 1675, 1676 and 1677, generally denominated King Philip's War, grew out of the encroachments upon their lands by their white neighbors of New England. It will be seen, in the progress of the narrative now undertaken, that the land of the Indians was not the cause of the war; but that there were other causes, about which very little has ever been said. These causes it is intended to explain, before entering upon the details of the war.

Had every white inhabitant who sat himself down by the side of an Indian been kind and generous, discovered less of avarice, and not taken pains to make himself offensive by his unmistakable haughtiness, few cases of contention would have arisen. What is tolerated, or rather suffered, in civilized society, is not so easily borne where there are no conventional ranks. In civilized society, so called, that part of it possessing the greatest wealth are very apt to carry themselves in a haughty and offensive manner towards the poorer portion. This is quietly submitted to by the latter. Indians could not understand this; for among them all were equal; and insults were never borne, except by those physically unable to revenge them.

At the first, that is, when the white people came first among the Indians, the latter looked upon the former as creatures of different flesh and blood; scarcely animals. But after a time they became enlightened. They saw that men of a different colored skin from their own lived by eating and drinking, the same as they themselves did. They saw also that the white men were as susceptible of wounds and injuries in their persons as others of their own color. Hence, in all apparent physical circumstances, the two races were equal. Now all this being demonstrated by actual experience, the Indian began at length to inquire into the cause of his being treated as an inferior. And it was not until he learned that the white man set a high value on things upon which he set none, or very little; and he saw, too, that when things were in his possession they were of little value, but that as soon as they were transferred to the white man's hands they became of great value. He therefore said to himself, "It is the Indian's property in the white man's hands that gives the white man importance, makes him arrogant and covetous; and he despises the Indian as soon as his ends are answered, and when the Indian has nothing more to part with."

Neighbors thus circumstanced must necessarily fall out; and, being physically equal, personal collisions will ensue. Therefore, that the contentions with the Indians grew out of possession of their lands by the white man without adequate compensation, is not a necessary condition in accounting for Indian wars, and, so far as New England is concerned, is without foundation; for, however small the compensation given for land, it was, as a general thing, all the land was worth at that time; nor would it ever have been worth more in the hands of the Indians. They could make no use of it, or of but a very small part of it. To kill a deer on a hundred or a thousand acres of land once in a year was certainly a very small income for so many acres.

Any one will find, by an examination of all the public records of New England, that in no instance was land taken from the Indians without their consent, and without what was then considered a fair compensation. Cases, indeed, may be found where white men settled upon land not purchased of the Indians; but, so far as is known, they were always compelled to vacate such possession on complaint of the Indians. It should be remembered, too, that the Indians often invited white settlers to come and reside among them, giving them freely as much land as they wanted. This kind of acquirement of land, however, was never acknowledged by the country; and, when the Indians were tired of such settlers, they were, on complaint of intrusion, compelled to remove.

The war with Philip began in the colony of Plymouth; and there were those who charged the people there with bringing on that war by their injuries to the Indians. But the Governor of that colony wrote a letter of vindication to the Rev. Dr. Increase Mather, which the Doctor printed in his little quarto history of the war. The letter of Governor Winslow is dated the first of May, 1676. In that letter there is evidence of great sincerity; and there can be no doubt of its truth in every particular. Indeed, its honest simplicity will ever carry conviction with it, and is good evidence of the entire integrity of its author. Among other things he speaks of the "undeserved aspersions that some ignorant, or worse than uncharitable, persons would lay upon" that colony "respecting the grounds of these troubles," and adds, "we have endeavored to carry it justly and faithfully towards them at all times, and friendly beyond their deserts. I think I can clearly say, that, before these present troubles broke out, the English did not possess one foot of land in this colony but what was fairly obtained by honest purchase of the Indian proprietors. Nay, because some of our people are of a covetous disposition, and the Indians are, in their straits, easily prevailed with to part with their lands, we first made a law that none should purchase, or receive of gift, any land of the Indians, without the knowledge and allowance of our Court; and penalty of a fine, five pound per acre, for all that should be so bought or obtained." Besides this guard for their security and protection, it was provided by the same General Court of that colony, "that Mount Hope, Pocasset, and several other Necks of the best land in the Colony, (because most suitable and convenient for them,) should never be bought out of their hands."

Thus the colony of Plymouth took much better care for the Indians than the Indians did for themselves; and Governor Winslow very justly remarked, that, if those lands had not been reserved by law, the Indians would have sold them long before the time he wrote. "And," continues Mr. Winslow, "our neighbors at Rehoboth and Swanzy, although they bought their lands fairly of this Philip and his father and brother, yet, because of their vicinity, that they might not trespass upon the Indians, did, at their own cost, set up a very substantial fence quite across that great Neck between the English and the Indians; and paid due damage if at any time any unruly horse or other beasts break in and trespassed. And, for divers years last past, (that all occasion of offence, in that respect, might be prevented,) the English agreed with Philip and his for a certain sum, yearly, to maintain the said fence and secure themselves. And if at any time they have brought complaints before us, they have had justice impartial and speedily, so that our own people have frequently complained that we erred on the other hand in showing them over much favor."

It would be a mistake to suppose that any one act or circumstance on the side of the English or the Indians was the cause of the bloody war which broke out in 1675. But it grew out of a combination of causes, already explained, which commenced almost as soon as the English traders and settlers came into the country. Even some of the first voyagers, through their imprudence, incurred the hatred of the Indians on various parts of the coast. As early as 1614, a Capt. Thomas Hunt, in imitation of the captains of slavers on the coast of Africa, kidnapped twenty-seven Indians in the neighborhood of Patuxet, (afterwards called Plymouth,) carried them to Spain, and sold them into slavery. Capt. Hunt was under the command of Capt. John Smith; but this act of Hunt was done without the knowledge of Smith, and was by him severely censured. He was left in the Massachusetts Bay, by Smith, with orders to make up his cargo of fish, furs, and oil, and then to proceed to Malaga; "but this vile act," says Smith, "kept him ever after from any more employment to those parts."

The only apology which can be offered for Capt. Hunt is, that, in those days, slavery was nowhere considered morally wrong. All nations believed it right, and countenanced it under certain circumstances. Hunt was censured, therefore, mainly because he had made the trade to this coast dangerous, if he had not entirely destroyed it, by provoking the vengeance of the Indians. The Indians were looked upon as a degraded, inferior, and faithless race, and no more to be regarded than the Africans. This, at least, was the general impression.

The twenty-seven Indians carried off by Hunt were, according to the statement of Dr. Increase Mather, "sold for twenty pounds a man, until it was known whence they came; for then the friars in those parts took away the rest of them, that so they might nurture them in the Popish religion." The same author says that twenty of them were taken at Patuxet, and seven from Nauset, since Eastham.

This was one of the most serious difficulties which happened before the Pequot War; but it was by no means the only one, and it was never forgotten, even to the time of the war with Philip.

It is not intended to notice all the difficulties between the English and Indians which occurred before the war of 1675, but only the most important of them; which will be sufficient to show how animosities originated, and how they were from time to time increased and perpetuated, until that war finally burst forth, putting the very existence of the entire English settlements in peril, and ending with the destruction of the Indian power.

Before the Indians had much intercourse with the white people, they appeared to the latter exceedingly simple, and could be easily imposed upon by the selfish, unscrupulous, and crafty. Capt. Smith calls them "silly salvages," and says "they were very kind, but in their furie no lesse valiant; for, vpon a quarrel wee had with one of them, hee, only with three others, crossed the harbor of Quonahassit to certain rocks whereby we must pass, and there let fly their arrows for our shot." This affair was at Cohasset rocks. As Smith proceeded down the bay, "vpon small occasion," another quarrel arose. Forty or fifty Indians attacked the English, who fired upon them, killing one, and wounding another with a shot through the thigh. And yet, as Smith relates, in an hour after they made up and became friends again. These are some of the events of 1614.

Many of the natives were carried away from the coast of New England besides those kidnapped by Capt. Hunt. Some of them may have gone voluntarily, but those stolen or forced away seized the first opportunity to be revenged for such ill usage. Several of these have become historical characters. They feigned contentment in captivity, and laid plans of escape artfully, which, in some instances, they executed successfully. As several of these circumstances and events are of deep interest, and show the progress of the relations between the English and Indians, it may be thought by the reader that some of the most important of them should be given. It is therefore proposed to go a step back, and to take up a few of the leading incidents here hinted at.

To the kidnapping of several Indians from about Pemaquid, in 1605, Sir Ferdinando Gorges imputes the colonization of New England. That barbarous act was committed by Capt. George Weymouth; not, however, to make slaves of them, but, by kindly treating them, to induce them to give his employers a more perfect knowledge of the country than they could otherwise obtain. Yet this is a poor excuse for depriving people of their liberty; for at the bottom of all such acts lies the same cupidity which is the cause of robbery and greater crimes. Gold and other rich mines were supposed to exist in the country, the knowledge of which the English expected to obtain from the Indians.

It was on the 4th of June, 1605, that Weymouth put in execution his plan of seizing the Indians which he carried from the coast of New England, already mentioned. In the account of his voyage, published in London, the same year, is a minute detail of the transaction, which cannot well be given excepting in the language of the writer of that voyage. It therefore follows: "About eight o'clock this day we went on shore, with our boats, to fetch aboard water and wood; our captain leaving word with the gunner in the ship, by discharging a musket, to give notice if they espied any canoe coming, which they did about ten o'clock. He therefore, being careful they should be kindly treated, requested me [James Rosier] to go aboard, intending with dispatch to make what haste after he possibly could. When I came to the ship there were two canoes, and in either of them three savages, of whom two were below at the fire; the others staid in their canoes about the ship, and because we could not entice them aboard, we gave them a can of pease and bread, which they carried to the shore to eat; but one of them brought back our can presently, and staid aboard with the other two; for he being young, of a ready capacity, and one we most desired to bring with us into England, had received exceeding kind usage at our hands, and was therefore much delighted in our company. When our captain was come, we consulted how to catch the other three at shore; which we performed thus: We manned the lighthorseman [boat] with seven or eight men; one standing before carried our box of merchandise, as we were wont when I went to traffic with them, and a platter of pease, which meat they loved; but, before we were landed, one of them (being so suspiciously fearful of his own good) withdrew himself into the wood. The other two met us on the shore-side, to receive the pease, with whom we went up the cliff to their fire, and sat down with them; and, while we were discussing how to catch the third man, who was gone, I opened the box, and shewed them trifles to exchange, thinking thereby to have banished fear from the other, and drawn him to return; but when we could not, we used little delay, but suddenly laid hands upon them; and it was as much as five or six of us could do to get them into the lighthorseman; for they were strong, and so naked as our best hold was by their long hair on their heads; and we would have been very loth to have done them any hurt, which of necessity we had been constrained to have done if we had attempted them in a multitude; which we must and would rather than have wanted them, being a matter of great importance for the full accomplishment of our voyage."

Such was the manner in which Capt. Weymouth possessed himself of five of the natives, whose names were, as given by the writer of the voyage, "Táhanedo, a sagamore; Amóret, Skicowáras, Manedo, gentlemen; and Saffacomet, a servant."* "And so it pleased our great God," wrote Sir Ferdinando Gorges, that Weymouth, on his return to England, "came into the harbor of Plymouth, where I then commanded. I seized upon the Indians. They were all of one nation, but of several parts, and several families. This accident must be acknowledged the means, under God, of putting on foot and giving life to all our plantations. And, having kept them full three years, I made them able to set me down what great rivers run up into the land, what men of note were seated on them, what power they were of, how allied, and what enemies they had."

The next year, however, 1606, two of those Indians were sent out with Capt. Henry Challons, to aid in trade and discovery in New England; but Challons was taken by the Spaniards, and the Indians with him. Their names were, as then given, Assacumet and Manida. Yet, after a time, one, if not both, of them returned to England. In 1607, another of them, Sketwarroes, was sent with Capt. Raleigh Gilbert, to aid him in his settlement of a colony at the mouth of the Kennebeck.

In 1611, Capt. Edward Harlow made a voyage to the coast. At Monhigon Island he seized three Indians, whose names were Pechmo, Monopet, and Pekenimne; but Pechmo leaped overboard and escaped. He was a bold and daring fellow, and determined to be revenged. Collecting a few men, he seized upon the ship's boat, cut it from her stern, and got off with it, in spite of all the ship's company could do. Nor could they retake it, it was so well guarded upon the shore by the Indians, with their bows and arrows, who had also bedded it in the sand. Seeing that nothing more could be done in the eastern parts, Capt. Harlow proceeded southward. At Capoge he succeeded in kidnapping two others, Coneconam and Epenow; and at Nohono, Sakaweston. With these five Indians he returned to England.

Some of these Indians had deceived Sir Ferdinando Gorges by making him believe they knew where gold was to be found in abundance; and he obtained a promise from Epenow to discover it to him. Accordingly, Sir Ferdinando sent over Capt. Hobson, in 1614, very confident he would make a good voyage, and obtain very important information about the riches of the country; but he was doomed to be sadly disappointed. Capt. Hobson had with him three Indians, Epenow, Assacumet, and Wenape. On arriving at Cape Cod, Epenow's friends and acquaintances visited the ship, and with them he planned an escape. They were kindly entertained by the captain, and when they left promised to return in the morning, and to bring some articles for traffic. "But Epenow," says Sir Ferdinando, "privately, as it appeared, had contracted with his friends how he might make his escape without performing what he had undertaken, being, in truth, no more than he had told me he was to do, though with loss of life. For otherwise, if it were found that he had discovered the secrets of his country, he was sure to have his brains knocked out as soon as he came ashore. For that cause, I gave the captain strict charge to endeavor by all means to prevent his escaping from them. And, for the more surety, I gave order to have three gentlemen of my own kindred to be ever at hand with him; clothing him with long garments, fitly to be laid hold on, if occasion should require. Notwithstanding all this, his friends being all come at the time appointed, with twenty canoes, and lying at a certain distance, with their bows ready, the captain calls to them to come aboard; but they not moving, he speaks to Epenow to come unto him where he was, in the forecastle of the ship; he, being then in the waste of the ship, between the two gentlemen that had him in guard, starts suddenly from them, and, coming to the captain, calls to his friends, in English, to come aboard; in the interim, slips himself overboard; and, although he were taken hold of by one of the company, yet, being a strong and heavy man, could not be stayed; and was no sooner in the water, but the Indians sent such a shower of arrows, and came withal desperately so near the ship, that they carried him away in despite of all the musquetteers aboard, who were, for the number, as good as our nation did afford. And thus were my hopes in that particular [voyage] made void and frustrate."

It is clearly seen from the narrative of this succession of injuries, that the white people could, from the first, expect nothing but treachery in return for the fraud and injustice they themselves had continually practised upon the natives of New England.

Five years after the voyage of Capt. Hobson, namely, in 1619, Capt. Thomas Dermer, another of Sir Ferdinando Gorges' men, came to Capoge, the place where Epenow made his escape, and there met with him. The shrewd Indian could speak some English, and he narrated to the captain his adventurous escape from Capt. Hobson, at which account he made himself very merry. He learned from Capt. Dermer that he was in the service of Gorges, and made very particular inquiry about his old friend, and his affairs. Meantime, he suspected Dermer was sent to seize him, and to take him to England. He therefore conspired with other Indians to take the captain prisoner; and they actually fell upon him. "But he, being a brave, stout gentleman," drew his sword, and freed himself from them; though not without fourteen wounds, some of which were of so serious a nature that he was obliged to go to Virginia to have them attended to. He lived to make another voyage to America, and died upon the coast, of fever.

Walker.—Inroad of the Tarratines.—They murder Bagual.—War between the Narragansets and Pequots.—Murder of Reynold Jenkins.

FROM what has been stated it will appear evident that nothing but trouble could be expected to follow between the Europeans and Indians on this coast, whenever and wherever they came together. The voyagers had incurred their vengeance, and therefore, when they could entrap any of them, they took savage satisfaction in treating them only as savages knew how to treat them.

About the year 1616, a French ship was wrecked on some part of Cape Cod. Its crew saved themselves and their goods; but as soon as the Indians discovered them they made them captives, and used them in their cruel manner, giving them only such victuals as they gave their dogs, robbed them of everything, and, in the end, killed them all but one; that one married a native, and had posterity. About the same time there came another French ship into the Massachusetts Bay. This the Indians treacherously captured, and put the whole crew to death; and, after plundering it, they set it on fire, and it was consumed.

Up to this time the Indians were very numerous along the whole coast of New England; and especially so around Massachusetts Bay, the waters of Rhode Island and Connecticut. In 1617, or about that time, there came upon them a deadly pestilence, which prevailed to such an extent that many places were nearly depopulated; especially the tract of country between the Massachusetts and Narraganset Bays. But for this, doubtless, the English could not have obtained a foothold in the country at the time they did. The pestilence was more fatal, probably, in the region of Plymouth than in any other part of the country; and this caused those who came to that place to settle to attribute the destruction of the Indians to an overruling Providence, that they might not be molested by them. Certain it is the Pilgrims met with but few of the natives for some time after their arrival; but when they made their appearance it was in a hostile manner; and it was only owing to their weakness that the English were not driven at once from that icebound and inhospitable shore, upon which, by untoward circumstances, they had been cast.

As there had been no intercourse hitherto between the Europeans and Indians but what had ended in hostilities, none other could be expected now by the latter; and, accordingly, every motion of the Pilgrims was watched. Notwithstanding the pestilence had carried off multitudes of them, there were now several tribes dwelling at and about what is since Warren, Bristol, Eastham, Weymouth, and Braintree. There were, likewise, many seated upon the rivers, far into the land; but of them little was known for a long period. Some time in March, 1621, the Powwows of all the tribes assembled "in a dismal swamp," and there, "for three days together, held their mysterious conjurations" to find out the intentions of the English, that their tribes might know how to meet them. The English, however, were much at a loss to know what that powwowing affair meant, though they did not hesitate to pronounce it something diabolical, and that it had special reference to them in their coming into the country. Meanwhile their fears were considerably abated by the appearance of an Indian among them. This was Samoset. He spoke to them in their own language, and, as he approached their village, uttered, in a firm voice, "Welcome, Englishmen! welcome, Englishmen!" His visit happened about a month after the great meeting of the Powwows, namely, on the 16th of March; and he was the first Indian with whom the English were able to speak since their landing in the previous December. He was naked, "only a leather about his waist, with a fringe about a span long." The weather was very cold, and, says a writer then there present, "we cast a horseman's coat about him. He had been with the English at Monhiggon, and knew by name the most of the captains or masters of vessels who had for many years frequented that and adjacent parts." The Pilgrims questioned him "of many things," and he readily communicated whatever he knew; "said he was not of these parts, but of Moratiggon, and a Sagamore. He had a bow and two arrows; was a tall, straight man; the hair of his head black, long behind, only short before, and none on his face at all." On his asking for beer they gave him "strong water, some biscuit, butter and cheese, and pudding, and a piece of mallard; all which he liked well." He told them that the place where they were settled was called Patuxet, and that about four years before, all the inhabitants died of an extraordinary plague, and that there was neither man, woman, nor child remaining; and, says the writer, "indeed we have found none."

Through the kind agency of Samoset, the Pilgrims, the next day, became acquainted with another Indian, named Squanto, said to have been one of those carried away by Capt. Hunt. Thus, by that misfortune, he escaped the pestilence which swept off every other inhabitant of Patuxet, now Plymouth. He had lived some time in England, and was with Mr. Jolin Slanie, a merchant in Cornhill, London. He, also, could speak some English. Squanto, and likewise Samoset, came from Massasoit, (who, according to Samoset, had in his tribe about sixty men; and of the Nausets he said there were one hundred.) They had been sent by him to learn whether the English were friends or enemies. And finding them friends, Massasoit himself, with many of his men, visited them on the 22d of March, only six days after the first appearance of Samoset, and entered into a formal treaty, consisting of seven articles. Massasoit and his tribe were friends to the English as long as that Chief lived. But a tribe or clan of the Pokanokets, living at Mattapoiset, under a Chief named Caunbitant, were displeased, and caused them frequent alarms. At length an armed force was sent against them, and they were terrified into submission. This was in the month of August, 1621; and on the 13th of September following, Caunbitant and eight other Sachems came to Plymouth and signed a treaty with the English.

In 1622 another settlement of the English was begun at Wessagusset, since called Weymouth. These settlers were, in general, profligate and unruly, and, by their bad management, soon reduced themselves so low that even the Indians looked upon them with contempt. This was not all. They cheated and abused the Indians, until the latter were determined to exterminate them; and, it is said, actually formed a plot for that purpose. This coming to the knowledge of the Plymouth people, very much alarmed them; because they knew the Wessagusset Colony would fall an easy prey to the Indians, and, fearing that might elate them, and so excite their insolence, that they would not spare any of the English. They therefore, in self-defence, as they argued, declared war against the Massachusetts Indians. This first and formal declaration of war in New England was made by the Government of Plymouth, on the 23d of March, 1623; and two days after, Capt. Standish, with some eight men, marched against them. After manœuvring some time, by which he intended to get a large number together, and then to attack them, he succeeded in getting four into a house or wigwam. Two of these were noted war chiefs; by name, Wittuwamet and Peksuot. Standish ordered his men to fasten the door of the room in which they were; and then they fell upon the four Indians, and, after a desperate struggle, put them all to death. This was on the 27th of March. Standish soon after returned to Plymouth, carrying with him the head of Wittuwamet, which he set upon the fort. Seven Indians were killed during the expedition.

This rigorous proceeding of the people of Plymouth struck such terror into the rest of the Indians, in all directions, that they fled from their habitations, hid themselves in swamps and unhealthy places, and neglected their planting, until many of them perished from diseases thus contracted, and the want of the necessaries of life. Nor did they recover from the effects of this blow for a period of near fifty years; at the end of which period began the war with the Wampanoags, usually called King Philip's War.

In the mean time the country had been gradually filling up with white settlers; and numerous little settlements called towns dotted the landscape in every direction. The Indians became accustomed to their strange neighbors, and many of them were convinced that their own condition was made better by that people. Those who disliked them, and cared not to associate with them, were afraid to make their jealousy and hatred prominent; for they were aware of their superiority in the use of offensive weapons. However, several years before the war with Philip began, the Indians had, in various ways, supplied themselves with the guns of the English and French, and were apt in the use of them. In many tribes they had almost altogether superseded bows and arrows, and the war club. Laws were early made, and long continued, to prevent European arms being sold to the Indians; but it was quite impossible to enforce them effectually.

The natives who were possessed of any prudence well knew that it was not to their interest to engage in a war with their white neighbors, because they clearly saw the odds was vastly against them.

Although from 1623 to 1675 there was no general war with the Indians in New England, yet there were often and frequent disturbances,* some of the principal of which it is necessary to recount, as they had much influence upon the rise and progress of that war. There were also frequent quarrels and murders among the Indians themselves, with which the white people had nothing to do; though, after such occurrences, they sometimes espoused the cause of the party they considered injured, and used their endeavors to bring the offender to punishment. So when any wrong was done to any Indian by any of the settlers, justice was speedily extended to the injured party. Of course cases would often arise wherein, from conflicting evidence, the ends of justice were frustrated. This was oftenest the case when the English interfered with the Indians' private quarrels, or quarrels among themselves. They were bad lawyers; and it was difficult for them to understand the justice of such interference. Hence the party suffering by it often determined on taking the first opportunity to be revenged; or, as it used to be said, "to right themselves." In this way feuds and jealousies were perpetuated.

* No allusion to the Pequot War is intended, for I have prepared a detailed account of it, which remains in manuscript, and which I intend, at some time, to publish uniform with this. A very brief abstract of it may be seen in the HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF BOSTON.

In 1631, Sergt. Richard Walker of Lynn, as he was upon watch, about midnight, was shot at by an Indian, and the arrow passed through his clothes. He gave an alarm, and a small cannon, called a culverin, was discharged, and nothing further was heard of an enemy.

On the 8th of August, the same year, about one hundred Tarratines attacked the Indians living at Agawam, since Ipswich, killed seven men, and carried away several captives. They also rifled a cabin established there by Mr. Matthew Cradock's men, who were employed in taking sturgeon, carrying off their nets and provisions. The Tarratines were eastern Indians, living beyond the Pascataqua.

On the 3d of October, one Walter Bagnal was murdered and robbed by an Indian. He had a trading stand near the mouth of Saco River; and it is said he had provoked the Indians by overreaching them in trade. Early in the winter following, 1631-2, the Tarratines, perhaps the same who had attacked Agawam, met with a boat belonging to Mr. Henry Way of Dorchester, in which were five men, one of whom was Mr. Way's son. All these they killed; and, to hide the evidence of their barbarity, they sunk the boat with stones. Some of the perpetrators were afterwards taken and hanged.

The next spring the Tarratines came again to surprise Agawam; but, through the prudent management of Sergt. John Perkins, they did not dare to land. This time there were twenty canoes full of them.

At the same time there was a war between the Narragansets and Pequots; and Canonicus, the Narragauset Sachem, came among the Massachusetts Indians to engage them to assist him against his enemies. Accordingly two of the Chiefs, Chikatabut of Neponset, and Wonohaquham of Winnisemmet, each with about sixty men, engaged in an expedition. The result is not known.

In August, this year, two of Chikatabut's men were set in the bilboes at Boston, "for assaulting some English people at Dorchester, in their own houses, and their Chiefs made to beat them;" but in what manner is not stated.

Sometime in the following month, one Reynold Jenkins of Dorchester, going among the Indians under Passaconaway to trade, is killed, while asleep in a wigwam, by one of them. The Chief pursued and captured the murderer, and, according to an agreement with the English, delivers him up for punishment. They doubtless executed him; but of that no record has been met with.

At the General Court at Boston, in September, it was ordered that Richard Hopkins should be severely whipt, and branded with a hot iron on one of his cheeks, for selling guns, powder, and shot to the Indians. At the same time the question was considered, whether persons offending in this way ought not to be put to death. But the subject was referred to the next court, which met on the 3d of October. It does not appear to have been then agitated; though Nicholas Frost, for stealing from the Indians at Damerill's Cove, and other less pardonable offences, had a like punishment inflicted on him. Instead of his head, a hand was to be branded; to be banished out of the colony; to be kept in bolts till his fine of five pounds was paid, and damages to Henry Way and John Holman of forty pounds. If ever he returned into the colony he was to be put to death.

In January, 1633, Poquanum, called by the whites Black Will, formerly sachem of Nahant, living at Richmond's Island, at the eastward, is seized by some Englishmen in pursuit of pirates, and hanged. It is said he was one of the murderers of Walter Bagnal.

During the autumn of this year the small pox destroyed great numbers of the Indians. About Pascataqua River nearly all perish. So about Boston; the Chiefs Chikatanbut, Montowampate, Wonohaquaham, with most of their people, die of it. About Plymouth, too, many are carried off by a malignant distemper; with which about twenty of the Pilgrims die also. In January following, 1634, it was reported that the small pox had swept over the Narraganset country, destroying in its course seven hundred of that nation, and that it was extending among those westward of them.

On the 4th of September, 1638, Arthur Peach, Thomas Jackson, and Richard Slinnings, (probably an Irishman,) were executed at Plymouth for the murder of a Narraganset Indian. Peach was said to have been "a young desperado, who had been a soldier in the Pequot War, and done notable service, being bold and forward in any desperate attempt." He was principal, and the other two accessories. After he came out of the service against the Pequots, instead of going to work, he set out to go to the Dutch settlement at Hudson's River, and enticed three others to run away from their masters and accompany him. As they proceeded southward, through the woods, they met with an Indian who had a quantity of wampum. They invited him to sit down and smoke with them, which he did. Peach proposed to his comrades to kill and rob him. They declined having any hand in the killing, but left it to Peach to do as he was inclined. He therefore, watching his opportunity, ran the Indian through the body with his rapier, leaving him for dead. But, though mortally wounded, the sufferer succeeded in reaching some of his countrymen, retaining strength enough to inform them who the assassins were, and then expired. Soon after, the Narraganset Sachems pursued and captured all the party of whites but one, and carried them to Rhode Island, where they were put into prison. Meanwhile the Narragansets threatened to make war on the English, thinking they had authorized the murder. This they were easily induced to believe, because the Pequots had told them that, after the English had destroyed their nation, they would destroy them likewise. But when they saw the three white men executed they were amazed, and expressed themselves entirely satisfied. That three should be put to death for one Indian they could not well understand, knowing the deed was done by one man only. This some called "magnifying of justice," and the Indians may have thought it was paying for other murders of their countrymen in advance. However, the cause of war at this time was thus removed.

On the 25th of March, 1639, Massasoit, now known as Woosamequin, a name, perhaps, taken by him on the death of his brother, Quadequina, appeared at Plymouth, and desired to renew the treaty which he made on his first visit to Plymouth, in 1621. His son, then called Moosanam, came with him, and with him executed a new treaty, expressed in very strong terms of friendship and reciprocity. Woosamequin was influenced to appear at this time, very probably, from a fear of the Narragansets, who were jealous of him, because he had from the first been in high favor with the English. "Yet it is very remarkable," wrote a contemporary,* "that this Woosamequen, how much soever he affected the English, was never in the least degree any ways well affected to the religion of the English; but would, in his last treaty with his neighbors at Plymouth, when they were with him about purchasing some land at Swanzy, have had them engage never to attempt to draw away any of his people from their old pagan superstition and devilish idolatry to the Christian religion, and did much insist upon it, till he saw the English were resolved never to make any treaty with him more on that account; which when he discerned he did not further urge it." The old chief or sachem lived until about 1660,† at which time he must have been near eighty years of age; for in 1621 the Pilgrims say he was then a man "in his best years."

The period from 1638 to the disturbances which are usually considered as the immediate causes of Philip's War is full of deep interest. There was during that time a continued and unbroken chain of events, which led to the exterminating war between the Narragansets and Mohegans. Those events are closely interwoven with various impelling and conflicting interests of the English in the two colonies of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and have never yet been detailed with the justice and impartiality their importance demands. As many of the difficulties between those two great tribes grew out of the Pequot War, to the history of that war they will be properly deferred.

CHAPTER III.

Mooanam, Wamsutta, Alexander.—Charged with plotting against the English.—Ordered to appear at Plymouth, and refuses.—Is forcibly conveyed thither.—Conflicting Accounts as to the manner of Treatment in Captivity.—His Death.—Greatly Bewailed.—Philip succeeds him.—His Accession Celebrated, which causes Alarm to Plymouth.—He is sent for.—Makes a Treaty.—Family of Alexander.

For some time before his death "good old Massasoit" appears to have been quite inactive; and his elder son, Alexander, seems to have taken upon himself the affairs of the tribe, as some sales of lands were made by him before the death of his father. His name up to about this time was Wamsutta. At what date he threw off the name of Mooanam, and took that of Wamsutta, is not known; but it is very probable that on the death of his father he had it changed to Alexander. Accordingly, soon after that event,‡ he, with his younger brother, appeared at Plymouth, and requested the Governor to give

† Daggett's Hist. Attleborough, 133; I. Mather's Relation, 70-72; Morton, N. E. Mem., Sub. anno, 1662; Roger Williams, Letter in Knowles, 406.

‡ It is stated by some writers that Massasoit came with his two sons, and requested that they might receive English names; but Dr. I. Mather, Relation, 70, says the event was after the death of Massasoit. There is much confusion respecting this circumstance. Hubbard, Narrative, 8, speaks of Massasoit's going with Alexander and Philip, his sons, to Mr. Brown's, who lived near Mount Hope.

both of them English names. The Governor complied, calling one Alexander, and the other Philip. It had now become a custom for the Indians to take English names; which, when thus acquired, caused them much satisfaction.

Very soon after, or within a year certain, Gov. Prence* of Plymouth received information from Boston informing him that a plot was being laid by Alexander, which had for its object a hostile movement against the English of that jurisdiction. The Governor sent immediately to Capt. Thomas Willet,† who resided near Mount Hope, and requested him to confer with Alexander, to learn, if possible, what his grievances were, and to request him to appear at the next court at Plymouth, to give his reasons for proceeding in the manner alleged.

It is not certain that Alexander actually promised to appear, as requested; but, from what passed between him and Capt. Willet, the English expected him. Be this as it may, he came not to the court at Plymouth; but in the time of that court, it is asserted, he went over to the Narragansets, the very tribe he was charged with bringing into his scheme of offence against the people of Plymouth. This heightened their suspicions, and they resolved promptly to check any hostile design.

Thereupon the Governor and Council of Plymouth ordered Major Josiah, or, as then written, Josias, Winslow to take an armed force, and proceed to Mount Hope, and force the Indian Chief to come to Plymouth. This was indeed a highhanded measure on the part of that government, and would never have been attempted, but from a confidence in its own strength, and in the weakness of the other party. The Wampanoags were an independent power, such as it was, and had so been treated with from the first. And what renders this proceeding the more reprehensible is, that there does not appear to have been any real grounds for a suspicion that their Chief, at this time, was contriving any mischief himself, or was conniving with the Narragansets in any sinister design, at least against the people of Plymouth. However, Major Winslow, taking with him Major William Bradford, (both sons of governors of Plymouth of their respective names,) and about ten mounted men, well armed, proceeded for Sowams, or, as often written, Sowamset, now Warren, in Rhode Island.

To this point in the narrative there is no disagreement in the accounts of the contemporary writers; but respecting the capture, treatment, sickness, and subsequent death of Alexander, those writers differ very materially; and, as they seem to be very nearly on an equal footing for truth and veracity, there is no alternative for the more modern historian but to let each of them be heard in evidence in so important a cause.

"The person," writes Mr. Hubbard, "to whom that service was committed, was a prudent and resolute gentleman, the present [1676]

* Thus the governor always wrote his name. Here is a fac-simile, of 1630:—

† He was son of Thomas Willet who came to Plymouth in 1630; and the first English mayor of New York. He was ancestor of the late Col. Marinus Willet of the Revolution. See N. E. Hist. and Gen. Regr. ii. 376.

Tho: Prence:

Governor of that colony, who was neither afraid of danger, nor yet willing to delay in a matter of that moment, he forthwith, taking eight or ten stout men, well armed, intended to have gone to the said Alexander's dwelling, distant at least forty miles* from the Governor's house; but, by a good Providence, he found him whom he went to seek at an hunting-house within six miles of the English towns,† where the said Alexander, with about eighty‡ men, were newly come in from hunting, and had left their guns without doors, which Major Winslow, with his small company, wisely seized and conveyed away, and then went into the wigwam, and demanded Alexander to go along with him before the Governor,—at which message he was much appalled; but, being told by the undaunted messenger, that if he stirred, or refused to go, he was a dead man, he was, by one of his chief counsellors,§ in whose service he most confided, persuaded to go along to the Governor's house. But such was the pride and height of his spirit, that the very surprisal of him so raised his choler and indignation that it put him into a fever, which, notwithstanding all possible means that could be used, seemed mortal. Whereupon, entreating those that held him prisoner that he might have liberty to return home, promising to return again if he recovered, and to send his son as hostage till he could do so. On that consideration he was fairly dismissed; but died before he got half way home. Here let it be observed, that although some have taken up false reports, as if the English had compelled him to go farther or faster than he was able, and so fell into a fever; or, as if he were not well used by the physician|| that looked to him, while he was with the English; all which are notoriously false. Nor is it to be imagined that a person of so noble a disposition as that gentleman at that time employed to bring him, should himself, or suffer any one else, to be uncivil to a person allied to them by his own, as well as his father's, league, as the said Philip also was. Nor was anything of that nature ever objected to the English of Plymouth by the said Alexander's brother, by name Philip, commonly, for his ambitious and haughty spirit, nicknamed King Philip."

William Hubbard

Dr. Increase Mather speaks in quite as confident terms about what he narrates of the affair as Mr. Hubbard. His account is next in importance, and a little more circumstantial, which he gave to the public, as follows: "The immediate predecessor of Philip was not so faithful and friendly to the English as his father had been; for some of Boston having been occasionally [on some occasion] at Narraganset,

* It must be remembered that distances through the wilderness at that time were estimated by not very direct Indian paths.

† Believed to be at Munpon-et Pond, in Halifax, about equidistant from Plymouth and Bridgewater, where it was known the Indians had a very desirable resort.

‡ A very great mistake; perhaps typographical. It should be eight, I have no doubt.

§ Dr. I Mather says it was by the advice of a brother of John Sassamon. There was a Rowland Sassamon, brother of John.

|| The first physician at Plymouth was Samuel Fuller; but he died in 1633. There was at Plymouth in 1640 a Dr. Mathew Fuller, who removed to Barnstable in 1632, and died in 1671. Five years before his death he was appointed Surgeon General of the military forces of Plymouth Colony. —Thacher. He was the attendant upon Alexander, as will elsewhere be seen.

Samuel Fuller

wrote to Mr. Prince, who was then Governor [1662] of Plymouth, that Alexander was contriving mischief against the English, and that he had solicited the Narragansets to engage with him in his designed rebellion. Hereupon Capt. Willet, who lived near to Mount Hope, the place where Alexander did reside, was appointed to speak with him, and to desire him to attend the next court in Plymouth, for their satisfaction and his own vindication. He seemed to take the message in good part, professing that the Narragansets, who, he said, were his enemies, had put an abuse upon him; and he readily promised to attend at the next court. But when the day of his appearance was come, instead of that, he, at that very time, went over to the Narragansets, his pretended enemies; which, compared with other circumstances, caused the gentlemen at Plymouth to suspect there was more of truth in the information given than at first they were aware of.* Wherefore the Governor and magistrates there ordered Major Winslow (who is since, and at this day, [1676,] the Governor of that colony) to take a party of men and fetch down Alexander. The Major considering that semper nocuit differre paratis, [when prepared to act delay is dangerous,] he took but ten armed men with him from Marshfield, intending to have taken more at the towns that lay nearer Mount Hope. But Divine Providence so ordered, as that when they were about the midway between Plymouth and Bridgewater, observing an hunting-house, they rode up to it, and there did they find Alexander and many of his men, all well armed, but their guns standing together without the house. The Major, with his small party, possessed themselves of the Indians' arms, and beset the house. Then did he go in amongst them, acquainting the sachem with the reason of his coming in such a way; desiring Alexander, with his interpreter, to walk out with him, who did so, a little distance from the house, and then understood what commission the Major had received concerning him. The proud sachem fell into a raging passion at this surprise, saying that the Governor had no reason to credit rumors, or to send for him in such a way, nor would he go to Plymouth but when he saw cause. It was replied to him, that his breach of word touching appearance at Plymouth Court, and instead thereof going, at the same time, to his pretended enemies, augmented jealousies concerning him. In fine, the Major told him that his order was to bring him to Plymouth, and that, by the help of God, he would do it, or else he would die on the place. Also declaring to him, that if he would submit, he might expect respective [respectful] usage; but if he once more denied to go, he should never stir from the ground whereon he stood; and, with a pistol at the sachem's breast, required that his next words should be a positive and clear answer to what was demanded. Hereupon his interpreter, a discreet Indian, brother to John Sausaman, being sensible of Alexander's passionate disposition, entreated that he might speak a few words to the sachem before he gave his answer.

* On the other hand it might easily be inferred that the chief neglected to go to Plymouth, under the belief that he was to go there upon an idle errand; to counteract a rumor, the like of which was almost an every-day occurrence; and he did not care to have his own plans of hunting, or other employments, broken up to gratify people who had no right to make such demand upon him.

LEXINGTON'S ANSWER.

In answer to a Petition of Sundry of the Inhabitants & Proprietors of the Westerly Part of Lexington In Conjunction with Sundry the Inhabitants of Concord & Weston Exhibited to the General Court & Read in the house of Representatives July ye 2<sup>d</sup> 1735, & in Council Read & concur'd we a Committee of the town of Lexington humbly offer as followeth:—

1.—We are are Surprised the said Petitioners should offer to trouble this Hon<sup>d</sup> Court any further when their former petition was with so much reason & wisdom Dismissed.

2.—There is a greater number of families or persons Comprahended in the bounds of Land Petitioned for in Lexington who are averse to the prayer of the Petition than are Consenting to it as is certified under their hands.

3.—We have Sundry families who can make Stronger pleas to be Set off than these Petitioners, Lying upon worse roads & at a greater distance from our Meeting house & nearer unto other Meeting houses, besides these Petitioners chose their Distance for their own accomodations & every man cannot think to have a Meeting house at his own Door.

4.—They say they are obliged to Tarry at home, & we in answer say to their honor: They attend the publick worship as Constantly as other people.

5.—They object the Roads are Exceeding bad but we have lately been at Charge to Make them Good & we are Sure if they go off from us they will Exchange them for those that are Much worse.

6.—They say they were opposed by a Considerable number within said bounds in their former Petition so they are still & not without Good Reasons for it will aggravate their Charge and not lessen the Difficulty of their travel or Distance of way as to many of them.

7.—They say the number of Petitioners is now encreased but it is of very unqualified persons & with unreasonable importunity to the great regret of some of the subscribers.

8.—The Lands Petitioned for will make the territory Larger than ours which is a thing unusuall in such Movements, their design then must be to make a fat benefice for some body, by Starving the towns they Depart from & Spoiling two or three towns to make their own great.

9.—They humbly pray your Excellency & honours will be pleased to take this Case Into your wise and serious Consideration & if our Case Come under the same wise and scrious Consideration we are humbly of opinion this their Petition must be Desmised as their former was, for there is the Same Reason for it in all Respects, save only they have over persuaded some to sign and join with them very much to their Disadvantage & which they have alredy Repented & will have more cause to do so afterward.

10.—They say we would not Consent to set them off, we say we Could not In Reason do it; for these very petitioners very lately were very forward to bring forward the Settlement of an assistant to the Reverand Mr. Hancock & we rejoiced In it but are surprised they should so soon meditate a remove & leave us under the Load of the augmented Charge which with the Charge of the Rebuilding the great Bridge at the Same time lyes heavy upon us (tho we abundantly acknowledge the favour of this Hon<sup>ble</sup> Court in their Grant to us on that account) & it will needs be with some reluctancy to the Late Settled Minister as well as to his Reverand Father to part with so many Good friends at once.

Finally, we humbly Claim the benefit of that paragraph in our Royal Charter page 6th wherein it is ordained that all Bodies Politick & Towns &c shall hold & enjoy such Grants & Bounds as have been made by any Generall Court formerly held & which gives us a right to Petition in the present Case & grounds to hope your Excellency & Hon<sup>rs</sup> will deny the prayer of the said Petitioners, So shall we ever humbly pray for &c.

WESTON'S ANSWER.

May It please your Excellencies & Hon<sup>rs</sup>

In as much it was your pleasures at the Sessions in July Last past, upon the petition of Sundry the Inhabitants of the Easterly part of Concord & the Northerly part of Weston & of the Westerly part of Lexington, to order that the said petitioners Should Serve the towns of Concord Lexington & Weston with Copies of the Petition (wherein they pray to be Set off a Seperate Township as therein Expressed) to Shew Cause why the prayer thereof Should not be granted, The Town of Weston humbly offer their reasons as follows:—

1.—That the said Town of Weston is but small, Tho' about Seven Miles In Length from North to South, yet scarce Three Miles wide in the Center & in Considerable parts not above half so much, & great part of the land very poor rocky and barren not Capable to be inhabited. That there are but about a hundred families in all & many of them in Low Circumstances.

II.—That the Said Town hath lately been at great Cost and Charges to build & finish a Decent Meeting house for the publick worship of God not only of sufficient Dimensions for the whole town, but it is not near fill'd when assembled together and this Meeting house stands by the great Road & as Surveyors find by the platt within a few Rods of the Centre of the Town. So that the Petitioners have little more Reason to Complain of the Distance or Difficulty than their Neighbours who live at the South End of the town.

III.—That if the Said Petitioners Should be set off by the Large bound which they ask for it would be building their new town upon the Ruins of Weston, which we suppose is not doing as they would be Done by for that their South Bounds will Come Considerable nearer to Weston Meeting house than It is to the Center of the Lands they ask for, and the Meeting house in Weston would then be left so unequally Situated that the town will be in great Danger of falling into the fire of Contentions about Removing it or building a new one and providing new ways That may be needfull therunto.

IV.—That the Petition aforesaid Takes from Weston near Twenty families (tho severall of them do not subscribe) & Some of the best livings in the town, & yet Leaving those they would withdraw to grapple with the heavy Charge of Maintaining all the poor in the Town & of Maintaining their Bridges & especially the great Cost Bridge over Charles River in Watertown, Which from the Reason of things they ought to be proportionably subject to Besides the whole support of the ministry (whose family we must own) Reasonably requires more maintainance than he hath ever received of Weston.

We further humbly observe that the Town of Weston Contains no other Bounds but the same that was formerly Granted to the Ancient Town of Watertown & by a Generall Clause In the Royal Charter P. 6 Confirmed to them Their heirs & Successors & for as much as Weston Descended from Watertown & hold by the Same ancient Bounds to Concord Sudbury & Lexington &c we humbly hope to Enjoy & hold the Same Bounds by which we were set off a Township, without Diminution or alteration which we apprehend will also be agreable to the Law of this Province Made in the fourth year of the Reign of King William & Queen Mary entituled an act for Regulating of Townships. Among other things it is hereby Enacted that y<sup>e</sup> bounds of all Townships Shall be & Continue as heretofore Granted & Settled Respectively &c For the which reasons the Town of Weston Humbly pray that their Northern Neighbours the petitioners may not be set off from them but Remain with them to do Duty & Receive Priviledges as here to for.

And the Respondents as In duty Bound Shall Ever pray &c.

THE MIND AND THE STOMACH.

Dr. Nott, recently, in some remarks to the junior class at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., stated that many years ago, when the students went to take their meals together in the subterranean portico of the South College, he was one day in the midst of an interesting lecture when the breakfast-bell rang, and symptoms of uneasiness were very evident among the class. Stopping in his lecture, he remarked, that "all who thought more of eating than of knowledge might leave." All left with the exception of two; one of them was the late Dr. Cuyler of Philadelphia, and the other the late John C. Spencer.—[20 Oct., 1855.

LETTER FROM S. SEVERANCE, 1775.

Newburyport, June 28, 1856.

DEAR SIR,—If the following scrap of biographical history and letter you should deem worthy of insertion in your Register, they are at your disposal.

Yours, respectfully,

E. GEORGE ADAMS.

Samuel Severance, the writer of the following letter, was a native of Kingston, N. H. He enlisted in the Revolutionary army, and served about three months. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and brought home a small stone, which is now in the possession of my wife's family, as a memorial of that eventful day. The letter is addressed from Medford to his wife at Kingston. Her maiden name was Hannah Winslow. I have retained the spelling, &c., of the letter, and as a relic of those days that tried men's souls, I thought it would be interesting to your many readers. I will relate a little incident to illustrate the social life and the privation of those times. When the postman came round to convey letters from the inhabitants of Kingston, as well as any little necessities from their friends, to the soldiers in the service, Mrs. Severance sent to her husband some green beans, with a piece of pork to cook with them, and some Indian meal to make him a pudding, while his little daughter, six years old, picked him a pint of berries to put in it; which he gratefully received, while the soldiers stood looking on with tears in their eyes, wishing they had a wife or children to send them a like present. Mr. Severance was taken sick with the camp disease, and was forced to return home. This little daughter's name was Hannah, and married Henry Adams of Newbury. When Mr. Severance returned to his home, he was so haggard, and pale, and changed, that this daughter, in her fright at the singular looks of a stranger, as she deemed him, fled, and hid herself behind the door. Henry Adams had a daughter Hannah who married Ebenezer Plumer of Newburyport, whose only child, Sarah Cobb Plumer, is my wife. I would state that though the spelling of the following letter is poor, the penmanship is very creditable.

E. GEORGE ADAMS.

THE LETTER.

I hope that you are all well, and the rest of my friends, to my wife; what money I send home to you, you may take care of it. if you have aney prosp<sup>er</sup> of corn, I would have that old cow have a peas on her horns, so I have noe more at the preasent, so I remain your Loving husband til death part.

THE ELIOT BUREAU.

To S. G. DRAKE, Esq.

Dear Sir:—In my communication, addressed to you Sept. 1st, 1855, and published in the October number of the Genealogical Register, together with a drawing of the article of furniture in my possession, by James O'Bryan, which I then called the "Eliot Bureau," I gave a history of the manner in which it came into my possession, its condition at the time, and the alterations I had made upon it, so that its genuineness, in future time, might not be thrown into doubt. I also gave several items of testimony which seemed to establish the fact that the article was once the property of the revered Eliot, the Apostle to the Indians.

Since that time, I have received letters from several gentlemen who had read my former communication on the subject, and I send you some of these letters, together with extracts from others, relating to this question, so that, in view of all the evidence in the case, the public may come to a more satisfactory conclusion respecting its identity than they otherwise could.

The first extract I shall give you will be one contained in a letter from my old and respected friend, Gov. Levi Lincoln, whose opinion and judgment I learned to appreciate and respect most highly, during a long period of service in a public office under him. In a letter of Dec. 8th, 1855, he says:—

"In reference to the 'Cabinet,' you have shown yourself a literary artificer of great excellence; out of the rough and neglected materials, you have constructed two beautiful articles—one physical, the other intellectual. In both respects I think you have well made out 'the case,' and upon the evidence, I pronounce it the veritable 'Eliot Cabinet.' You must richly prize the article for its intrinsic and associate value."

HON. ROBERT C. WINTHROP replied as follows:—

"I thank you for a copy of your interesting account of the Eliot Bureau. I heartily wish it were in my power to add any thing to the strength of the testimony by which you trace up this relic of the olden time to the venerated Apostle to the Indians. But you have made a strong case of presumption, and I can hardly doubt that 'I. E.' designated John Eliot."

Mr. Winthrop intimates a doubt as to the significance of the letter "A." He says:—

"Whether the 'A' stood for Anno, or for Anna, the name of Eliot's wife, you do not intimate. The wife's name, as you doubtless know, was Hannah Mumford; but it is entered on the Roxbury records at least once as 'Ana.' Our fathers were rather fanciful in their mode of combining the initials of husband and wife upon silver plate. I am not so familiar with marks upon furniture."

I will remark, in passing, that Mr. Winthrop, who doubtless gave the subject very careful consideration, and whose eminent fitness to express an authoritative opinion upon it is beyond question, scarcely doubts that the letters "I. E." designated John Eliot. As to his intimation that the letter "A" may have been the initial of his wife's name, because the initials of both husband and wife were often placed upon articles of plate, it may be said—first, the fact that the name of Eliot's wife was Hannah, is quite opposed to the idea of the use of the letter A to represent her name; for, although it may have been found on the Roxbury records "at least once" as Ana, it is quite unlikely that A would be used in the place of H upon this article of furniture, if the purpose was to designate her name. In the next place, this intimation does not apply to the Bureau, because the letters I and E are eighteen inches apart, upon the same horizontal line, and the letter A is nearly eighteen inches below them both. The figures 1681 are eight inches below the last letter, which clearly indicates that each had a distinct meaning, independent of its relation to the others.

Rev. Dr. LOWELL has communicated to me his opinion also, which is the more valuable by reason of his having made the sufferings and character of Eliot the subject of his distinct consideration, using the following language in reference to him, in a sermon preached at the dedication of a church in Natick, in 1828:—

"How interesting are the associations which are connected with this place, and this occasion! Nearly two centuries ago, this spot was first consecrated by the rites of religion. It was then that the apostolic Eliot imparted to the rude, untutored children of the forest, the light of Divine truth, and the wilderness echoed the voice of Christian prayer, and the songs of Christian praise. We revert with admiration to the wearisome pilgrimages, and the toilsome and perilous, though patient and persevering labors of this holy man. Imagination delights to go back through the long tract of time, and see him travelling on foot, with his staff and his Bible; or surrounded by his Indian children, with no altar but the trunk of the forest tree, and no canopy but the vault of heaven, yet cheered by the consciousness of devotion to the best of causes, and by the hopes of success. We honor thy memory, devoted servant of the Lord Jesus! Though no fruits of thy labor remain, thou hast erected a monument to thy praise in the hearts of the pious, in all times, who shall hear the story of thy toils and thy sufferings, and hast secured to thyself a portion with those who, 'having turned many to righteousness, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and as the stars, forever and ever.'"

In his letter to me he says:—

"I cannot doubt that I have, from time to time, acknowledged your kindness in sending me your interesting and valuable communications respecting your honorable and honored family, and the precious Eliot Antique, of which you are the favored possessor. You make out a strong case."

The next letter from which I shall extract will be that of the diligent antiquarian, J. WINGATE THORNTON, Esq. of Boston, a grandson of Judge Gookin, and connected by marriage with the Eliot family. He says:—

"I notice that on page 331, you make Capt. John Smith's hero, Daniel Gookin of Virginia, 1621, identical with the Major General of Massachusetts, but the latter was the son of the former."

As I have reason to think Mr. Thornton is correct, I am happy to state his remark here. As to the "Bureau," he says:—

"I rejoice that this memento of that Christian hero and apostle—ELIOT—is in the possession of one who can so well appreciate his greatness, and rightly value what is so blended with his memory, and I wish that every successive owner may preserve it with like sacred regard."

J. J. CLARKE, Esq., late Mayor of Roxbury, says:—

"You seem to make it almost certain that this article of furniture once belonged to the Apostle Eliot. It is sufficiently well established to awaken, and keep alive, all the feelings which are inseparable from the contemplation of his many virtues; and that alone is enough to render it of great value."

"Cambridge, Nov. 30th, 1855.

"My Dear Sir,—Please to accept my thanks for your kind attention in sending me your interesting account of the Eliot Bureau. Such a case scarcely admits of absolute demonstration, but it appears to me that the facts, as you have brought them together, give the highest degree of probability to the conclusion at which you have arrived. At any rate, you may fairly claim this curious specimen of antiquity to have belonged to the Apostle Eliot, till some person, more learned and ingenious than is likely to be found, shall prove the contrary.

"I am, dear sir, with great regard, very truly yours,
 "Gen'l Sumner."JARED SPARKS.

The next letter I give is that of Hon. FRANKLIN DEXTER of Boston:—

"I have received the copy you were kind enough to send me of your description of the Eliot Bureau. You are certainly very fortunate in possessing such a precious relic of antiquity; and I think no one can deny, that you fairly trace it, by presumption, to John Eliot, or at least to his son John,—and if to the son, then probably through him to the father, as it appears to have been of foreign workmanship, and therefore brought out by the venerable Apostle from England."

To the suggestion that the ownership of the Cabinet is traced through the son to the father, the chronological order of events in the history of the family is opposed, since the son died first, in 1668. This renders it probable that it came into the possession of the widow of John Eliot, Jr. subsequently, she being a daughter of Gen. Gookin.

As the last of the corroborative testimony, from the opinions of gentlemen eminently qualified to judge correctly upon the subject, I give an extract from a letter of JOHN CODMAN, Esq. of Boston:—

"I have received, and read with much pleasure, your pamphlet on the subject of the Eliot Bureau. It is a matter of which I have no knowledge; but I think, to say the least, that you have made out a very fair case, and the presumption that you have a valuable relic of the Indian Apostle is very strong.

"That you have drawn out the very beautiful verses, at the close, I think a matter on which you may congratulate yourself."

* By Mrs. Susan H. Todd, daughter of the late Aaron Hill, Esq. of Cambridge, and grand-daughter of Edmund Quincy. See Genealogical Register, Oct. 1855, page 333.

"I hope and think probable that you may meet with evidence which would establish your theory, as to the history of this Cabinet, even in a court of law."

Thus, in addition to the evidence which I have before adduced to support the opinion that the Cabinet belonged to Mr. Eliot, I have given the views of several eminent gentlemen, as above. But lest, upon investigation, it should be said by any one that it came from a man by the name of Scammon, in N. H., and not from the Gookin family, I am happy to be able to add direct testimony upon that point.

Mrs. HARRIET GOOKIN STORER, an elderly lady, now visiting at Mr. Steele's, her son-in-law, at Jamaica Plain, a daughter of Judge Daniel Gookin, says, in reference to the Eliot Bureau:—

"I very well recollect that when I was quite young, my father had an old piece of furniture, like the one I have seen at General Sumner's, besides many other articles of antique furniture, brought from England. I distinctly recollect that a Mr. Scammon, who worked for my father, and who lived at Stratham, which is doubtless the place where Dr. Swett obtained the Bureau, asked my mother to let him have it. She told him he might, and he took it away; but whether it was given to him, or he paid for it, I do not know. It was probably given to him, as my mother wanted to get rid of some of the old furniture which was in the way. I have no doubt that the Bureau or Cabinet which General Sumner has, is the identical piece of furniture that Mr. Scammon had of my mother, and that it came to my father's family from John Eliot, though I have no recollection of ever having heard any one say where it came from. There never was any other person connected with my father's family, or those of his ancestors, whose initials were I. E., except John Eliot."

This testimony of Mrs. Storer is strongly corroborative, and indeed seems to place the identity of the "Eliot Bureau" in my possession, and the article sold or given to Mr. Scammon, beyond a doubt, and at the same time confirms the statement of Dr. Swett, which was published in my former communication; for, although he was told by the people of whom he obtained it, "that the parents of one of them had owned it fifty years," he says also they were "very poor, and ignorant in proportion," and they were therefore not likely to be very accurate as to the date of the ownership. Mrs. Storer thinks it might have been in their possession forty years; and that period would carry the ownership back to the time when her mother parted with it. Mr. Scammon was not a relative of the Gookin family, as stated by Dr. Swett, he having been misinformed in that particular probably. Mrs. Storer states that Mr. Scammon lived in her father's family some time, and thus the idea may have arisen in Dr. Swett's mind that he was a relative of the family, or some of Scammon's descendants might have so understood it.

Having thus established, in my own opinion, the identity of the Cabinet as John Eliot's, the only article of furniture remaining that ever belonged to him, I have perhaps rendered it worthy of the acceptance of Harvard University or the Massachusetts Historical Society, to one of which I intend to devise it.

Respectfully, your ob't serv't,

WM. H. SUMNER.

NEWARK, ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

[From the Newark Daily Advertiser. Communicated by S. H. CONGAR, Esq.]

There are those, Mr. Editor, who doubt the correctness of your statement in introducing to your readers the article from Putnam's Magazine for June, that "the College was on what is now Washington Park."

We believe S. L. was "Samuel Livormore, A. M. LL. D., Col. Dart. 1792, in Cong. Amer. Deleg., Reip. Neo. Hant, Cur. Sup. Jurid. Prin., et Gub. Cong. Rcrumpub. Foed. Sen. et Repr." of the Catalogue of Nassau Hall, and a clever fellow of course. William Camp, at whose house S. L. boarded in 1752, was a great grand-son of that Wm. Camp, of Milford, who was married to Mary Smith, of New Haven, in 1661, by Deputy Governor Gilbert—the magistrate, not the minister, being in the opinion of that peculiar people the proper person to perform that ceremony. They came to Newark. Their son Samuel succeeded in the occupation of the old home lot. Nathaniel, one of the sons of Samuel, was the father of William, John, and Nathaniel. William seems to have been a house-keeper, willing to make a trifle by keeping boarders, at 7 sh. per week, like others who it is said enlarged their dwellings to accommodate the Collegians. He may have lived then in the ancestral mansion, but, where is the evidence? In 1761, Camp's Dock, (the Stone Dock subsequently) was one of the improvements on the Passaic, and seems to have had its name from him as its constructor, or owner, he living in the vicinity. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1762, we find him selling at the following prices:—1-4 lb. pepper, 6d—1-2 lb. tea 5 sh.—12 lb. nails, 10 sh.—208 feet pine boards, 18 sh. 8d. In February, 1763, he purchased 248 lbs. Beef at 4 pence half-penny, York money. Clams, those excellent bivalves, were then 10d per 100—Salt Pork 6d per lb. Pigeons were a shilling the dozen, the gizzards included for medical purposes, and Spirits to wash down the substantial, 1 sh. per quart. Of his doings in 1766, we have a notice, with an official seal attached, as follows:

PORT PERTH AMBOY.

Know ye that William Camp hath entered on board the Shallop Lovely Lass, Samuel Hays Master, Bound on a Cod Fishing voyage to the Eastward, Two Barrils of Beef, Six Barrils of Pork, One Ton of Bread, and Seven Barrils of flour for the Use of Seamen, Mariners and fishermen belonging to said Sloop. Dated at the Custom House, Perth Amboy, ye 12th May, 1766. JOHN BARBERIE, Coll'r.

After an absence of five months, the Sloop was permitted to return as follows:

Permit Samuel Hays to load the Sloop Lovely Lass, for New York, with Pick'd Fish. Dated at the Custom House, Canso, this 11th Day of Oct., 1766. JON. BINNEY, Coll'r.

To the Waiters.

Her Master, afterward Maj. Samuel Haycs, alias "Bark Knife," so called from the resemblance of his sword to that instrument, was associated with Joseph Hedden, Esq., and Thomas Canfield, (Hedden's brother-in-law,) as Commissioners for the sale of forfeited estates during the war. All of them were particularly disliked by "the Loyalists," and all were surprised, and taken to New York. William Camp was also captured, in Nov. 1776, and died in New York, Jan. 3, 1777. aged 47.

Mr. Sol. Davis was doubtless thankful for the sixpence he received for bringing S. L.'s gown "from New York." Sixpences were not plenty as blackberries, in those days. Solomon Davis, four years after, was credited 4 sh. 6d. for his son Comfort Davis's driving plough six days. Comfort, however, probably found something comfortable on his employer's table, in addition to his ninepence per day. In 1754 "the Society of Newark Mountain" was about building "in the General after the model of the Meeting House in Newark." Justice Harrison, Deacon Freeman, Sam. Cundit, Stephen Dod, Joseph Harrison, and David Williams, had 3sh. 6d. per day for "taking down the Sealing of the Old Meeting House."—Deacon Freeman, Justice Harrison, William Crane, Thomas Williams, Samuel Cundit, Jun., Isaac Cundit, John Cundit, Stephen Dod, David Williams, Capt. Williams, and Isaac Williams, "laid sleepers," in the New Meeting House, at the same rate per day. The accounts also shew that "a quart of rum and a quarter of sugar" was worth 1 sh. 3d., or equal to one-third of a day's work, or S. L.'s board for one day.

S. L. also paid Dr. Turner 5 sh. for 5 days' board, the washing of 5 shirts, and "bringing up my chest." Dr. William Turner, besides making these apparently reasonable charges, we know wrote a fair legible hand, which is more than some physicians and lawyers were ever guilty of. He died Feb. 18, 1754, aged 42. His first wife, Mary, March 3, 1737–8, aged 25. His second, Rachel, in Sept. 1741, aged 16, according to the transcriber of the lines from her memorial—

"God dealeth just, none may complain, Tho' Turner is left alone again."

His third wife was Mehetable, the widow of Benjamin Campfield. His step-son was a Jabez Campfield. A grandson, William, son of Daniel and Sarah Turner, died in 1775. Laid near his grand-parents, they inscribed on his memorial,

"The Sweet Remains of Billie here may lay, Until ye Resurrection morn in peace."

In 1741, when Dr. Turner paid 38 sh. and 6d. for "the feed of the burying ground," he did not foresee that in a century after his decease, his professional brethren, perchance patrons of resurrectionists and skilful to cure, or kill, secundum artem, would lay the foundations of a theatre for their experiments amidst his crumbling bones, and, unlike Hamlet, never ask—Why may not that be the skull of a doctor?—if permitted to rob Turner's grave. There may be "peace" in the new well-protected cemeteries, where the sons hope to lie 'neath towering marble, but the fathers are neglected and forgotten.

S. L. paid E. Crane (Elijah or Elihu) for a "barrel of cyder" 14 sh., and I. Shippen, 40 sh., York, "towards the bottles." In I. Shippen we recognize the student who gives an account of President Burr's three days' courtship, and his marriage to a young lady, "rather too young, being only about twenty-one"—the President being then 36. (Vide Stearns, p. 192.) The writer for Putnam says, Jersey men "may read with pride the evidence of the antiquity of a branch of industry that now reflects honor upon his State from all parts of the country," and fills many a champagne bottle, he might have added. Of its antiquity it may be said, that in the inventory of the estate of Matthew Campfield, of Newark, in 1673, we find "syder"—and Deputy Governor Rudyard says, in 1683, "at a town called Newark, 7 or 8 miles hence, is made great quantities of Syder, exceeding any we can have from New England, or Rhod Island, or Long Island. I hope to mke 20 or 30 Barrels out of our orchard next year, as they have done who had it before me; for that, it must be as Providence orders."

But where was the building in which S. L. was instructed by the President and Tutors of the College in Newark? Was it upon "the upper Common," now Washington Park? Some of those who witnessed the burning of the Academy, on that night memorable in the revolutionary history of Newark, when Joseph Hedden was taken from his residence, now No. 125 Broad street, in an arctic winter, and driven but half-clothed to New York, when questioned, have replied, that no College ever stood there to their knowledge. On March 8, 1774, the Town voted "that a School House may be built upon any of the Common Land in Newark, and the particular place shall be where a major part of the Subscribers in value shall appoint." On March 14, 1775, the Town "Voted unanimously, that one acre and a half of land in the Town Common, at the North End of the Town, may be taken up for the use of the New Academy, lately erected on said Land."

The ancient fillibuster, Aaron Burr, was born very near where now Alderman B. hands out "the weed," and his neighbor M. the candies to young fillibusters, and others. There lived the President, and as he was never while the College was at Newark assisted by more than two tutors, that may have been the point to which the steps of S. L. were directed, whether boarding above or below. Commencement exercises may have been held in the church, then standing on "the town Lot." This appears to have been nearly finished in 1714, when it was voted that the old floor in the Meeting House, should "be made use of for the making a floor in the School House in the middle of the Town," and also, "that John Fford should have liberty to set a Mill below the old Mill, and that be should have a quarter of an acre of Land." It does not appear, however, that John Fford tarried long in Newark. He seems to have kept on his way from "Quonebog, up New London River," and died in Hunterdon, (now Morris county,) in 1721, the father of the Fords, of that county. These notices of contemplated improvements in our village, are gathered from lost Minutes of Town Meetings, recently recovered. Where is the document that will give facts concerning the building occupied by the collegians, from 1748 to 1756, if one existed, other than the County Court House, in which, it is said, the public academical exercises were generally performed?

Stephen Davis was one of those who, in 1667, associated to "endeavor the carrying on of spiritual concerns, as also civil and town affairs, according to God and godly government," on the banks of the Passaic. His home lot of six acres was bounded by Aaron Blitchly's and Samuel Plum's, the river and Broad street. It is written that in 1687, when John Brown, Jun., and Joseph Walters were appointed by the town to seal measures and weights, "it was agreed that Benjamin Baldwin's or Stephen Davis' half bushel shall be the standard which shall be thought most suitable, and all measures shall be sealed with an N, and all weights shall be tried with brass weights if they can be had, and if not, by Stephen Davis's weights, which have been sealed in New York. And on Feb. 14th next every one as has measures or weights shall bring them to the prison, that they may be tried and sealed, and for cutting and sealing every measure they are to have three pence in money, or four pence in other pay, and for weights as they can agree. Stephen Davis was a prominent public man for more than twenty years. His sons were John, Thomas, and Jonathan.

Of the score of Davises whose names appear in our directories, some may feel interested in the ancestral mansion, and the mysterious initials which appear on its walls, since their covering has been removed. It, like those of the Bruens, Cranes, Camps, and others, built early in the last century, is to give place to the more splendid residences or churches, of those who know little and care less about the men, who, in their day, erected schoolhouses and churches, but now, to the disgrace of this city, are denied decent sepulchres. Even these are coveted, that their site may be appropriated to purposes not contemplated by the grantors, or anticipated by the occupants.

Thomas Davis was born before the settlement of Newark, and died Jan. 26th, 1738-9, aged 78. Mary, his wife, died May 10th, 1732, aged 67. The initials of this married pair, according to the custom of those days, were graven upon the walls of their dwelling, and, after their death, their names and age were, upon the memorial placed to protect their bones from insult. The date, 1713, indicates that its foundations were laid before the Kitchells, Lindsleys, Cranes, Pruddens, and Canfields, the cotemporaries of Thomas Davis, had emigrated to the Western country, now Morris county, and while the red men were yet in the enjoyment of the rights reserved by them, in their bill of sale, fishing in the river, or hunting in the forests on its banks, Queen Anne being on the throne of England. The sons of Thomas Davis were Thomas, Jonathan, Stephen and James. His sons-in-law were John Vanderpool, the husband of Apphia, and Thomas Ball the husband of Sarah, who, it is said,

"Had Rachel's Beauty, Leah's fruitful Womb, Abigail's Wisdom, Lydia's faithful Heart,
Martha's just Trust, and Mary's better Part."

Those who now possess the houses and lands of the ancient inhabitants of Newark, may have a good title, but some of them seem yet to have to learn that they have not a right to make merchandise of their bones. Young America in sport mutilates the memorials of the founders of this city, unrebuked by men who hope for a part in the resurrection of the just, yet appear to prefer gain to godliness, calculate the value of their graves for building lots, and would gladly appropriate God's acre for a hospital yard and highway, while the public grounds, not allotted by the founders of the city for a sacred purpose, are carefully protected. Is it because those men desired to carry on civil and town affairs according to God and godly government, that these things are so, in this City of Churches?

REV. ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.—A paragraph has been going the rounds of the papers, and been copied into this, which states that the Rev. Alexander Campbell, of Bethany, in Brooke county, died in New Orleans on the 27th ult. This is a mistake. The reverend gentleman who died was another and a different person. Alexander Campbell, of Bethany, the distinguished theologian, is not only not dead, but we are glad to learn is enjoying excellent health.—Richmond Dispatch, 25 July, 1855.

BLOUNT OF TENNESSEE.

Clarksville, March 21, 1852.

Dear Sir—I received your letter making inquiry of the family of William Blount. I regret that I cannot give you as full a history of that family as I ought. My library has been open to my friends for twenty years, and Hayward's History of the State has been taken off, and other publications in relation to its early settlement, so that I have to rely in my statements mainly upon my recollection.

Jacob Blount was a member of the Provincial Assemblies called in 1775 and 1776, from Newbern, Craven County, and had four sons; and perhaps others, of whom I have not heard. William Blount, the eldest, was a member of the Assembly from Newbern in 1780—was sent to Congress in 1782–3; again to the Assembly in 1784–5, and again to Congress in 1786–7, and signed the Constitution of the United States. He was the Territorial Governor of Tennessee until the State was formed in 1796. He was then elected to the United States Senate, from which he was expelled in 1797 or '98, for an attempt to excite the Indians against the Spanish in Florida. I am unable to give you any of the particulars of the trial. Shortly after he left our State, and is said to have died in the Indian Nations, either in Georgia or Southern Alabama. (Died at Knoxville, 26 March, 1800, aged 56 years?) I knew two of his sons; William G. Blount, who was a member of Congress from Knoxville in 1827, shortly afterward removed to Paris, in the western district of Tennessee, and died without ever having been married. His other son was Richard G. Blount, who lived many years in this county; was exceedingly intemperate, spent his fortune and took his family off about twelve years ago to the Western District. In 1844 I last saw him at a little village called Yorke, where he was keeping a country school. He had some daughters also, one of whom was married to Gen. Gaines, and had several children. Two other brothers, John Gray Blount and Thomas Blount, continued in North Carolina, were said to be wealthy, large landholders in this State; and the latter was a member of Congress for six or eight years. The other brother, Willie Blount, came to Tennessee with William, and was his Secretary during the time he was Territorial Governor, and after removed to Montgomery County, Tennessee, where he married the daughter of Major Baker, a revolutionary officer, and was soon returned to the Legislature, and in the year 1809 was elected Governor of the State, and continued so until after the war of 1812; having served three successive terms, he retired with great popularity. In 1834 he was elected to the Convention that revised the Constitution of the State. He only had two daughters; one married Dr. Dabney, the other John B. Dortch. My wife's brother, both the girls and their husbands are dead; Dortch leaving two sons, Willie B. Dortch, now residing at Helena, Arkansas, the other near Port Royal, in this county. The oldest married the daughter of Gov. A. V. Brown, and the other married the daughter of Dr. Warfield, of Lexington. The Dabneys left daughters, all now dead; one leaving an infant. It is hardly probable that you could get any satisfactory information from any of the parties mentioned. Willie B. and John B. were infants at the death of their grandfather, Willie Blount, and of their father. Gov. Willie Blount died at the house of my brother, near this place, September 10, 1835, aged 68 years, whilst I was in Washington, leaving several large manuscript volumes in relation to the early history of the State, which my brother, not having leisure to examine, and not much taste for such things, handed them over to Dr. J. G. M. Ramsey, who resides at Mechlenhurgh, Knox County, in this State, and is now understood to be engaged in preparing a full history of the State. I would refer you to him as the best source, from which to get information in relation to Gov. William Blount, who resided in or near the town of Knoxville. I have no reliable information in relation to the conspiracy, but you will perceive that the odium attached to it never affected the popularity of his brother and secretary, nor of his son or other members of his family. I imagine his object was to get up a war between the Indians and Spaniards, which would enable the United States to buy Florida, or compel them to take it. Such I find to have been the impression left on the minds of the early settlers. I imagine if you can get access to the American State Papers, published some years ago by Gales & Seaton, Title, Indian Affairs, you would find an account of it. The documentary History now publishing by Blair & Rives, should have progressed far enough by this time, to give us the whole of the papers in the offices at Washington connected with the conspiracy.

I am respectfully,

Your friend and servant,

C. JOHNSON.

A REMARKABLE MAN.

A correspondent of the Kentucky Statesman, under date of November 26, 1855, gives the following sketch of an old citizen in Pulaski county, named Elijah Deny, who is perhaps the oldest man in Kentucky.

"He was 118 years of age on the 10th of September, and is as active as many men at forty. He works daily upon a farm, and throughout his whole life he has been an early riser. He informed the writer that he had never drank but one cup of coffee, and that was in the year 1848. He served seven years in the war of the Revolution, and was wounded at the siege of Charleston; he was also at the siege of Savannah, and at the battle of Eutaw Springs.

He was also present at the battles of Camden, King's Mountain, and Monk's Corner. He served under Col. Horry and Col. Mason, and was an eye witness of the sufferings and death of Col. Isaac Hayne, of South Carolina, an early victim of the revolution. He is sprightly and active, and would be taken at any time to be a man of middle age. He is a strict member of the Baptist church, and rides six miles to every meeting of his church. He has four sons and five daughters, all living, the eldest being now in his seventy-eighth, and the youngest in his fifty-first year. Such is a brief sketch of this aged soldier and republican, who is perhaps the only surviving soldier of Francis Marion, Sumpter and Horry."

["On the 21st of May, 1603, Gosnold having overshot the Vineyard Sound in the night, discovered an island which he named Martha's Vineyard. Not that since so called, but a small one, known as Nomansland, lying very near the southern extremity of the large island, since called Martha's Vineyard. Gosnold took the great island to be a part of the main land, but when it was found to be an island, the name conferred on its appendage, very naturally extended to it, and the name Martha's Vineyard has continued since the time of this discoverer.

"That the name Martha's Vineyard should be Martin's Vineyard, as some have surmised, is to be utterly rejected. The name was conferred by Gosnold himself, a year before the voyage of Pring. Why the name Martha was chosen is not known. It may have been the name of his own lady, or some other valued female acquaintance. Capt. Pring's christian name being Martin, it is easy to see how the surmise arose." Hist. & Antiquities Boston, p. 14. — Editor.]

REMARKABLE. — Died in Charleston, S. C., Mrs. Ann Gourlay, aged 99. Mrs. Gourlay has been a widow for half a century, and has outlived all her children and grandchildren, except one. In early life, at a hall in Maryland, her native state, she had danced with Gen. Washington, and perhaps was the last female in the United States who could claim this honor. All the acquaintance of not only her early days, but of maturer life, have long since been cut off by death; and she has been for many years a stranger in the land, not only of her fathers, but even of her children. — Paper of 1846.

INSCRIPTIONS FROM SALEM, CONNECTICUT.

Shelburne, Franklin Co., Mass., July 25th, A. 1857.

MR. DRAKE.—Dear Sir:—

Whilst I was in Salem, Conn., about a year ago, I saw a few grave-stones in a large field, near the village of Salem (formerly Pogwonn, a parish of Colchester,) which were much time-worn; and which I, with much difficulty, was able to transcribe correctly. The inscriptions were the following, viz:—

"Capt. Sam<sup>l</sup> Gilbert died August 5th, 1733, æ. 70 years. Mrs. Mary Gilbert wife of Capt. Sam<sup>l</sup> Gilbert died Sept. 30th, 1756 in ye 91st year of her age. Mr. John Gilbert died Nov. 22<sup>d</sup> 1755 in ye 63<sup>d</sup> year of his age."

It appears by "Hinman's Catalogue," &c., that Capt. Gilbert was married in Hartford, in 1686, to Mary Rogers, daughter of Sam<sup>l</sup> Rogers of New-London.

I think the name of Gilbert became extinct in Colchester, as it does not occur on the Town Records, excepting Capt. S. G—'s name. I have supposed the Hon. Sylvester Gilbert, of Hebron, might have been a grandson of Capt. Sam<sup>l</sup>, but do not know.

Yours, &c.,

CHARLES M. TAINTOR.

ANCIENT GRAVE YARD AT LEBANON, CONN.

[By ASHBEL WOODWARD of Franklin, Conn.]

Lebanon originally consisted of several distinct grants or proprieties, the most important of which were the *one mile** propriety and the five-mile purchase. The former was a grant from Owaneko, sachem of the Mohegans, to the Rev. James Fitch and John Mason, son of the famous Major John Mason, in 1695; and the latter was a purchase made of the same sachem shortly afterwards. Upon the one mile grant was a large cedar swamp, which, upon the principle of association, led Mr. Fitch to bestow the name of Lebanon† on the whole tract. The General Court gave the same name to the contemplated town in 1697. Lebanon was not incorporated till three years later. Having agreed upon a favorable location,‡ the early settlers next provided themselves with a meeting-house, and installed their first minister, Rev. Joseph Parsons, in November, 1700.

About the same period, probably a few years earlier, the first burial ground was laid out upon an eminence in the valley of the Susquetonscot, half a mile east of their place of worship. This has been the principal cemetery of the town, or of Lebanon proper, for quite a century and a half. For the last fifteen years comparatively few new graves have been opened; an area of some two or three acres having been almost entirely appropriated to the dead of former generations.

The most ancient of the monuments were usually made of granite or of purplish slate. The former, being variable in quality, and often unsuited to such purposes, has suffered most from disintegration. We notice that the granite of a dark shade had changed least. Some of this description, although among the most ancient in the ground, were in a most perfect state of preservation.

This inclosure presents a circular plain, of limited extent, in its centre, with a gentle declivity to the south, and then slopes somewhat abruptly on all its sides to the level of the valley below. The part near and just above the southern slope, was first improved by the early inhabitants as a place of sepulture for their dead. In this locality we find the grave of the Rev. James Fitch, who was born almost as early as the embarkation of the Puritans for New England, and who was here interred in 1702. By his first wife, who was the daughter of the Rev. Henry Whitefield of Guilford, he had sons James and Samuel; by his second, who was a daughter of Major John Mason, he had sons Daniel, John, Jeremiah, Jabez, Nathaniel, Joseph, and Eleazer. The three youngest of the sons are interred near the father,—all of whom have monuments with inscriptions. We only give that of the father, which narrates the principal events of his life. It is in Latin:—

In hoc Sepulchro depositæ Sunt Reliquiæ Viri vere Reverendi D. Jacobi Fitch; natus fuit apud Boking, in Comitatu Essexiæ, in Anglia, Anno

* The one mile grant and the five mile purchase of Owaneko constituted the most southerly and easterly part of the town, and that first settled; the Clark and Dewey purchase, and the Whiting purchase, the northwesterly part.

A short distance to the west may be found the grave of Lieut. Samuel Huntington, who was an original proprietor, and who was born in Norwich, in 1665. He was a son of Dea. Simon of Norwich, and a grandson of Simon the emigrant, ancestor of the very numerous family of the name of Huntington in this country.

His own epitaph, and that of his wife, follow:—

Near and a little to the south of the last, may be found the monument of Mr. Jonathan Metcalf, and that of his wife Hannah. They early emigrated from Dedham, Mass. His brief memoir was published in the Gen. Reg., vol. vii., page 168.

Here lies the body of Mr. Jonathan Metcalf

Low on the eastern slope is the grave of the venerable Duxbury minister, who, after serving about 40 years in his early field of labor, came here to end the evening of his days with his children. A sketch of the life of the Rev. John Robinson may be found in the Gen. Reg., vol. ix., page 339.

His monument of slatestone contains the following:—

With appropriate inscriptions, and at a cost of near $2000, a granite monument has recently been erected, in this cemetery, to the memory of the above, and to those of his descendants here interred.

We next notice the graves of two of the early graduates of Harvard,* who have rude monuments in the most ancient part of the ground.

Of the history of Isaac Bayley, H. C. 1701, we know nothing. Of Dr. Nathaniel Little, H. C. 1734, more is known. In 1740 he was a resident of Hartford, where he and wife Mabel had son Woodhridge born; in 1744, of Middletown, where he had daughter Theodosia born; and finally of Lebanon, where other children were born, and where he attained to an honorable position in his profession. From his monument we learn that the father and the once smiling infant unconsciously sleep on, side by side.

On his left hand lies the body of Faith, his daughter, who died Oct. 27, 1753, aged 8 months.

Among these venerable relics, and those not unknown to fame, we find those also of the young wife and young mother occupying common ground and reposing side by side. Here Mary, (Gardiner,) the wife of Dr. Ebenezer Gray,† and the mother of his three children, found an early grave. The husband was a son of Samuel and Susanna (Langdon) Gray, and was born in Boston Oct. 31, 1697. The brief story of the wife is, that she was born at Gardiner's Island, September, 1702, being of the lineage of the ancient proprietor of that domain; that she was married at the age of 18, and died at 23.

* The date of their respective deaths has never been published in the Harvard Triennial; certainly not in the edition of 1851, which is before us.

† Dr. Gray was the first clerk of the courts in Windham County after its organization in 1726.

Two well preserved stones contain the following inscriptions :—

In passing from the ludicrous to the sublime, we could not well do better than pause at the grave of the venerable Solomon Williams,* the veteran theologian of his time. He was a son of William Williams of Hatfield, and a grandson of Dea. Isaac, of Newton. He was ordained at Lebanon in 1722, three years after his graduation at H. C. He published many ordination and funeral sermons, the "Election Sermon" in 1741, and one for "Success in Arms" in 1759.

His character is elaborately given in his inscription upon a table of sandstone supported horizontally above his grave. That of his widow is also inscribed upon the same stone.

This stone covers the remains of that eminent Servant of God, the Rev<sup>d</sup> Solomon Williams, D. D. late Pastor at Lebanon. Adorned with uncommon gifts of nature, learning, & Grace, he shone bright as the Gentleman, Scholar, Christian & divine, conspicuous for wisdom, warm in devotion, bold in the cause of Christ, excelling as a preacher, most agreeable in conversation, clear & Judicious in counsel, an ardent lover of peace & the rights of mankind, firm in friendship, Singularly hospitable & in all relations exemplary; having faithfully serv'd the interest of Christ, of Religeon & Learning at his Masters call, he calmly fell asleep in Jesus Feb. 28th 1776 in the 76th year of his age & 54 of his ministry.

Them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

At the foot of the above we find the following inscription upon the marble head-stone at the grave of Dr. Thomas Williams. He was a son of the preceding.

Hic jacet

The immediate successor of the Rev. Dr. Williams was the Rev. Zebulon Ely. Their united ministry, including an interval of four or five years, covers a period of more than a century. The latter published a sermon on the death of the elder Gov. Trumbull, in 1785, and of the second Gov. Trumbull, in 1809; also the election sermon in 1804. His Memoirs were written by his son, Dr. E. S. Ely. His inscription reads thus:—

Rev. Zebulon Ely
Died Nov. 28, 1824, in the 66 year of his age and the 43 of his ministry.
He was born in Lyme; Grad. at Yale College; and on Nov. 13, 1782, ordained Pastor of the first church in Lebanon.

Although among the first who planted themselves here, and being also of the first generation that passed away, no allusion has yet been made to Capt. Joseph Trumble.* It has been thought more fitting that he should be noticed in connection with others, composing together a family group. He was a son of John<sup>3</sup>, of Westfield, and a grandson of John<sup>1</sup>, who was in Rowley, Mass., in 1643. He was born about the year 1679, and, at the age of 21 years, became a resident of Lebanon. He married a daughter of John Higley of Simsbury, and was the ancestor of a constellation of Revolutionary and later worthies, including among the number three Connecticut governors.

His plain inscription may be found upon his monument, just above the southern slope; also that of his widow.

Here lies the body of Capt. Joseph Trumble
one of the Fathers of ye town and just Friend to it, of a compassionate kind disposition who after a short illness departed this life in the hope of a better June 16. 1755 in the 77th year of his age

Here are deposited the remains of Mrs. Hannah Trumbull, late wife of Capt. Joseph Trumbull, Daughter of John Higley of Simsbury Esqur. who came from Frimley in ye County of Surrey by Mrs. Hannah Drake his first wife. She was born at Windsor 22<sup>d</sup> April 1683, Died at Lebanon 8th Nov. 1768, aged 85 years. 6 mo. & 15 days.

On the eastern slope is situated the Trumbull tomb, it being the only one in the cemetery. Concerning those here embosomed not much need be said. The celebrity of its tenants, including two governors, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and one commissary general, is world-wide. In addition to a few of the inscriptions found upon the pedestal standing upon the tomb, we wish to note a single incident connected with the Revolutionary position of the first Gov. Trumbull. We refer to the origin of the once New-England, but now national, soubriquet of "Brother Jonathan." It is understood to have come into use in this wise: Washington, whose resources were generally made equal to any emergency, was, at some critical periods, greatly perplexed for the want of troops, and that which was almost as necessary to insure success, the munitions of war in general. It was then, when his own great heart was almost ready to falter, that he unhesitatingly decided to fall back upon Gov. Trumbull,* who was always reliable; or, as he expressed it, "to consult Brother Jonathan." Hence the origin of a name which has, in the progress of our national existence, become almost as popular as that of "Yankee," and which have, in a sense, come to be convertible terms.

* This name was uniformly written Trumble till after 1755. There are now before the writer a number of autographs of the first Gov. Trumbull, some of which were of a date as early as 1740, and others as late as 1776. Those before 1755 were written Trumble; those later, Trumbull. The births of four out of five of Gov. Trumbull's children are recorded upon the town record Trumble; that of Col. John, born in 1756, is recorded Trumbull.

Sacred to the memory of Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., who, unaided by birth or powerful connections, but blessed with a noble and virtuous mind, arrived to the highest station in government. His patriotism and firmness during 50 years employment in public life, and particularly in the very important part he acted in the American Revolution, as Governor of Connecticut, the faithful page of History will record.

Full of years and honors, rich in benevolence, and firm in the faith and hopes of Christianity, he died Aug. 9th, 1785, Ætatis 75.

Sacred to the memory of Madam Faith Trumbull, the amiable lady of Gov. Trumbull, born at Duxbury, Mass., A. D. 1718. Happy and beloved in her connubial state, she lived a virtuous, charitable and Christian life at Lebanon in Connecticut, and died lamented by numerous friends, A. D. 1780, aged 62 years.

Sacred to the memory of Joseph Trumbull, eldest son of Gov. Trumbull, and first Commissary Genl. of the United States of America. A service to whose perpetual cares and fatigues he fell a sacrifice, A. D. 1778, Æt. 42.

To the memory of Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., late Governor of the State of Connecticut. He was born March 26th, 1740, and died Aug. 7th, 1809, aged 69 years. His remains were deposited with those of his father.

The following inscription is on a marble slab standing in front of the tomb:—

The remains of the Hono. William Williams† are deposited in this Tomb: born April 8th, 1731, died Aug. 2<sup>d</sup>, 1811, in the 81st year of his age, a man eminent for his virtues and piety,—for more than 50 years he was constantly employed in Public Life, and served in many of the most important offices in the gift of his fellow citizens. During the whole period of the Revolutionary war, he was a firm, steady, and ardent friend of his country, and in the darkest times risked his life and wealth in her defence. In 1776 and 1777 he was a member of the American Congress, and as such signed the Declaration of Independence.

We should be without excuse if, in our gleanings, we passed the grave of "Old Master Tisdale,"* the great classical teacher of the age, and to whose individual instruction so large a number of the distinguished men in our country owe their early training.

* We believe that Gov. Trumbull was the only colonial governor who espoused heartily the American cause.

† He was a son of Solomon Williams, D. D.

His inscription we copy:—

Reader,
as thou passest, drop a tear to the memory of the once eminent Academic Instructor, Nathan Tisdale, a lover of Science. He marked the road to useful knowledge. A friend to his country, he inspired the flame of Patriotism. Having devoted his whole life from the 18th year of his age, to the duties of his profession, which he followed with distinguished usefulness to Society, he died Jan'y 5th 1787, in the 56 year of his age.

We will close this sketch with a brief notice of a few individuals who participated in the Revolutionary struggle. More than five hundred men from this town alone were in the army at one time. It is quite evident that no inconsiderable aid was thus rendered to the patriot cause.

A short distance from the Trumbull tomb, on the west, may be found the monument of the veteran Col. James Clark, who commanded a company on Bunker's Hill, and who was present at the laying of the cornerstone of the Monument, just fifty years subsequent to the battle. The old soldier was buried with military honors. His very chaste and appropriate inscription here follows:—

To the memory of
who died on the 29th day of Dec. 1826 aged 96 years and 5 mos.
He was a Soldier of the Revolution, and dared to lead where any dared to follow. The Battles of Bunker's Hill, Harlem Heights and White Plains, witnessed his personal bravery, & his devotion to the cause of his Country.
He here in death rests from his labours,
For "there [is] no discharge in that war."

Near the same spot were interred the remains of Capt. Andrew Fitch, who also served as a lieutenant on Bunker's Hill, and who was shortly after promoted to the rank of captain, which command he held to the close of the war, in the vicinity of New York, at Fairfield, and elsewhere. He was a descendant of the Rev. James Fitch. We learn from his modest inscription that he died Aug. 22d. 1811, aged 63 years.

In the central part of this ground may also be found a large sandstone cenotaph, with the inscription which follows:—

* He m. the widow of Capt. John Porter, and hence there devolved upon him the paternal training of her four children, besides the classical instruction of her youngest son, John Porter 2d, a graduate of Y. C. 1776, secretary of Gov. Trumbull, transcriber of Gov. Winthrop's Hist. of N. E., of the edition of 1790, and finally Comptroller of Connecticut from 1794 to the time of his death, in 1806.

† Of these a few only will be mentioned, viz.: The 2d Gov. Trumbull, Col. Trumbull the painter, Rev. Wm. Robinson of Southington, Rev. John Robinson, Rev. Dr. Lyman of Hatfield, Rev. Wm. Lyman of Glastenbury, Rev. Daniel Huntington of Hadley, Hon. Jeremiah Mason, and Warren Dutton, Esq., both late of Boston, &c.

This monument is erected in Memory of Capt. Walter Hyde who was of approved integrity, a useful member of Society, a kind husband, an affectionate parent, a lover of his country & a firm Supporter of the rights of Mankind. Exempt from Military duty by former command, he nobly stepped forth, raised and took the command of an Independent Company & with them proceeded to the neighbourhood of N. York A. D. 1776 in defence of the invaded rights of the United American States when he died at Greenwich on the 18th day of Sept. 1776 aged 41 years & was there buried & his grave undistinguishable from those of many other strangers. His death was greatly lamented by all to whom he was known.

We will add the names of a few of those who are known to have died in, or while connected with, the army. Perhaps some suffered martyrdom in the old Jersey Prison-ship. None were permitted to find a grave with their friends at home.

MR. JOSEPH BOYSE.

There is in the library of the Editor of the Register, a copy of "The Works of the Reverend and Learned Mr. Joseph Boyse, of Dublin. Being a complete Collection of all the Discourses, Sermons, and other Tracts, which have been already published. To which are added, several other Sermons; a Treatise of Justification; and, a Paraphrase on those Passages in the New Testament, which chiefly relate to that Doctrine."

This work is a very large folio, (two volumes bound in one,) and was printed in London, "for John Gray, at the Cross Keys in the Poultry. M.DCC.XXVIII." Several circumstances connected with this volume entitle it, in the opinion of the Editor, to a notice in the Register. Those circumstances are briefly these:—It was once the property of our great New England Antiquary, the Rev. Thomas Prince, as appears from his name and date of possession, being written with his own hand, upon the back of the title-page, thus,—"Thomas Prince. Boston. June 10. 1729." On the leaf pasted upon the cover facing the title-page, the same possessor wrote the following record:—

The Rev. and learned author of this excellent Collection, Mr. Joseph Boyse, was born at Leeds in Yorkshire, Jan. 14th, 1659–60.

His father was Mathew Boyse, a man of known piety, integrity and usefulness in his station, tho' exercised wth considerable worldly losses: was an elder of the church of Rowley in New England, and one of their Deputies at Boston (during his abode there for about 18 years) and had at his coming thence an honourable testimonial of his being very servicable, as well as exemplary in his behaviour.

He was in his early years under the care and tuition of a pious mother, to whom he bares this honourable testimony—"That few of her rank were superior to her in divine knowledge and serious Godliness, joined with great humility and modesty, and that she was every way a pattern of all the amiable virtues that are the truest ornament to her sex."

In 1675 he was put under the care of the Rev. Mr. Frankland who kept a private academy near Kendal, in Westmorland, with a view to his being trained up for the work of the ministry. Having continued 3 years with Mr. Frankland, he returned to his father's house at Leeds, where after a short stay he was sent to London to pursue his studies under the direction of that excellent divine Mr. Edward Veal, then teacher of a private academy at Stepney.

After he had studied 2 years with Mr. Veal and performed such preparatory exercises in private as were prescribed him by his tutor, he began to preach publicly about the year 1680, and was for some time assistant to the Rev. Mr. Edmond Trench, a worthy minister in Kent, of whose exemplary life and virtues he published an account in 1693.

In 1681 he was invited to be household chaplain to the late Countess of Donegall then at London, in whose family he past his time very agreeably about 3 quarters of a year.

The Countess breaking up house the following spring, he spent the next summer at Amsterdam, where he had an invitation to preach at the Brownist church, during the necessary absence of their minister in England, for about half a year.

After his return from Amsterdam he continued to preach occasionally at Leeds and some other places in that neighborhood till about midsummer, 1683; when upon the death of Mr. Timothy Haliday, a fellow student and intimate friend of his he had been for some time assistant to Dr. Williams, then pastor of this congregation (in Dublin) he received an invitation hence to succeed him in that station. Having taken the advice of friends, and sought direction from God, he came over hither in the latter end of the year 83, and was, after some trial, upon the call of this congregation solemnly ordained joint pastor with the Rev. Mr. Williams, and upon his removal for England became the sole pastor of it.

From thence to the time of his death (which was about the 20th of November, 1728, at Dublin,) he continued in the relation of a stated pastor to this church; and all that while discharged the duties of a faithful laborer and watchman, with so much diligence, reputation and success, as rendered him justly dear and valuable unto all that had the pleasure and advantage of attending his ministry.

The passages above, except those in italic type, I took out of Mr. Choppin's Funeral Sermon upon Mr. Boyse, wherein he gives him an extraordinary character, for piety, learning, charity, ministerial gifts and a large soul.

Dr. Increase Mather, in his Order of the Gospel, printed in 1700, page 50, has these words:—"Mr. Boyse, a worthy minister of the Presbyterian Judgement in Dublin, whom I have the rather taken notice of, because he was born in New England at Rowley, in which church his father, a man of eminent piety, was an officer."

If Dr. Mather was not mistaken as to the birth place of Mr. Boyse, then that very eminent Puritan divine was born in New England. But we are inclined to the opinion that Mr. Mather was mistaken, from the following reasons. His father, Mr. Matthew Boyes, was made a freeman of Massachusetts in 1639. That year was doubtless about the period of his arrival here. The father remained in the country "about 18 years." Hence he left about 1657; and as his son Joseph, the subject of this notice, was born in 1660, the probability is against his being born in New England. Mr. Boyse, the father, probably had children born here, and this fact being known to Mr. Mather, he took it for granted that Joseph was among the number. A letter from Matthew Boyes, Jr., dated London, "29. 3. 68," may be seen in our VIIth volume, p. 274. The father of Matthew, Jr. was then living in Yorkshire.

Mr. Boyse was a particular friend of the learned Mr. Ralph Thoresby, the historian of Leeds, and is frequently mentioned by him in his Diary, and in his Correspondence are many letters from him. In the former, date "July 4, Die Dom. 1680," is this entry. "Went to Newington-Green to hear Mr. Joseph Boyse preach, which I rejoiced in as the first fruits of our generation." To this passage, the Editor, the Rev. Joseph Hunter, F. S. A., has the following note:—"Boyse and Thoresby were born at Leeds the same year. He was educated for the ministry among the Nonconformists, in the academy which was conducted by Richard Frankland, one of the Silenced ministers. He was afterwards of Dublin, minister of a dissenting congregation there, and the author of many controversial works, a catalogue of which may be seen in the 'Biographia,' Vol. 1, p. 48.

Under date 1699, Thoresby writes—"The learned Mr. Boyse, being come from Dublin, to his native place, lodged at my house till his marriage with Mrs. Rachel Ibbetson. The Sermon he preached relating to the sufferings of the French Protestants was very moving, there being once about 800 churches, in which the true worship of God was constantly celebrated, which are now demolished, 1,500 pastors banished, their flocks scattered, and many thousand families forced into exile, &c."

After Mr. Boyse had been settled in Ireland about twelve years, and had become quite famous by his writings, Thoresby importuned him for some account of his life. Among other brief items in his answer he says, "I am not very certain whether I was born January 59-60 or 60-61, though I think it was the latter, and could wish I knew the certainty, which I suppose might be learnt from the New Church Register in Leeds." Hence, that he was born in Leeds, he himself doubtless believed.

Notwithstanding Mr. Thoresby's great intimacy with the family of Boyse, and the celebrity of his special friend, he does not appear to have noticed either in his elaborate history of Leeds, where so much space is devoted to genealogies.

The family of Boyse, according to Sir William Pole, bore the name De Bosco, and occupied lands in Devonshire in the time of Henry the Second. The manor of Holberton had then been long in the family. The first mentioned is Ralph De Bosco, to whom successively succeeded William, William 2d, Sir William De Bosco, Kt. 3d, William 4, William 6, and John Boys, the last of the family in that place. There was another family at a place called Boyshele, in the parish of Modbury, as early as the 1st of Edward the Second. Thomas Boys of that place granted Hele to Thomas Boys of Woode, (perhaps his son.) To him succeeded Thomas, Thomas, John, Thomas, John, &c. Some of these were probably the ancestors of the Yorkshire Boyeses, among whom was the learned Dr. John Bois, born Jan. 3d, 1560, who had a considerable hand in the present translation of the Bible.—See Watson's Hist. of Halifax, 461; Lane Fam. Papers, Reg., Vol. XI., INDEX.

SAM'L G. DRAKE, ESQ.:

Dear Sir:—At the suggestion of my friend Chas. Hoadley, Esq., State Librarian, I write to advise you that there is in the library of this Society a small volume of abstracts of sermons, in the MS. of Rev. Samuel Parris of Salem Village; a fact of which you may possibly like to take some notice in the Genealogical Register.

The volume contains series of sermons from Sept. 9, 1689, to May 6, 1694; and includes various curious discourses, one, with running title, "Christ knows how many Devils there are in his Churches, and who they are;" date "27. Mar. 169½ Sacrament day; and memo. at head, "Occasioned by dreadfull witchcraft broke out here a few weeks past, and one member of this church, and another of Salem upon publick examination by civil authority vehemently suspected for Shee-Witches, and upon it committed." Text, "Have not I chosen you twelve; and one of you is a Devil."

Another has this heading:—"Conc*. 1<sup>a</sup> } 11. Sept. 1692. After y<sup>e</sup> condemnation of 6 Witches at a Court at Salem, one of the Witches viz: Martha Kory in full communion with our Church."

I understood Mr. Hoadley to say that the records of Salem Village were now in course of publication in the Register, and that the above facts would probably furnish a note at some point of the publication.

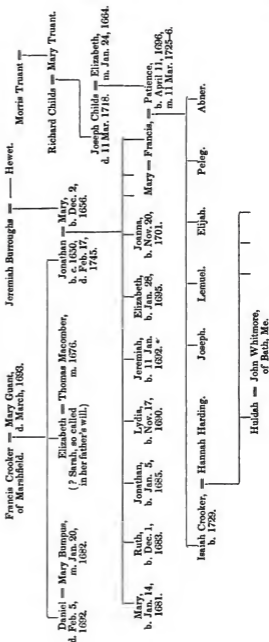

Very respectfully,

Your Ob't Serv't,

FRED. B. PERKINS, Librarian C. H. S.

CROOKER FAMILY.

ROBERT AUCHMUTY, SENIOR.

[From the Norfolk County Journal.]

He, whose name stands at the head of this article, resided with his family in Roxbury for several years during the first half of the last century. His homestead has been carved into sites for many dwelling houses, few of the inmates of which are aware, perhaps, that such a person ever existed. Probably no other family in New England bore the same family name, and it has not been known here since the Revolution.

This gentleman of the old school was an eminent lawyer, and practiced in his profession in Boston early in the last century. He was contemporary with Gov. William Shirley, and probably they were personal friends, both before and after the elevation of the latter to the office of Governor.

On the 20th of August, 1733, he purchased the Scarborough estate in Roxbury, consisting of fourteen acres of land with a house thereon, situated on the road leading to Braintree, now Warren Street. The houses of worship of the Baptist and Methodist Societies both stand upon the estate. The price paid was three hundred pounds. His family, when he came to Roxbury, consisted of himself and wife, three sons and two daughters. His daughter Henrietta was the wife of John Overing, Esq., an advocate, and his daughter Isabella afterwards became the wife of Judge Pratt, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York, and a graduate of Harvard University of the class of 1737. Mr. Knapp, in his sketch of the life of Judge Pratt, in his Biographical Sketches, says, "Pratt's highest ambition was gratified in his matrimonial connection, for he married a most accomplished woman, one who turned from the fashionable and elegant suitors around her, to whom by birth, fortune and female charms she had a full claim, to lavish her affections on him, enamored with his virtues and his intellect."

His son Samuel was a graduate of Harvard of the class of 1742. He settled in New York and was a rector of the English Church. Mention has been made of Robert in the Journal, on a former occasion.

Mr. Auchmuty, in the month of September following his settlement in Roxbury, was appointed Judge of the Admiralty Court for New England. There is but a solitary record book of the proceedings in that Court prior to the Revolution, now known to be in existence. The original papers are gone. This last relic of the King's Admiralty Court is mutilated, but it shows some curious things notwithstanding. It appears that Judge Auchmuty held a Court in Boston in April, 1740, and his judgments are entered from time to time until about the year 1742, when George Craddock appears to officiate as deputy Judge. (The daughter of this gentleman became the wife of Robert Auchmuty, Junior.) The record contains Gov. Shirley's sailing orders for the expedition to Louisburg, dated in 1744, the line of battle for the ships, and their names and orders for the impressment of seamen. History shows that this Louisburg expedition was a pet project with Gov. Shirley, and there cannot be much doubt that Judge Auchmuty took a lively interest in its prosecution, and rejoiced at its success.

In Smollett's History of England, (which, as it was written soon after this expedition, is in the following statement perhaps entitled to more than its usual credit,) it is stated that the most important achievement by the English (in 1745) was the conquest of Louisburg on the Isle of Cape Breton in North America. * * * "The plan of this conquest was originally laid by Mr. Auchmuty, Judge Advocate of the Court of Admiralty in New England; he demonstrated that the reduction of Cape Breton would put the English in sole possession of the fishery of North America," * * * "employ many thousand families that were unserviceable to the public, increase the shipping and mariners, extend navigation, cut off communication between France and Canada by the River St. Lawrence; so that Quebec would fall of course into the hands of the English."

The records in Suffolk show that Shirley and Auchmuty had pecuniary transactions about these times. The latter went to England about the year 1741, and was there for several years, and March 12, 1745, he again presided in the Admiralty Court, and continued to preside until May, 1747, when the record ends. Within the period of about seven years covered by the record, Gov. William Shirley's genuine signature appears as Advocate General. John Overing, Esq., the son-in-law of the Judge, came into Court occasionally as an advocate.

In 1740, Judge Auchmuty was connected with the Land Bank Scheme, and 143 pages of one of the volumes in Suffolk Registry of Deeds are taken up with copies of mortgages relating to this scheme. It is mentioned in Hutchinson's History as follows:—"This was a revival of a project of a bank of 1714. The projector of that bank now put himself at the head of seven or eight hundred persons. A company was formed and were to give credit to £150,000 lawful money to be issued in bills, each person to mortgage a real estate in proportion to the amount he subscribed and took out. Ten directors and a treasurer were to be chosen. Every subscriber was to pay 3 per cent. interest for the sum taken out, and 5 per cent. of the principal, and he that did not pay in bills might pay in produce and manufactures. The pretence was, that by thus furnishing a medium, the inhabitants would be better able to procure the Province bills of credit for their taxes; that trade, foreign and inland, would revive and flourish." * * * "The company contrived to keep £50,000 or £60,000 abroad." * * * "The company was suppressed by act of Parliament, notwithstanding the opposition of their agent."

Judge Auchmuty died in 1751, and soon after his decease the estate was conveyed to Dr. Jonathan Davies, who probably some years afterwards erected the mansion now standing near Myrtle Street. He owned the estate for fifty years.

The will of Judge Auchmuty was made in 1741, just before he sailed for England. It is substantially as follows:—

"In the name of God, Amen.

"I, Robert Auchmuty, of Roxbury, in the County of Suffolk, Esquire, being bound to Great Britain, in the defence of the just rights of the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, in which, by the blessing of God, I hope to succeed, but considering the frailty of human life and the dangers of the sea, do therefore make this my last Will and Testament, with a spirit of Resignation to all the dispensations of Providence, trusting through the merits of Jesus Christ, my blessed Redeemer, that, after this troublesome life is ended, I may be a partaker of a blessed Immortality."

And that he might not "sin in his grave," he adds, "And now in the first place I direct my Exccutrix to pay all my just debts." He then bequeathes "fifty pounds to his loving daughter, Henrietta Overing, wife of John Overing, Esq., in bills of public credit of the old tenor," the same sum to his son Samuel, to his daughter Isabella and his son Robert. He bequeathes to his son James Smith five pounds, "being sensible (he says) if he behaves himself well of the prospect he has of sharing a Benevolence of his God father, my very good friend, Mr. James Smith."

He then gives to his "truly loving and faithful wife Mary," the rest of his estate, "confiding (he says) in her great tenderness and affection to my children, which I have always experienced."

CONFISCATED ESTATES.

[From the Norfolk County Journal, 12 September, 1857.]

It is a well known fact that during the war of the revolution, an act of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts Bay was passed, to confiscate the estates of a large number of persons who were favorably disposed to the government of King George III. This act was passed April 13, 1779, and was entitled "an act to confiscate the estates of certain notorious conspirators against the Government and Liberties of the inhabitants of the late Province, now State of Massachusetts Bay," and recited that the persons therein named had justly incurred the forfeiture of all their property, rights and liberties holden under, and derived from the Government Laws of the State, and should be considered as aliens, and that all their goods and chattels, lands and tenements, should escheat and caure to the use of the Government and people of the State. Afterwards, in the same year, a Resolve was passed, directing the sale of the confiscated estates at public auction, and a committee was appointed for the purpose of carrying the Resolve into effect.

Not less than five of these estates in the town of Roxbury were sold by the committee. They had been owned under the Provincial Government by men of wealth, and in some instances by persons of high standing in society. It may prove interesting to the readers of the Journal to know where these estates were, and something about their former owners.

The old mansion house now occupied by Hon. Samuel Walker, near Dorchester Brook, and about 132 acres of land on both sides of Eustis Street, including the land where the mansion house of the late Gov. Eustis stands, was confiscated as the estate of Eliakim Hutchinson. This estate had formerly been the property of Gov. William Shirley, Royal Governor of Massachusetts from 1741 to 1749.

The mansion house on Bartlett Street, now occupied by Mr. Bradford, with about six acres of land, was confiscated as the estate of Robert Auchmuty, and sold to Increase Sumner, afterwards Governor of Massachusetts under the Constitution from 1797 to 1799. Gov. Sumner with his family occupied the mansion house as a place of residence until the time of his death in 1799. A fine steel engraving of the likeness of Gov. Sumner, with an interesting sketch of his life prepared by his son, W. H. Sumner, Esq., may be found in the April Number, 1854, of the New England Genealogical Register. He was born in Roxbury, 27th of November, 1746.

Robert Auchmuty became a resident of this mansion house about the year 1770. He was son of Robert Auchmuty, Judge of the King's Admiralty Court for New England, and on the death of his father in 1750, succeeded him in office. He was married in 1751 to Deborah Bradock, a great-grand-daughter of Mathew Bradock, who was chosen Governor of Massachusetts in 1628-9 by the Company in England for settling Massachusetts Bay, but never came to America. Robert Auchmuty, Jr. is represented as being a man of talent, and possessed of fine powers as a lawyer. He was associated with Adams and Quincy in the defence of Capt. Preston, in his trial for the Boston Massacre. His sister married Judge Pratt, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York, and a graduate of Harvard University of the class of 1737. The elder Auchmuty was a resident of Roxbury from 1733 to the time of his death in 1750. His mansion house was on land purchased by him of Joseph Scarborough, on the Braintree road, now Warren Street, and which had been in the Scarborough family before the time of Queen Anne. The site of his dwelling house was probably near that of the house lately occupied by Jos. Adams. He was a lawyer, and was counsel for the Trustees of the Grammar School in a suit relating to land as early as 1716.

Benjamin Hallowell, with his wife and family, prior to the Revolution, occupied that mansion house now occupied by Dr. B. F. Wigg, at the corner of Boylston and Austin Streets, at Jamaica Plain. The estate comprised about seven acres on the southwest side of Boylston Street. Mr. Hallowell's name was among those in the act of confiscation, and this estate was sold by the committee. It passed through several hands, and was purchased by Dr. Lewis Leprilite, in 1791. This gentleman was born in Nantz in France, and was a surgeon. Unfortunately for him the estate was owned by Mrs. Hallowell, and consequently the deed of the committee operated upon the life estate of Mr. Hallowell, in right of his wife, but did not convey the fee. Mrs. Hallowell died in 1795, and her husband in 1799. The heirs of Mrs. Hallowell recovered the estate of Leprilite by a suit in the United States Circuit Court. The remains of Dr. Leprilite, and those of his son, are buried on the estate, and the spot is indicated by a stone with a Latin inscription.

One of Benjamin Hallowell's sons was an Admiral in the British Navy, and was a knight; one of his daughters married Judge Elmsley of Montreal. Ward Nicholas Boylston, Esq., another son of Mr. and Mrs. Hallowell, by Royal License of King George III., took the name of Boylston, which was his mother's maiden name. He owned this estate for many years prior to his death. He was a gentleman of education, and had travelled in many parts of the world in early life. He gave considerable sums to Harvard College, and for other charitable purposes, in his lifetime and by his will.

Joshua Loring, Esq., Mandamus Counsellor of the late Province of Massachusetts Bay, as he is styled in the deed of the committee, was deprived of a farm of seventy-three acres, with two mansion houses and other buildings thereon at Jamaica Plain, bounded west by the county road leading by Jamaica Plain Meeting House.

Sir Francis Bernard's country seat, on the southwest side of Jamaica Pond, shared the fate of the other confiscated estates. This estate contained fifty acres. Sir Francis is described as a Baronet in the deed, but the committee made no allusion to his office under the crown, as was done in the case of Mr. Loring. Bernard was Governor from 1760 to 1769.

In addition to the places of residence already mentioned, which were lost by confiscation, Rev. William Walter, rector of Trinity Church, Summer Street, Boston, and Charles Ward Apthorp, whose residence was in Brookline, each lost tracts of land in Roxbury by the same summary proceedings. Several other estates in the present limits of Norfolk County were confiscated, including Gov. Hutchinson's estate in Milton.

So perish all in turn, save well recorded worth."

MR. EDITOR—In a cultivated field in Newbury, as you approach the bridge at Old-town, is an ancient burial ground which seems to have been appropriated exclusively to the families of Dole, Illsley, and Plummer. Most of the graves are marked by stones with inscriptions, but these tablets are nearly all of them lying flat upon the ground and covered with the overgrowing turf. The owner of the soil is a thrifty farmer, and no doubt respects the spot, but, almost insensibly the plough, each succeeding year, creeps closer and closer to the resting places of the departed, and what remains of the dilapidated gravestones may soon give place to the march of improvement, and be sacrificed to the advancement of agriculture. That some memento of this spot may be preserved, I send for publication in the Register, copies of such inscriptions as yet remain. H. G. S.

WALLER OF VIRGINIA.

Wildwood Plantation, Bolivar Co., Miss., May 14, 1857.

EDITOR N. E. H. &amp; G. REGISTER, Boston.

Dear Sir—It may be interesting to some to know the history of a good old family—I mean the Waller family.

Alrued De Waller, of Newark, Co. Nottingham, d. in 1183, and from him descended David, Master of the Rolls to Edward III. for 30 years. He died with no heir. From John his brother sprung Henry, father of Richard, the hero of Agincourt, and who was allowed to add the word Agincourt on a shield pendant from a walnut tree to his coat of arms. He left John who died in 1517, leaving William, having issue John of Beaconsfield, Co. Bucks, from which family sprung Edmund the poet, celebrated for his suit to Lady Sydney. Henry Edmund was issue of the Poet. William was succeeded by Sir Walter, Knt. of Groombridge; again by George, leaving Sir Hardress, who was a General in the Parliamentary Army, and Sir Thomas, Lieutenant of Dora Castle in James I., leaving William, Kt., celebrated as the commander in chief of the Western division of the Parliamentary Army. Thence sprung Thomas, father of Richard, leaving Thomas, who died in South Lambeth in 1731, and who left James, dying without issue in 1802.

Sir William's eldest son Wyadham came to the Colony of Virginia, where he engaged in planting. He died at or near the mouth of James River, where he had settled, leaving a son who engaged in a sea-faring life, and commanded a vessel from Boston to the South American coast. He settled in Greenbrier Co., Va., ultimately, and married a Miss Clifton. He left William and Bowker. William died in 1835 in Spottsylvania Co., Va. A Capt. Bowker Waller, who had married a Miss Chew, of Fredericksburg, Va., settled in the same county. He raised a numerous family of sons. John, who died in ——— at St. Francisville, Lou., and Byrd B., who died at the family seat in ———, leaving one son who is now a planter in the same county, Robert Beverley Waller, the sole survivor of so many noble men. Long will Bowker Waller's hospitable and generous welcome be remembered, and his many friends, now fast sinking beneath the sod of the valley, will join him on an unknown shore. May his many virtues be doubled in his son. He was an affectionate father, a kind husband, a Christian, and a true old Virginia gentleman.

Many of his daughters are married, and some remain near the old mansion, while others have sought homes amidst the fertile fields of the South and West.

GENEALOGICAL AND ANTIQUARIAN RECORD.

[Communicated by JEREMIAH BUTLER, of Sherborn.]

I find in the East Cemetery in Hopkinton, Mass., the following inscription:—

Aaron Butler was born at Hopkinton, June 4th 1762, and died April 23d, 1848, Son of Jeremiah and Martha, and Grandson of Thomas and Martha, and Great Grandson of William and Sarah Butler. Thomas was born at Ipswich in the County of Essex, September 15th, 1682, and removed with his family to Hopkinton, A. D. 1745.

FRANCIS BRINLEY

Was born at Dalchet, in England, in 1632. He established himself at Newport, R. I., fourteen years after its settlement. In the year 1687, during the reign of James 2d, he was appointed a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Rhode Island. He occasionally resided in Boston, owning a large estate at the corner of Hanover and Elm Streets. He died there in 1719, at the age of 87, and was buried in a grave in the King's Chapel Burial Ground, on the spot where the family tomb now stands. As he survived his children, Col. Francis Brinley of Roxbury, his grand-son, and Mrs. Hutchinson, his grand-daughter, inherited his large estate.

The following Catalogue of his books is somewhat curious, and gives us an idea of the legal and other reading of a gentleman of the Provinces in those days. It is only signed by him; the writing somewhat tremulous, he then being about 80 years old.

GORDONIAN INCONSISTENCY.

The following instance of the want of consistency in Dr. Gordon's History, is very striking: Under the date of "Dec. 8, 1775," he says, "There is a general reluctance among the soldiers to inlisting afresh. The Massachusetts people show as much backwardness as the others. In short, they expect to be hired, and that at a very high price, to defend their liberties; and choose to be slaves, unless they can be bribed to be freemen." But yet, under the date of "Dec. 11, 1775," he says, "About 2000 militia arrived in camp, and 3000 more were expected every hour." Does this look like reluctance? Again, under the date of "Dec. 15, 1775," he says, "Let me now give you the following anecdote. Deacon Whitcomb, of Lancaster, (who was a member of the Massachusetts Assembly until the present contest, had served in former wars, and been in different engagements,) had served as a Colonel in the American army; but on account of his age was left out upon the late new regulation. His men highly resented it, and declared they would not inlist again, after their time was out. The Colonel told them he did not doubt there were sufficient reasons for the regulation, and he was satisfied with it; he then blamed them for their conduct, and said he would inlist as a private. A Col. Brewer heard of it, and offered to resign in favor of Col. Whitcomb. The whole coming to Gen. Washington's ears, he has allowed of Col. Brewer's resignation in Col. Whitcomb's favor, appointed the former Barrack-Master, until he can further promote him, and acquainted the army with the whole affair in general orders." Who but Dr. G. could have talked of "reluctance, and being BRIED," with such and many such instances before his eyes—instances which would have done honor to Romans—and which, had they been British, would have shone with lustre in the Doctor's pages.

PERKINS FAMILY OF HAMPTON, N. H.*

[By ASA W. BROWN, of East Rockport, O.]

Abraham and Isaac Perkins appear to have been among the grantees of Hampton. They were among the first to have their children baptized by Mr. Bachelor at that place. Abraham's son Abraham, born 2 Sept. 1639, baptized 15 Dec. 1639, is said to have been the first white male child born in Hampton. Two female children, namely, Mary, daughter of Robert and Lydia Sanderson, and Susanna, dau. of Thomas and Abigail Jones, were baptized 29 Oct. 1639. One of them was probably the first white child born there.

An old family bible, still preserved in Rye among the descendants of Abraham, gives the births of eleven of his thirteen children. Mr. Parsons of Rye favored me with the dates there recorded, and told me that Abraham Perkins, Jr. was the first male child born in Hampton, as stated above. This fact is either on record in the old bible, or has come down with it by tradition. This bible is the only one I have heard of, that gives the record of the first generation of any family in Hampton. By combining the dates from the bible and the town books, which vary, I have prepared the following record:—

I. ABRAHAM<sup>1</sup> PERKINS, born abt. 1611, d. 31 Aug. 1683; m. Mary —, b. abt. 1618, d. 29 May, 1706. They had ch.: 1, Mary,<sup>2</sup> bp. 15 Dec. 1639, with her br. Abraham; m. 7 June, 1652, Giles Fifield, and removed to Charlestown, Mass. Her daughter Mary<sup>3</sup> was living in 1683.—2, Abraham<sup>2</sup> (ii) b. 2 Sept. 1639; m. Elizabeth Sleeper, 27 Aug. 1668; killed by the Indians, 13 June, 1677.—3, Humphrey,<sup>2</sup> b. 22 Jan. 1642; d. young.—4, James,<sup>2</sup> b. 11 April, 1644; d. young.—5, Timothy,<sup>2</sup> b. July, 1646; d. young.—6, James,<sup>2</sup> (iii) b. 5 Oct. 1647; 1st w. Mary; m. 2d, Leah Cox, 13 Dec. 1681; will dated 8 May, 1723, proved 9 Dec. 1731.—7, Jonathan,<sup>2</sup> (iv) b. 26 or 30 May, 1650, d. 20 or 24 Jan. 1689; m. at Exeter, 20 Dec. 1682, Sarah —, who survived him, and m. in 1690 Josiah Sanborn. She d. at Hampton, 1 Sept. 1748, æ 85.—8, David,<sup>2</sup> b. 28 April or 2 Feb. 1653, living 1683. In 1691, Elizabeth Perkins, dau. of Francis Brown of Newbury, was living. Qu. Was this David's wife? and had he a son John?—9, Abigail,<sup>2</sup> b. 2 April, 1655; m. John Foulsham, 10 Nov. 1675.—10, Timothy,<sup>2</sup> b. 29 June, 1657, d. 29 Jan. 1660.—11, Sarah,<sup>2</sup> b. 7 or 26 July, 1659; living in 1683.—12, Humphrey,<sup>2</sup> (v) b. 16 or 17 May, 1661, d. at H. 7 Jan. 1712; m. Martha Moulton, b. 16 Nov. 1666, dau. of Lieut. John M.—13, Luke,<sup>2</sup> living in 1683.—The record shows that Abraham<sup>1</sup> Perkins had ten sons, of whom four died young; two more, Abraham,<sup>2</sup> Jr. and Jonathan,<sup>2</sup> became extinct in the male line; and two more, David and Luke, disappear from Hampton; (Qu. Did they remove to Bridgewater?) leaving only two sons, namely, James<sup>2</sup> and Humphrey,<sup>2</sup> whose descendants of the male line live in or near Hampton.

II. ABRAHAM<sup>2</sup> PERKINS (i, 2,) by wife Elizabeth, had ch.: 1, Mercy,<sup>3</sup> b. 3 July, 1671; m. 12 July, 1694, Samuel Chandler of Salisbury or

VI. JAMES<sup>3</sup> PERKINS (iii, 7.)—His wife Shuah was, according to tradition, a remarkable woman. Theirs was one of the first families that settled at Kensington, and she endured privations of no ordinary kind. At her husband's death she was left with a large family, whom she supported by her own hands. Two of her sons, at their country's call, shouldered their muskets in '76, and died in its service. She was born 24 Nov. 1707, and d. 8 Sept. 1803. Their ch. were: 1, David,<sup>4</sup> d. 30 Jan. 1735-6 (?) of the throat distemper.—2, Lydia,<sup>4</sup> d. 17 Jan. 1735-6 (?) of the throat distemper.—3, Jonathan,<sup>4</sup> (x) b. 14 April, 1733; d. 14 Sept. 1776, in the army; m. 3 Nov. 1757, Abigail Blake.—4, Betsey,<sup>4</sup> b. 1735; d. 5 Feb. 1736, of the throat distemper.—5, Lydia,<sup>4</sup> b. 14 April, 1737; m. 8 May, 1755, Caleb Brown, son of Josiah; d. at Kensington, 11 Nov. 1831, in her 95th year.—6, David,<sup>4</sup> b. 11 Feb. 1739. Qu. Did he m. XV. ISAAC<sup>1</sup> PERKINS of Hampton was apparently a younger man than Abraham<sup>1</sup>; and was probably born about 1612–13. He d. 13 Nov. 1685. His wife was named Susannah. His children were: 1, Lydia,<sup>2</sup> m. 17 Oct. 1659, Eliakim Wardhall.—2, Isaac,<sup>2</sup> bp. 8 Dec. 1639; drowned 30 Oct. 1661.—3, Jacob,<sup>2</sup> (xvi) bp. 24 May, 1640; m. 30 Dec. 1669, Mary Philbrook.—4, Rebecca,<sup>2</sup> m. 21 Sept. 1659, John Huzzey, and was mother of 16 ch.—5, Daniel,<sup>2</sup> d. 1 Aug. 1662.—6, Caleb,<sup>2</sup> (xvii) m. 24 April, 1677, Bethiah Philbrook.—7, Benjamin,<sup>2</sup> b. 17 Feb. 1650; d. 23 Nov. 1670.—8, Susan,<sup>2</sup> b. 21 Aug. 1652; m. 1st, Isaac Buzwell of Salisbury, 12 May, 1673; m. 2d, William Fuller, Jr. of Hampton, 22 June, 1680.—9, Hannah,<sup>2</sup> b. 24 Feb. 1656; m. I have little doubt that they were. It will be seen that one of the sons of Isaac<sup>1</sup>, namely, Joseph,<sup>2</sup> had a son Caleb. None of the descendants of Isaac<sup>1</sup> Perkins remained in or near Hampton excepting those of Caleb.<sup>2</sup>

THE TURN OF LIFE.

Between the years of forty and sixty, a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to the attacks of disease, and experience has given soundness to his judgment. His mind is resolute, firm, and equal; all his functions are in the highest order; he assumes mastery over business; builds up a competency on the foundation he has formed in early manhood, and passes through a period of life attended by many gratifications. Having gone a year or two past sixty, he arrives at a stand-still. But athwart this is a viaduct, called the "Turn of Life," which, if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of "old age," round which the river winds, and then beyond without a boat or causeway to effect its passage. The bridge is, however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden, whether it bend or break. Gout, apoplexy, are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveller, and thrust him from the pass; but let him gird up his loins and provide himself with a fitter staff, and he may trudge in safety, with perfect composure. To quit metaphor, "the Turn of Life," is a turn either into a prolonged walk, or into the grave. The system and powers having reached their utmost expansion, now begin to either close like flowers at sunset or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant, a single fatal excitement, may force it beyond its strength, whilst a careful supply of props, and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in beauty and vigor until night has entirely set in.—The Science of Life, by a Physician.—Sept. 1857.

BOOK NOTICES

An Historical Discourse in commemoration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Formation of the First Congregational Church in Templeton, Massachusetts. With an Appendix, embracing a Survey of the Municipal Affairs of the Town. By EDWIN G. ADAMS, JUNIOR PASTOR. Boston, 1857. 8vo., pp. 175.

The above able and interesting Discourse, containing an historical sketch of the early settlement of the town and of the Annals of the Church, was delivered on Sunday, Dec. 9, 1855. Its publication, however, was delayed till the present year, to enable the author to comply with the desire expressed, as he says, from many sources, to accompany it with some account also of the Municipal affairs of the town since its incorporation.

In the hundred years now closed there have been five ministers, three of whom are still living and two of them remain pastors of the Church. The ministry of the first, Rev. Daniel Pond, continued but three or four years. That of Rev. Ebenezer Sparhawk continued forty-four years till his death. The next in order, the present senior pastor, Rev. Charles Wellington, D. D., has recently preached his half-century Sermon,* receiving on the occasion gratifying testimonials of the respect and affection of those among whom he has so long lived and labored. Rev. Norwood Damon was settled as Colleague pastor in 1844, and remained a little more than a year and a half. The author of this Discourse was ordained as Colleague Jan. 13, 1847. He has faithfully given us in his Discourse the simple annals of the parish, a portraiture of its ministers, its statistics, and the varied changes of a Century. It seems to us a model of what such a Discourse should be.

The Appendix occupies 101 of the 175 pages of this valuable pamphlet, and yields not in interest to the Discourse itself. But being prepared in so short a time, it could not be expected to be sufficiently full and minute to fill the place of a town history. We hope Mr. Adams will continue his researches and investigations, and that by the time of the Centennial Anniversary of the Incorporation of the town, which we believe will occur in 1862, he will be able to give the public a thorough and authentic History of the town, accompanied with genealogies of the families of the early settlers. A.

Address of HON. WILLIAM G. BATES, at the Laying of the Corner Stone of Westfield Academy, July 31st, 1857. Springfield, 1857. 8vo., pp. 20.

Westfield has a written history, but it was published many years ago. That history, though small, is a corner stone on which another may be constructed. The history of an important institution in a town should form a chapter of great interest in its general history.

The Rev. Dr. Davis, in his few introductory remarks, carries back the ceremony of laying corner stones to a period of great antiquity. He said, "the friends of Job, who is supposed to have lived in the days of Abraham, asked him (Job, of course,) if he knew who laid the Corner Stone of the Earth?" But how Job answered that question, the Doctor does not inform us.

The Address of Mr. Bates is a historical document of great value, and must have been prepared with very considerable labor, as it is filled with names and dates.

Second Congregational Church in Berlin, [Ct.]—The Confession of Faith, Covenant, Ecclesiastical Principles and Rules, Forms of Admissions, etc., Historical Memoranda, Chronological Catalogue, and Alphabetical Index to September, 1857. Hartford: 1857. 12mo., pp. 94.

From works of this description, the future historians of towns must draw many of their most valuable facts. They are primary landmarks in the flood of time. The Second Church of Berlin is not an old one; dating back no farther than 1772, therefore it is not important to give any abstract of the work before us. It appears to be prepared with much care, and is published in a very neat manner.

* It was preached June 25, it having been postponed from Feb. 25, on account of his severe illness at that time.

The New Hampshire Annual Register for the year 1858. By G. PARKER LYON. Concord : 18mo. pp. 178.

This valuable little manual again greets us, and is heartily welcome. Our descriptions of it for previous years will give our readers a pretty good notion of what the work is for the present year ; although its Editor is indefatigable in his labors to make every improvement which his long attention to the subject can suggest. No New Hampshire man should be without it.

First Catalogue of Boscawen Academy, a Family Day School for Primary, Academic, Normal and Collegiate Instruction, Boscawen, N. H. JONATHAN TENNEY, Principal and Proprietor. Concord, N. H. : 1857. 8vo, pp. 16.

We do not recollect to have seen a more beautiful specimen of typography than is exhibited in this Catalogue of Mr. Tenney's School. Indeed the whole work discovers exquisite taste. Judging from his list of scholars, it is at least presumable that this Academy is in a flourishing condition. It is only necessary that the Principal should be known to insure him as large a school as he can wish.

A Sermon in Commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the Ordination, Feb. 25th, 1807, of the Author, Rev. CHARLES WELLINGTON, as Pastor of the First Congregational Church and Society in Templeton, Mass. Boston : 1857. 8vo., pp. 39.

The venerable Author, in a prefatory note to his Sermon, tells us, that "The following Sermon is published neither by request, nor from a vain belief that it possesses any merits sufficient to entitle it to a publication ; but only because it is an Half-Century Sermon ; and because, as such, it may be regarded as a legacy (though a trifling one) to the Author's parishioners and friends."

Besides being an excellent Discourse, it is an able comparative survey of the times of his ordination with the present. Mr. Wellington has appended to his Sermon a few valuable Notes ; and no doubt every body who reads them will be very sorry they are so few.

The Early History of Florida. An Introductory Lecture, delivered by GEORGE R. FAIRBANKS, Esq., before the Florida Historical Society, April 15th, 1857. With an Appendix, containing the Constitution, Organization, and List of Members of the Society. St. Augustine, Fla. : 1857. 8vo., pp. 32.

In his Lecture, Mr. Fairbanks dwells chiefly upon the Spanish period of the History of Florida ; and he has given us a very excellent summary view of that interesting period. The early English period of its history may be said to begin with the capture of St. Augustine by Sir Francis Drake in 1585. The fortress was manned at that time by about 150 Spanish soldiers, which was surrendered to Drake, and he carried thence to England fourteen pieces of cannon.

We hope to hear from time to time that the Florida Historical Society is flourishing, and that its members on the spot are busily engaged in rescuing the history of that State from oblivion.

DEATH OF TWO ENGLISH WRITERS.—Two persons, at one time intimately connected with newspaper literature in England, have recently died, viz. : Mr. John Black and James Silk Buckingham, the famous traveller. Mr. Black was for many years the editor of the Morning Chronicle, and Mr. Buckingham was the originator and first editor of the Athenæum. He once gave a course of public lectures in Boston, and made numerous addresses on Temperance in the United States.—News. 20 July, 1855.

He soon became a great anti-slavery advocate, freed his own slaves, and 21 which he induced his father to give him out of his patrimony. In 1834 he attempted to start an anti-slavery paper in Ky., but could get no one to print it; so he went over into Ohio and set one on foot, to which there was violent opposition. Prior to 1844 he was a resident of Michigan, and became the Liberty candidate for President of the United States. The movement of his party is believed by many to have been a great cause of the defeat of Henry Clay. His biography was published during his presidential campaign. ## LINES

TO THE FAMILY FRIENDS OF MARY S. CARPENTER, WHO DIED IN BERNARDSTON, MARCH 30, 1856.

Sorrowing mother! who thy grief can tell?
Another blow from Death's relentless hand
Has fallen where so recently one fell,
And thinned again thy cherished household band.

Stricken sister! who shall now thy sister be?
Though earthly friends may gather by thy side,
Earth offers none so near or dear to thee
As that fond one who lately drooped and died.

Mourning brothers! call ye this stroke severe?
To Heaven's all-wise decrees submissive bend:
Though short her date, no truth appears more clear—
"That life is long which answers life's great end."

O, friends, as down life's troubled stream ye glide,
With Faith's pure vision, upward lift your eyes;
This tribute is enough for mortal pride—
Your youthful friend has passed into the skies.

THE DEARBORN MONUMENT.—The monument to the late Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn, an account of which we published some time since, has recently been erected upon the family ground, in the Forest Hill Cemetery, Roxbury. It is a Corinthian column of Italian marble, skilfully chiseled, and presents a beautiful appearance. It is a tribute from the citizens of Roxbury to the memory of one to whom, when living, they were greatly indebted for the lovely "city of the dead" which it now adorns. Upon the base, on each side of the monument, is an urn, surrounded by scroll work. Upon the front, engraved upon a tablet, are the following words:

"H. A. S. DEARBORN,
Died July 29, 1851,
aged 68 years."

On the opposite side is the following inscription:

"Ossa in Terra quam delixit coluit, ornavit, Cives et amici moerentes condimus."

AN ADDRESS

Delivered at the Annual Meeting of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, held, by adjournment, at its Room, No. 5 Tremont Street, Boston, January 20th, 1858.

[By SAMUEL G. DRAKE, M. A., President of the Society.]

GENTLEMEN:—The few remarks I have to make will occupy but a small portion of the time of this evening; and, with your kind indulgence, I will, in a plain way, without formality, proceed with them: observing, by the way, that it is quite embarrassing to be placed in the position I now happen to occupy,—a place so lately and so ably filled by the talented and eloquent gentleman who declines a further service.

In the first place, I beg to tender to you, gentlemen, my hearty thanks for this mark of your confidence and favor; and while I accept the place of President of this highly important and extensively useful institution, I must at the same time observe,—I do so with very great diffidence; but, gentlemen, you all well know, so far as you can know anything about it,—that the presidential chair of this Society was never sought by me. However, as your committee of nomination were disposed unanimously to nominate me, and as you have seen fit to confirm that nomination by an election, I feel it my duty to submit to the decision.

I was content to be a common laborer in the historical field, and to remain a soldier in the antiquarian ranks, but you have determined otherwise, and I acquiesce with no other protest than that which I am about to make. One nearly worn out in any service, can do little for its advancement. I therefore can promise little, nay, very little, though with your aid and encouragement I hope to do something.

We all have our fortes, or hobbies, if you will. All men are fitted by nature and training to fill certain spheres or stations in life, while at the same time it is wisely ordered that all men are not fitted for the same occupation. Some may be good mechanics, while others never can be. Some may be good public speakers, while others will ever appear to great disadvantage in attempts of that nature. So, one man may make an excellent soldier, but a very indifferent general. Long and tried services in the ranks, and even in the forlorn hope, may gain him just distinction, but it may give him small claim to the chief command.

This brings to my mind a circumstance which occurred many years ago, at a large dinner at which I happened to be present in Philadelphia. There were many speakers, young and old, called up, one after another. The night was far advanced, and the company much reduced in number, before Col. McKenny, who was among the guests, was called upon. The colonel had belonged to the army of the United States, and had seen service in the war of 1812. He began by remarking that, on looking around him, he was reminded of an army, after a battle by which its ranks had been greatly thinned; but that, he said, was no excuse for those who remained not to do their duty.

It is the reverse now here, for our ranks were never before so full; and although we may think it late in the day to be called upon, we shall nevertheless endeavor to do our duty.

And here I may not inappropriately refer to the origin of this Society. It is above thirteen years since it was formed, and all of the original members are living but one, and to this time but one of them has been called to preside as its chief officer. Of my own connection with the Society, I intend to say but a word. Throughout almost its whole course, I have been its Corresponding Secretary,—an office upon which considerable labor has naturally fallen, and by which much more has been unavoidably assumed, owing to circumstances not necessary to be mentioned. It was very important, in the outset of the Society's periodical, that the conductor or publisher of that periodical should be the Corresponding Secretary of the Society; hence the connection has been continued to the present time, with but a brief intermission.*

This Society is now large and flourishing, and perfect harmony prevails among its members. It is my sincere desire that this state of things may long continue. In large bodies of men differences may occur; they are perhaps more likely to occur than in smaller associations. Giving this due consideration, it will urge upon every one of us the duty of inculcating friendship among ourselves; to be careful to respect the opinions of those who differ from us, and not to judge hastily or rashly of the motives of any brother who may honestly, as he believes, differ from another brother.

Some may imagine that the Society moves too slow, while others may fear there is danger of its going too fast. Let us reflect a moment, and ask ourselves the question—Where is there a society which has accomplished as much as this in an equal space of time? It is easy to name societies which have existed a great deal longer. Some of them have done much, but no one is known to me which has produced the amount of useful labor which this has accomplished, in twice as much time. It has not only produced valuable work, but it has produced authors,—authors who, but for the formation of this institution, would not have been authors. The members of this Society encourage capable persons to publish their labors; and to this encouragement the community is indebted for many excellent histories of towns, and other able historical and genealogical works, too numerous to be named at this time.

I have spoken of the Society as an institution of great importance; and I will take this occasion further to remark, that no society can have greater claims to that importance than this. If the question be asked, How happens this to be so? my answer is, in part, in another question. What society is there, to carry out the objects of which, every member finds a cord connecting his own person with all the rest? All societies should have the great object in view of elevating human nature. This can be done in no way so well as by dwelling upon the worth and virtues of those from whom we are descended. The first settlers of New England were, as a whole, preëminently virtuous. By showing that we are of their blood, that we are their production, we at the same time show that we have no excuse if we have not their virtues. We clearly trace to them, step by step, and there are no dark chasms, or dubious or broken threads. Hence a strong incentive to emulate ancestry. A merely historical society may be an institution solely for the collection of abstract historical knowledge. Of what value is such knowledge, leaving out the actors in historical affairs? That a band of men came from one place and conquered the people in another place, at a certain period, admitting it to be true, is historical knowledge. But of what importance is it unless we know the condition of the conquerors and conquered? who and what they were? the occasion of the action? &c. It is the details of history which make it interesting. Hence the reason why many historical students say they read only the notes to a historical work,—the work itself being dry and tedious, while the notes are never so.

For a moment I will advert to the collection of books and manuscripts in our Library. Of their value it is not necessary to say a single word. As I have referred to this collection, I wish particularly to impress upon the minds of all present, that they should encourage contributions of books, pamphlets, as well as manuscripts, of every description. For who can estimate the value a single pamphlet or letter may be to somebody at some time?

To illustrate this by a brief example. Several years ago, a gentleman was getting together materials for a history of an inland town of some importance. He knew that a few persons who had lived in the town had been authors of some small treatises. One work in particular, by an old revolutionary soldier, he very much desired to see ; in fact, he could not make his history without the use of the work in question. It was a mere pamphlet of a few leaves, badly written, badly printed, and everything, it may be, bad about it. All that was nothing ; the history could not be completed without it. The gentleman had applied to old residents for this bad pamphlet. They had all heard of it, many of them had read it years before, but not a copy could be found. At length a copy was heard of in possession of a great collector of books and pamphlets in a distant State, and a journey was resolved upon, as the only means of relief from the difficulty in which the writer of the history of the town found himself. This journey was prevented only by the accidental discovery of a copy nearer home. Thus a cost of some twenty dollars was avoided, which, but for the timely discovery, must have been incurred, merely for the privilege of a brief examination of an old and almost forgotten pamphlet.

Now, we may have a thousand pamphlets in our library intrinsically of more value than the one in question. Some person, at some day, may have as great a desire to see each of them, as the historian just mentioned did to see that which brought this circumstance to my mind. And the same may be said of the thousands yet to be deposited in these archives.

I have been influenced to remark upon this case, because some worthy members among us have been inclined to discourage donations, giving as a reason that we have already too much of what they have been pleased to term useless lumber in our way, and because much of what has been given does not contain historical or genealogical information. This should not be so ; for every book, tract or pamphlet is, in itself, a historical item. Because one of this description has nothing about it immediately to our purpose, is no argument for its rejection by us. Somebody is the author or writer of every such work, and everybody belongs to somebody's genealogy. Hence, in preparing a history of a town, or a pedigree of a family, the person preparing such work will always be gratified to know if any individual, in either case, did ever produce a literary work of any kind ; if so, such work is a part of the history of a town, and also of an individual. That we attach no value to such literary production, amounts to nothing at all. Self-constituted judges in such cases should remember that others have the same right to judge as ourselves, and that they will be very apt to reverse our decisions.

In this connection I would remark, concerning local histories, that writers of them should, as perfectly as possible, give lists of all printed documents concerning the localities of which histories are prepared. I do not think this has ever been attended to as it should be. How many persons, belonging to any town, do you suppose could answer this question—"How many works have been printed about your town and its people?"

A school book, a sermon, a controversial tract, a report of any society, school or corporation, or anything done in a town, belongs to its history,—and its history is the history of the individuals belonging to it. It was a primary object in view of the founders of this Society, to collect everything which could illustrate local as well as individual history—well knowing that from parts a grand whole is composed. And here I would ask, What can a general historian do without such parts? He may plod on like his predecessors, but his work will be comparatively useless. It may please for the hour by its style, but will never be preserved for reference.

I have been led to these remarks to prevent misconceptions, and to impress upon the minds of the members the importance of our collections already made, and that they may not remit their diligence in adding to them. There is no fear of their becoming too large; for the time will come when we, or our successors, will be enabled to assort, arrange and catalogue them, and thus make them available to all inquirers.

With respect to more suitable accommodations, I will only remark, that no one could be more delighted than myself to see such accommodations, and to see the wishes of the members fully gratified in that particular. But let us proceed in that matter with due caution. We are now in a healthy state of prosperity, which a single inconsiderate step might at once jeopardize. We shall have those accommodations. It is only a question of time.

Sooner than I would reject donations for the library, I would pack our apartment from floor to floor, and from wall to wall, until not even a mouse could find space to enter. Yes, I would sooner retire to the door-steps and entry, and hold our meetings there, than to reject donations; for you may rely upon it that such an accumulation will do much, indirectly though it may be, to provide itself with a shelter.

Even a fragment, or few leaves of a rare book or tract, should not be rejected; for it sometimes happens that, by two or three fragments, a complete work is made up. And let me tell you, gentlemen, that some of the rarest works in my own library have been obtained from imperfect or fragmentary works. I could give you some examples of this kind within my experience, which, if time allowed, would amuse if not astonish you. I will mention but one. Some twenty years ago there fell into my hands, among a large mass of pamphlets, a fragment of a little old quarto volume, printed in London "for Nath. Hillar, at the Princes-Arms, in Leaden-hall street, over against St. Mary-Ax, and Joseph Collyer, at the Golden Bible on London bridge," in the year 1700. This fragment consisted of but four leaves. These leaves contained the title-page and preface of Robert Calef's "More Wonders of the Invisible World." I need not mention for the information of antiquaries, that copies of the original edition of Calef's work have long been of very rare occurrence, and that copies bear a great price when they happen to be thrown into the market. And now for the sequel.

When I had kept this fragment of Calef some ten years or more, a bookseller in London forwarded to me for sale an invoice of scarce works. On casting my eye over the list, I found, marked at a trifling expense, "Calef's More Wonders of the Invisible World, bad copy and imperfect, two-and-sixpence." On examining this "bad and imperfect copy," I found, to my agreeable surprise, that its badness consisted only in being a little dirty and water-stained, and its imperfection was precisely the very leaves I had had so long in my possession.

Every student in New England history knows that Calef's work is the standard authority respecting the "Salem witchcraft;" but every one may not know that the work was so unpopular here, when published, that not a bookseller in the town dared to keep it for sale!

In regard to the valuable books, tracts and manuscripts in the library, I will suggest, that while we would make them as free as is consistent with their safety, special regard should be had that they be used carefully, and not subjected to be lost through the carelessness of some, or the covetousness or cupidity of any. A suitable, and in every respect reliable custodian, is of the first importance. Such a person cannot be had without a fair compensation, and one of the first things to be done, in my judgment, is to find the means to compensate such an officer. Such a person should not only be a good custodian, but, to be fully equal to the office, he must be something of a scholar, must be one of us in interest, must possess order and neatness, and lastly, he should be a cultivator in our fields of research. Much, very much depends upon the gentleman entrusted with our archives. He sees more of the members of the Society than any other officer, being brought into daily intercourse with them in the way of his duty. He can do much for the Society in various ways. Strangers visiting the library constantly, gives him an opportunity to let them leave it with good impressions, and often with the good intention of adding to its collections.

If an institution is founded to be useful, it must have useful members—useful in some way. Hence, I say, the greater the number of members, the more good the institution can do. That a man can do as much work with one hand as he can with both, has always appeared to me a glaring absurdity; or that one man can do as much as ten men. For my part, I do not believe that any ten, even of our number, are quite smart enough to do as much as all of us together. Neither will any of you, gentlemen, believe that a few individuals associated together for historical purposes, however smart they may be, are yet quite sufficient to do all our historical and genealogical work for us. A small number may associate themselves together and hedge themselves about, entrench themselves behind any amount of self-importance, and argue that they can take care of the history of us all. That doctrine may do among the monks of Spain, even in the nineteenth century, but it is ill suited to the institutions of the free States of America.

Now, historical knowledge is valuable or it is worthless. If valuable, why try to limit and circumscribe its means of usefulness? This Society was formed, by its original members, in the full belief that the knowledge brought to light by it, should benefit everybody who desired such knowledge. There were, therefore, no limits allowed to be set as to the number who might incline to lend a hand in the undertaking; and hence, by enrolling their names, it might be known that they appreciated the objects of it, and were ready to encourage it with whatever additional advantage their names and services might give it. It was thought to be altogether too antiquated an idea to admit none into their ranks until they themselves were dead.

No, gentlemen; instead of here and there an individual laborer, a mighty army of antiquaries is necessary to rescue the perishing records of the past. On a moment's reflection, every one of you will admit this; for who of you undertakes an investigation, and is not stopped almost in the very outset for want of the means to pursue it? Who among you can clearly trace his progenitor to the father land? It may be you may trace one line to the old world, perhaps two, but most of us have at this time sixty-four lines to trace there! I therefore confidently assure you that there is work enough for us all, and all we can enlist to help us, even in this single branch of inquiry, to say nothing of other branches.

This Society, it is extensively admitted, (though not as extensively admitted as the fact which I am about to mention is known,) is more favorably and widely known abroad than any other Historical Society in New England, if not than any other in America. To what is this owing? This is a question to which I propose to invite the special attention of the Society for a few moments.

It is a question which deeply concerns every member of the Society, if they are members interested in its advancement. It being conceded that the Society has somehow acquired an importance, every member of it should feel that he has individually done something for the acquirement of the merited distinction which it holds.

Is it owing to the great names, and we have no lack of them, upon our list of members? I distinctly state that this fact has very little, almost nothing to do with it. Is it owing to our collection of books and manuscripts? To splendid apartments for our meetings and our library? They are not extensive enough to make any sensation abroad, and but little here. But let us recur to the main question,—To what is this importance of the Society owing? The answer, gentlemen, is very brief, and as simple as it is brief. It is owing to a miserably supported periodical, now in its twelfth year, published under the sanction of this Society, called the New England Historical and Genealogical Register. Gentlemen, I know this to be so. My connection with this periodical, from its original inception to the present time, gives me the assurance with which I aver the fact. Nor am I alone in this estimate of the periodical to which your attention is called.

Such being the case, how important it is that this periodical should be sustained. Many valuable members of the Society have been introduced into it by their interest in that publication. They first became aware of the existence of the Society through that work. They had heard of it, subscribed for it, and thus became members of the Society.

From the nature of the work in question, it cannot be popular, and therefore cannot be profitable in a pecuniary point of view. To make it so would be to reduce it to a par with common magazines, and works suited to nurseries. No one can desire this. No one can wish to have its pages crowded with matter foreign to the objects of the Society. Every one knows how difficult it is to consult works containing all sorts of matter, especially as such works soon become repulsive from their bulky and overgrown appearance. A little consideration must satisfy nearly all of us that ordinary reading matter does not belong to its pages, and has, therefore, as far as possible, been excluded from them. As an illustration of this position, I refer you to the Gentleman's Magazine,—a periodical of which all of you must know something. That magazine has been published one hundred and twenty-seven years, and comprises two hundred volumes. Now, there is scattered through that work a vast amount of historical and genealogical information. But who of us can afford to possess those two hundred volumes? Yet, if all the articles to our purpose could be selected from them, and published by themselves, they would not, perhaps, extend to ten volumes. If this selection were made, (and no doubt it will be in coming years,) nearly all might secure them.

The Historical and Genealogical Register, gentlemen, although sustained almost entirely by individual effort, is not an organ of any particular persons, family or clique. Its pages are open to all who contribute matter approved of by the Society's committee of publication. Should it not, therefore, be a primary object with every member of the Society to extend the circulation of its periodical? Is there any more direct way to extend the usefulness of the Society? I believe every gentleman who hears me will answer in the affirmative.

I have been thus particular, gentlemen, in speaking of this solitary periodical, because there are many, notwithstanding its age, who have scarcely any knowledge of it. I call it a solitary periodical, because there is not a similar one in the world; for the simple and very good reason, that money cannot be made by them. There have been similar works started in England, but, to use a periodical phrase, they died soon. Antiquarian and literary gentlemen of the present day in that country speak of the work with surprise and admiration,—surprise that such a work can be sustained in Republican America, and admiration at the extent of antiquarian and genealogical information contained in it; remarking, at the same time, that "such a work cannot live in England."

Gentlemen, they may well be surprised that such a work can be sustained here, and their surprise would be very far greater, if they knew how it is sustained. There are two gentlemen of the Society who have taken a few extra copies to help the work onward. Several others have done good service, by influencing their friends to become subscribers to it. The Society is under great obligations to all of these.

It will be remembered that it was by an unanimous vote of the Society, last year, determined to make a slight alteration in its name; that the President was made a Committee to petition the Legislature for that object. But the session of that body was so near at an end before he could attend to it, the matter was postponed. It will at once be attended to. For the benefit of new members, I will observe, that the name proposed is "The New England Historical and Genealogical Society." This is in conformity with the name of its Periodical. This name was immediately adopted in all ordinary transactions, as may have been observed. The name Historic-Genealogical was never agreeable to the original members. They, with a single exception, contended that it did not express fully their objects. "Historic Genealogy" covers but a small portion of the ground intended; whereas History and Genealogy was really what was considered to be comprehended by it.

Gentlemen, I have but a word more, and hope I have not broken down your patience. But let me again urge upon you the importance of harmonious action; let us not be sanguine in new projects, nor disturbed if they are set aside by others. The good of the Society is most likely to be with the intelligent majority, and it is the duty of the minority to acquiesce, and to work heartily with them.

As a last word, let me urge upon the officers of the Society the great importance of doing their duty, and doing it promptly. Let them remember that, with a society as with an individual, everything depends upon its straightforward course, and the harmony and integrity with which all of its officers do their duty. To understand the economy of such an institution, requires some experience in its service, and it is not to be expected but that gentlemen who have not had the opportunity to become informed, may draw conclusions unfavorable to its past and present progress. They may have a great many projects for the Society's advancement,—and they may be feasible projects under certain circumstances,—but let us move with caution, and do what we do understandingly. And, as I have before observed, our progress we know to be onward and our affairs healthy, and let us not jeopardize them by any doubtful experiments.

LETTER OF JOHN HANCOCK.

S. G. DRAKE, Esq.

Dear Sir:—I now enclose to you a copy of a family letter in my possession, directed "To Mrs Hancock at Worcester or Boston," which would not be a very definite direction at the present day, but seems to have reached her safely. The writer of it makes mention of Harry, Ned, and Joe, who were three of his black servants, one of whom lies under a gravestone in "the old Granary" burying-ground. This letter is chiefly interesting from the glimpse it affords us of the Governor's private life.

Yours faithfully,

J. GARDNER WHITE.

York Town October 18th. 1777.

My Dear Dolly—

I am now at this Date, & not a Line from you, nor a single word have I heard from you since your Letter by Dodd immediately upon your arrival at Worcester, which you may Judge affects me not a little but I must Submit, & will only Say that I expected oftner to have been the object of your attention.

I shall hope & must Desire that you will Take a Seat in the Carriage, & meet me on the Road, which will much advance your health, & you may be assur'd will be highly Satisfactory to me, & I have Desir'd Mr Bant to Accompany you in the Carriage, & when we meet he can take my Sulkey, & I return with you in the Carriage to Town. Mr Bant must hire or borrow a Servant to attend you on Horseback, as Harry & Ned are both with me, & Joe is not Suitable. my Dear, I hope your health will admit of your coming with Mr. Bant, I long to See you; I shall Close all my Business in three Days, & indeed have already nearly finish'd, & when once I set out shall travel with with great Speed, nothing will prevent my Seeing you Soon, with the leave of providence, but a prevention of passing the North River, I shall push hard to get over, even if I go so far as Albany. I need not Tell you there will be no occasion of your writing me after the Receipt of this.

My best wishes attend you for every Good. I have much to Say, which I leave to a Cheerful Evening with you in person.

God Bless you, my Dear Dolly,

REMINISCENCES RELATING TO GENERAL WARREN AND BUNKER HILL.

[By Gen. WILLIAM H. SUMNER.]

Read before the New England Historical and Genealogical Society.

UPON the occasion of the inauguration of the statue of General Joseph Warren, at Charlestown, on the 17th of June, 1857, the different addresses then made contained very many interesting incidents illustrative of the life and character of that martyr of American liberty. The perusal of these has brought to my mind some additional facts connected with Warren's death which may be considered valuable as historical items. Desirous that nothing should be lost relative to one whose name shines so brightly on the historic page, I make the information in my possession the subject of this article; and in this connection it may be proper to remark that from my early boyhood I have been acquainted with different members of the Warren family. I was born within a fourth of a mile of Gen. Warren's house in Roxbury, and enjoyed familiar intercourse with his three brothers, his mother, and his aunt, and the patriot himself was one of my father's teachers in the Roxbury Grammar School. Thus, from my earliest recollections, associated with a family so honored in our country's history, many interesting facts and incidents came to my knowledge, some of which may be here embodied.

The unwavering patriotism of General Warren is well illustrated in an incident related to me by some one whose name I do not now recall. It is well known that the British commander was anxious to secure the services of American officers of known bravery for the government, and that tempting offers were made to Putnam to induce him to leave the provincials and join the royal army. The valuable acquisition which Warren would be to the royalists did not escape their notice, and (as the account was given to me) Dr. Jeffries, a surgeon in the British army and an intimate acquaintance of Warren, was conversing with him, a short time before the actual resort to arms, on a pile of boards near the Winnisimmet Ferry Ways, from which they had a full view of the British fleet. During this conversation, which naturally turned upon the hostile feelings which existed between the provinces and the mother country, Dr. Jeffries suggested that in his opinion Warren might receive a high commission in the British army, if he would accept of it. This was a fruitless suggestion.

But the main object of this communication is to bring out something more important in a historical point of view, although incidents like the one just related possess a value peculiarly their own, and which it would be difficult to overestimate.

Upon the anniversary of our nation's birthday, 4th of July, 1825, at the public collation given at the State House to the State and City authorities, I gave a toast, the sentiment of which was founded upon facts which I had collected as Adjutant General from some of the old soldiers who were engaged in the battle of Bunker Hill. They had been requested to meet at my office on the occasion of laying the corner stone of the Bunker Hill Monument, on the 17th of the preceding June, by the Marquis de Lafayette, to join in the procession on that occasion. A large number of them came, and at that time I inquired of them what they knew about the battle, and made some minutes of their conversation and replies to my interrogations.

At the collation, Major General Henry Dearborn gave as a toast :—

"The memory of General Warren, who gallantly died in the cause of his country."

Immediately after this I rose and said I would give as a toast the sentiment contained in the dying words of that first great martyr of American liberty (whose name had just been announced) to the soldiers who were near him when he fell, after receiving his death wound :—

"I am a dead man ; fight on, my brave fellows, for the salvation of your country."

The sentiment was received with acclamation ; but Dr. Benj. Waterhouse, one of the professors in Harvard College, who had no friendship for Dr. John Warren, also a professor in the same institution, took occasion in a newspaper article (signed "Historian," his usual signature being "Historicus") to question the authenticity of the words embodied in that toast, and called upon the Adjutant General, as it came with the weight of authority from his mouth, to state upon what testimony it was founded, at the same time expressing some doubts in regard to it.

The cause of the ill feeling before alluded to on the part of Dr. Waterhouse toward Dr. Warren, as stated to me by Robert H. Gardiner, Esq., of Gardiner, Maine, was this :—Dr. Waterhouse wrote several articles for the newspapers, in which he meddled with the affairs of the college, and called in question the fitness of some of his brother professors for the positions which they held. This gave general offence, and Dr. Warren joined with the several other professors in a complaint to the government on the subject. Dr. Waterhouse was requested to desist ; but as he continued to write similar articles, a memorial for his removal was signed by Dr. Warren and the other professors, and he was accordingly dismissed.

The article by Dr. Waterhouse referred to was as follows, and is copied from the "Boston Patriot and Mercantile Advertiser" of the 16th of July, 1825 :—

"MESSRS. EDITORS :—In your paper of the 6th is mentioned, among the list of toasts, one of considerable importance as an historical fact, given by the Adjutant General ; for if, on investigation, it turn out true, it settles a doubtful point in history ; if not true, the sooner the mistake is rectified the better. It was given immediately after Major General Dearborn drank to the memory of General Warren, who 'gallantly died in the cause of his country.' Whereupon the Adjutant General gave as his toast, 'the dying words of Warren to the soldiers who were near him when he fell after receiving his death wound.' His words, the Adjutant General said, were :—'I am a dead man ; fight on, my brave fellows, for the salvation of your country.'

The Adjutant General would confer a very great favor on the annalists and historians of the present times, if he would, through the medium of some paper, inform us more particularly of the fact, and mention the source whence he obtained that interesting allusion, which may lead to truths equally important. Hitherto the manner, time, and place on the hill where he fell, is left uncertain, while that of Major McCleary's is ascertained. As it regards Warren, the prevalent idea now is, that never having been a soldier, and having accepted a commission of a general, he repaired to Bunker Hill to learn, by actual observation, how to command in battle on a future day. He said as much to Vice President Gerry the morning they parted; and the late Judge Winthrop testified that he saw him and spoke with him before they reached the hill, Winthrop with his musket, Dr. Warren with only a cane, and in citizen's clothes. He was afterwards seen conversing with General Putnam; but after the battle began to rage there is no account whatever of him, excepting this given by the Adjutant General.

One thing is clear, that he was buried with the promiscuous slain in the common trench of the dead. Had the British known him, this would not have been the case, if considered only as a Mason of a high order. But the greatest wonder remains,—why did not our own people seek out the body of our courageous patriot? Why did not Prescott, or Putnam, or some Bostonian, apply to the British commander for the remains of their fearless patriot? According to the present popular impression, the probability is that the death of Warren was not known until after the British had buried all the slain of their opponents without knowing any sort of distinction among them. The body taken up and honorably buried a long time after was mere conjecture, simply on that of an artificial tooth.

Any light which the gentleman in question can give on this melancholy subject will, without doubt, be gratefully acknowledged by every American.

HISTORIAN."

My attention was called to this article by the Hon. James Lloyd, who said that, in his opinion, the matter required an explanation. Upon reading the doctor's communication, which I had not before seen, as it was published in a newspaper which I did not take or often read, I saw the propriety of giving the evidence establishing the questioned fact. With the view of obtaining it, I went to Tewksbury, and called upon the person who had given me the information in the presence of the old soldiers at my office, to obtain more formal evidence of the fact, and inquired of him more particularly as to his recollection of the incident he had before related to me, and he certified it in the most ample manner, as will soon appear.

Having collected many interesting incidents connected with the death of General Warren, and obtained unquestionable evidence as to the authenticity of the words embodied in my toast, I published an article in the "Patriot" of the 9th of August, 1825, in answer to the interrogations of "Historian," including an original letter from Amos Foster, the soldier who heard the heroic words of Warren as he fell. My communication was as follows:—

GENERAL WARREN.

MESSES. EDITORS,—"Historian," in your paper of the 6th ult., quotes from the newspaper account of the celebration of the 4th of July, at the State House, a toast given by me contained in the sentiment of the words of General Warren after he was shot on Bunker Hill; and, questioning the truth of the historical fact, requests that "the Adjutant General would mention the source whence he obtained that interesting allusion, which may lead to truths equally important."

It is evident that "Historian" was not present at the table, as the toast was there given upon the authority of Mr. Amos Foster of Tewksbury, a private in Capt. Walker's company and Bridge's regiment, from whose mouth the words were taken on the morning of the 17th June last.

Mr. Foster is a hale man of seventy-two, of respectable appearance, and gave his account of the events of the battle with great clearness both of recollection and expression. He is possessed of considerable property, I learn, and is a man of undisputed veracity. He represents that Dr. Warren was wounded when he addressed them, and spoke like a person in the greatest extremity, who thought all was lost, raising up his hands and saying "I am a dead man;—fight on, my brave fellows, for the salvation of your country." I stated to Mr. Foster that it was generally supposed that Dr. Warren was shot in the head. He replied that it did not appear to him that he was wounded in the head at that time, but that his side was bloody.

Immediately upon seeing the communication of "Historian" in your paper, I addressed a letter to Mr. Foster, informing him that inquiry was made in a public manner of me for the authority I had for giving the sentiment as the dying words of Warren; and requested him to furnish me with such further particulars as were within his recollection; but, not having received a reply to my letter sent through the post office, with which the old soldier has probably but little connection, I have not chosen to wait longer in giving "Historian" the requested information, lest the delay might tend to confirm the doubts expressed in his communication.

My office, on the morning of the 17th, was crowded with revolutionary soldiers, who were requested to meet there before joining in the procession. Many anecdotes and old soldier's stories were related interesting to the "Historian," and never perhaps fifty years after any like event were so many witnesses of it present, face to face, shaking hands and reciting to each other their toils and perils and hair-breadth escapes as were collected together at the late celebration. Under the resolve of the Legislature, a small allowance for attendance and travel was allowed to each of them as "reported themselves at the Adjutant General's office on or before that day, and gave him satisfactory evidence of the fact of their having been in the battle of Bunker Hill on the 17th of June, 1775;" as far as the time allowed, such reports were made and the evidence received. My inquiries, therefore, relating to the events of that day, of the officers and soldiers who reported themselves, were not those of curiosity merely, but were a necessary means of obtaining the "satisfactory evidence" the resolve required. Such was the bustle of the morning, and the shortness of the time, it was impossible the purpose of the resolve could be accomplished, and the Legislature afterwards extended the time for complying with its provisions to the 4th of July, when one hundred and forty-one out of upwards of two hundred present, had applied and given the evidence required.

Impressed with the belief that posterity will consider the events of that conflict as of more importance than even the enthusiastic actors themselves attached to them, I availed myself of the opportunity thus afforded, which gave me the means of seeing the greater part of the living actors in those scenes, to make minutes of the important facts relating to what may have heretofore been considered as mysterious circumstances of the battle, and particularly such as respected the conduct and death of the first great martyr of American liberty. It was impossible to do this generally in the crowd of the morning of the 17th; but, with regard to the important facts stated by Mr. Foster, this was not the case; for that I took down in writing, and, in the presence of Gen. Patterson of Philadelphia, who was very attentive to the old soldier stories, spoke of the importance of the anecdote to Mr. Foster, and read my minutes to him, to ascertain whether I had recorded it correctly.

"Historian" calls on me "for further light on the subject," and has not left in obscurity the objects to which he wished my attention directed; but under the heads of "prevalent ideas" and "popular impressions" in some instances, and in others by direct assertions, conveys his own doubts of the great worth of Warren's services. He says that "after the battle began to rage there is no account whatever of him, except this given by the Adjutant General." That "the manner, time, and place on the hill where Warren fell is left uncertain." That he went there in his common clothes without uniform "to learn by actual observation how to command in battle on a future day." That "he was buried with the promiscuous slain in the common trench of the dead," which would not have been the case "if the British had known him," and that "even our own people did not seek out the body of their fearless patriot." (I have underscored the epithet, though I hope no slur was intended by your communicator when he used it.) That "the body taken up afterwards," which was near the place of the greatest slaughter of the Americans, "was mere conjecture." In fact, if I understand the drift of the communication, it is, that there is no evidence that Warren on that day did anything to distinguish himself.

When the sentiment of that dying hero was promulgated, it was without the least idea that it would invoke an inquiry into his general conduct; but, it is not to be regretted, if there is doubt in any mind, that the inquiry is instituted while many of the witnesses are living, as it must result like those respecting the conduct of other important actors in those scenes in the establishment of those great truths which have already emblazoned their names on the historic page.

There is no need of recurring to evidence in support of commonly received facts. Respecting such as are not generally known I will endeavor to cite the authority.

It is generally understood, I believe, that Warren, at the time of the battle, had not received the commission of Major General, to which office he was appointed on the 14th; that he left Watertown, where the Provincial Congress was sitting, on the morning of the 17th, and was present with the Committee of Safety in Steward Hastings' house, on Cambridge Common, where also Gen. Ward's head quarters were, when Major Brooks arrived from Charlestown and delivered Colonel Prescott's request for reinforcements. That he soon after left the Committee of Safety, of which he was Chairman, and walked a part of the way towards Charlestown, with Dr. Townsend, his pupil, and was spoken to by Judge Winthrop, before he reached the hill, in his usual dress, which was a light colored coat with a sprig on the button, as Gov. Eustis informed me. I have Gov. Brooks' authority for the fact of Warren's presence with the Committee of Safety, when he made his communication from Col. Prescott. He has often detailed to me the observations and opinions of that gallant officer at the councils of war, which were held before the message was sent to Cambridge, and the particulars of his own interview with General Ward first, and afterwards with the Committee of Safety, who sat in the adjoining room.

As it is probable I shall have no other so good opportunity, I can hardly refrain from mentioning one or two circumstances which I have learned in these conversations, although they are not immediately connected with the object of this communication. After despatches had been sent over to Mystic for Stark's and Reed's regiments, and other reinforcements were ordered to march, messages were sent to the neighboring towns, requesting them to bring in their own supplies of powder. As these arrived the Committee distributed themselves, and, seated on the tiller of the carts, dealt out a gill of powder to each soldier, as he came up, some of whom had powder horns, and others wrapped it up in paper. Meanwhile, Brooks, who was not detailed with his regiment for duty the day before, in consequence of his absence at Reading, (called homo by the confinement of his wife with her first child,) but who on his return had the permission of the General to go as a volunteer, provided he would report at head quarters in the morning, was collecting the two remaining companies of his regiment, which had been on guard near the General's quarters. It is well known that the General, apprehensive that the movements towards Charlestown were only a feint to cover a real attack of the main position at Cambridge, was fearful of weakening his force at that place. Brooks says to him, "now General, I have reported according to promise, I hope you will let me march these men where they can be of some use." To which he answered, "I am sorry I cannot comply with your request." "But look at them, General," said Brooks anxiously, "they have got bayonets—there are none scarcely on the hill, and I assure they will be wanted there." "I shall want them here, sir," was the reply, which terminated the interview, and he did not get orders to march until it was too late for him to arrive before the retreat.

But to remove the uncertainty of the time, place, and manner of Warren's death, which "Historian" says exists, let us recur to the evidence; and, first, as to the time and place.

Upon his arrival at the redoubt, Prescott saw Warren, and supposing he came to take the command, said to him he was glad to have assistance; to which Warren replied, as Mr. Wright (now of Beverly, then of Hollis, who was in Prescott's regiment and heard it, says) "No, I did not come to take the command, it is too late in the day; but I'll give you all the assistance I can." Warren was afterwards seen conversing with Putnam, who said to him in the presence of Lt. Col. Parker, who was wounded in the knee, taken prisoner, and afterwards died, but whose wounds were dressed by Dr. Jeffries on a fascine, to whom he related it, "they will beat us from the work, I know; but we shall do them infinite mischief, though we must at last retreat." Col. Whitmore, then a Lieutenant in Capt. Perki's company, in Little's regiment, states that he was wounded in the thigh in the retreat from the redoubt; at the same moment Warren fell, about six feet from him. Capt. Coburn, on the retreat from the redoubt, spoke to Warren, and Gen. Winslow saw him lying dead about sixty yards in the rear of the redoubt, the morning after the battle, with his hands under his head. Major Small of the British army, who acknowledged that he owed his own life to the humanity of Putnam on that occasion, in his turn attempted to save the life of his friend Warren, whom he saw, as he entered the redoubt, and called to him to stand, or he would be killed. This is his own relation to Dr. Jeffries, who went over with the British troops as surgeon after the first attack. There can be no mistake about this, as Maj. Small and Dr. Warren were very intimate friends; and Dr. Jeffries, who was a professional rival of Warren's, used to meet them frequently at Mr. Scollay's—and Dr. Warren had, a few evenings before, offered him a place in the medical staff. Here is abundant evidence, but more is at hand if needed, as, to avoid prolixity, I have omitted many minute particulars which would corroborate the facts, that Warren, although he was opposed to the plan of taking possession of the heights of Charlestown, thinking the Fabian policy the best in the condition the army then was, and though he was seen sick in his bed after he came from Watertown that morning with a nervous headache; when he heard Major Brooks' communication from Col. Prescott, requesting reinforcements and ammunition, left the Committee of Safety and repaired to the scene of action, was in various parts of the field, "after the battle began to rage," and was killed near the redoubt as the British entered it.

Respecting the "manner" of his death, there is more uncertainty; though, to use the language of "Historian" to express one's own idea, "the popular impression" that he was wounded some time before he was killed, in the arm or side, gains strength from the circumstances and facts related by the witnesses who were assembled on the late occasion. Mr. Jonathan Clark, now living in Abington, 80 years old, but who then belonged to Boston, and was in Lock's company and Gardener's regiment, "who knew Warren, who had attended him as a physician," is positive in his testimony "that he was first wounded in the arm, and being pressed to retire, said he would never set the example of retreating to the 'bloody blacks.'" "The mortal wound," Mr. Clark says, "was in the head."

Gen. Warren's body had mouldered in the grave for ten months, when it was disinterred, which made it impossible at that time to ascertain the correctness of this supposition,—not so with the wound in the head. After the evacuation of Boston, Warren's friends were informed where he was buried. This was not as "Historian" says it was, "with the promiscuous slain, in the common trench of the dead;" though it was in the same grave with a person with a frock on. Warren's body was found stripped of its covering, while the other was buried in its common habiliments. Mr. Clark, above-named, as well as another soldier whose name I have forgotten, was here on the 17th, who assisted at the exhumation in the presence of the Doctor's two brothers, who were satisfied of the identity of the body, by many circumstances which they detailed. If stronger evidence of its identity were wanting, that afforded by Col. Revere, who set the artificial tooth, (which "Historian" says led to the "mere conjecture" that it was Warren's body,) and who recollected the wire he used in fastening it in, would afford it. One thing, however, is certain; that the skull was perforated by a musket ball in the upper part of the head, in such a place, as I am informed by professional gentlemen, would probably have produced sudden, though it might not instant death. "Historian" will observe that all these facts relating to the "time, place and manner" of Warren's death accord with the account which Major Small gave to Major Gordon, at the American minister's, in London, in the year 1791, when he told him that though he saw Warren fall, "life had fled before he saw his remains;" to Col. Trumbull, in 1786, at the time he was engaged in painting his celebrated historical picture, in which Major Small is represented in the exercise of the humane act which has been ascribed to him. (See Gordon's and Trumbull's printed letters.)

But "Historian" says "that according to the present popular impression, the probability is that the death of Warren was not known until after the British had buried all the slain of their opponents without knowing any sort of distinction among them." If it be the popular impression, it is time that this as well as some other "prevalent ideas" in "Historian's" communication was corrected. That Gen. Howe saw him fall is even to be inferred from Major Gordon's letter to Major Jackson of Philadelphia, above quoted, in which he relates the conversation between Gen. Howe and Maj. Small, at the time they supposed he fell, from the latter of whom he derived it; but that his death was known to the British commander is shown as well by that letter, as by the facts recorded in Dr. Jeffries' diary, of which, it is much to be regretted, great part was lost in a late fire, but from which leaf Samuel Swett had taken minutes, and the facts relating to which the present Dr. Jeffries, his son, perfectly recollects. The Doctor's story was that after the battle was over, while he was dressing a British officer, Gen. Howe came up to him and said, "Jeffries, there is a general officer fallen; do you know Warren?" "Do I know my right hand, you may as well ask?" says Jeffries. "Come here then," says Howe, "and let me know if the report is true that he is dead." Jeffries accompanied the General to the redoubt, and on the way Howe again asked him if he was certain he could identify the person; he replied anybody can do that, for he had a whitlow on a certain finger, naming it, by which he lost a nail; and he had also a particular artificial tooth. Howe soon pointed out the body, which was immediately recognized by Jeffries. When therefore "Historian" says that "Warren's body" could not have been known or he would have been buried with distinguished honors, even if he only was considered as a mason of a high order," he argues upon a probability against the truth. Not being a mason, I am not conversant of the customs of masons in this particular, (though I never heard of fallen enemies being buried with distinguished honors because they were masons; armies would have enough to do beside their "accustomed work" if this were the case,) and I am apt to think that "Historian" is in a similar cause with myself, as it appears that Warren was known, and was not only buried without any such honors; but, as it appeared at the time of the disinterment, the body was rifled of its covering.

If "Historian" thinks it is a "prevalent idea" that Warren could not have taken any important part in the events of that day, because he was dressed in his common clothes instead of his uniform; I should reply, that not being commissioned and qualified to act as an officer, he could not with propriety have worn a uniform, even if he was provided with one, which is not probable, for it is to be inferred from Gen. Ward's orderly book in my possession, that there was not a person in uniform nor an epaulette worn within the American lines till some time after Washington arrived at Cambridge. But that Warren was distinguished by his coadjutors as a "courageous" and "fearless patriot," besides other testimony, the toast that was given at a meeting of the field officers of the sixth brigade, under Col. Frye, who assembled two months after the battle at the house of Jonathan Hastings, to celebrate the memorable 4th of August, (repeal of the stamp act) is sufficient evidence. "Immortal honor to that patriot and hero, Doctor Warren, and the brave American troops who fought the battle of Bunker Hill on the 17th of June, 1775."

As "Historian" requested "such further light on the melancholy subject as the gentleman in question could give," I have mentioned these facts, and referred to the authority from which they are derived, as I did at the time I promulgated the words which it was said the enthusiastic patriot uttered, in the time of his country's greatest need, when the enemy seemed to be carrying all before them, and after he had received what he himself considered a mortal wound, "I am a dead man—fight on, my brave fellows, for the salvation of your country."

We have seen that it was not impossible, from the manner of his death, that he might thus have spoken, whether he was wounded once or twice before he fell. Those only, therefore, who are envious of the honors of the illustrious dead, will be eager to disprove the positive declaration of one who heard him. The evidence in support of the fact is of the highest authority. Let not his country, then, be deprived of the glorious example of the patriotic volunteer "without authority, yet whom none commanded," upon speculative surmises. The truth of the declaration ascribed to Warren is not only positively testified to; but the sentiment accords with his whole character. It is consistent with the account of his conduct at this particular crisis given of him by Col. Swett in his Historical Sketch of the Battle; of which, availing himself of the information collected at the late Jubilee, the public will be gratified to learn is preparing a new edition. "The chivalrous Warren," says he, "lingered to the last. His exalted spirit disdained, as a disgrace, a retreat the most inevitable. He animated the men to the most desperate daring, and when hope had fled he still disdained to fly." It is also perfectly compatible with the ardor of his feelings, when he said, "he would not set an example of retreating to the bloody blacks," and consistent to that fearless devotion to his country's cause, which led him previous to the battle to declare to Major Small, when doubting in conversation whether we should stick together, if the troops should be obliged to come to the last resort, (as I have the authority of Perez Morton, Esq., at that time Secretary of the Council, for asserting that he did,) "Depend upon it, my friend, whenever you pull a hostile trigger against my countrymen, you will find me among them."

The sentiment which he uttered in the hearing of Mr. Foster is a noble one. Though it does not increase Warren's fame, it adds something to his countrymen's pride; and no one that hears it can help throwing his thoughts back a few hours, to the interesting interview between him and Vice-President Gerry, to whose remonstrances against his exposing himself in the battle, Warren, perfectly aware of the necessity as well as the danger of it, so beautifully and prophetically replied, "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

I send you Mr. Foster's letter in reply to my interrogatories, received while copying the above, which I beg you will consider as a part of this communication.

I am, respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

W. H. SUMNER.

Texbury, August 3, 1825.

Sir,—I have read the piece in the Patriot in which it is doubted whether the toast you gave on the 4th of July, as the words of Warren, are correct. They are strictly true, and stated exactly as I told you on the morning of the anniversary. I knew Dr. Warren before that day: had seen him among the troops at Cambridge, and am certain of the fact. His words made a lasting impression on my mind, and I have repeated them a thousand times. I was a private in Capt. Walker's Company, in Bridge's Regiment, and was on the ground all the night before, building up the works. After the old engineer had fixed his stakes, Eliakim Walker, Jonathan Beard and myself, (who are both living I believe, Mr. Beard was at the celebration with me) thought he had not got them quite straight, and we moved one of them to square it up.

The day of the battle I was near the redoubt; we did all we could; but were obliged to give up at last. The last time the British came up we were moving off all in a hurry into the rear of the redoubt, to stop them as they came up, and there it was that I saw Gen. Warren; his clothes were bloody, when he cried out to us, "I am a dead man, fight on, my brave fellows, for the salvation of your country." We had no time to do much, but got off as soon as we could. I never saw Warren after that. The British fired upon us both small and large guns on the retreat, and more of us got off than could reasonably have been expected.

I knew Gen. Putnam and Col. Prescott, well. I saw Putnam riding round, very active. I saw him ten times, at least, I should think. Putnam went off with David Baily and a number of others, and they took tools with them to intrench on Bunker Hill, but a number of them came back again. I was close by Asa Pollard when he was killed. He was the first man that was killed. The ball struck the ground and hopped along before it struck him. Mr. Benjamin Baldwin rolled him up in a blanket, and they carried him off and buried him. I do not remember anything more of very great importance. I saw a good deal, and remember a great deal, but it is not worth writing that I know of. I am willing to tell all I do know. It appears to me the blood was running down his (Warren's) arm or side when he spoke the words, but we were all in such a hurry I wont be certain about that. I shall send an order for my money under the resolve.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

AMOS FOSTER.

General William H. Sumner.

REMINISCENCES OF CANAAN, LITCHFIELD CO., CONN.

Albany, 4th Twelfth mo. 1857.

To the Editor of the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register:

Should the historical importance of the accompanying documents, relating to the town of Canaan, Conn., entitle them to a place in your publication, it will be gratifying to the subscriber, and many others, who first saw the light in that town.

FRED. S. PEARSE.

The following is a copy of a paper found with the papers of the late Nathaniel Stevens, Esq. of Canaan, Conn.—

When Canaan was first settled, it was all a wild wilderness, except three Dutch families, who lived on the Ousatonic river. The first family of English that moved into the town was Samuel Bryant, from Stratford, Ct. He came in May, 1738, and John Franklin drove his ox team. That was the first ox team that was driven into the town. He settled down near where the Blackberry river enters into the Housatonic. He had six sons; and his seventh was the first English child that was born in Canaan. It was James Bryant, Esq., that afterwards lived in Nobletown, York

State. The next families that moved into the town were those of Daniel Lawrence and Isaac Lawrence, and the Hewit family from Plainfield. They were eleven days on their journey, and they arrived the 2d day of June, 1738, with their families. They had to cut their way through from New Hartford to Canaan.

Daniel Lawrence had some boards. He set up some crotches, and made him a hut to shelter him. Isaac Lawrence unloaded his goods under a pine tree, and not a board to cover him but the boards of his cart. He had dug a hole in the side of a hill, and laid up some logs, ten feet one way and twelve the other. Next day he went to Sheffield and got some boards and covered it; and there he lived with his family one year, and ten men besides his own family lived with him. Then he built a large log house, by a fine spring, where he lived several years. And people kept moving into the town very fast from all parts of the country. The produce of the earth was very fine—exceeding good corn the first year, and pumpkins exceeding large; and everything seemed to flourish.

There were places where the Indians had planted corn, where the trees had grown very large, among the hills; and they ploughed up pestles and pots, very beautiful, made of free stone, and arrow pikes a multitude. And it was supposed there was a settlement of Indians in that place in times past. Isaac Lawrence dug up bones and ashes, when he was digging his cellar, about five or six feet from the surface of the earth. They were thought to be men's bones by people that saw them.

The first winter, there was a great deal of snow, and no rain all winter—but was a very forward spring and fruitful summer. The second winter was very moderate; but there was one man found dead in the snow. It was supposed that he sat down on a log, being in liquor, and fell asleep, and pitched down into the snow, where his breath thawed the snow so that it strangled him. He was found not far from Forb's iron works. His name was Blackburn. He was the first person that died in Canaan. The third winter was very severe,—a vast deal of snow, and extreme cold, so that some cattle froze to death,—but it was a very fruitful summer after it.

Deer were very plenty about here, and some Indians lived about here that seemed to be very friendly. They belonged to Stockbridge and Barrington. One day the wife of Isaac Lawrence was up in her chamber, and she heard a noise. She looked out, and she saw thirty-three Indians coming up to the door. She gave herself up for lost. One of the Indians spoke to her, and told her not to be afraid, for they called to drink at the spring, and they were going to Stockbridge to a wedding, and that they were friends. But people were very much afraid of Indians all the time.

People kept settling so fast that, in the year 1741, they had a minister ordained—Mr. Elisha Webster from Farmington—and a great many people came a hundred miles to the ordination, and to see the country. And there was a man felling a tree to build the minister's house, and a limb struck him and crushed him into the earth. He was the second person that died in Canaan. His name was Richard Highsted. He left a wife and four children. The third was the wife of Thomas Hewit, with a fever.

In the year 1744, people began to be very much terrified about Indians, for there was a good deal of mischief done in the towns about by the Indians, so that our people built several forts in the town, and had a guard of soldiers in the town, which scouted the woods every day. But they never saw any signs of any enemy; but there were a great many alarms, but never any enemy appeared. Sometimes the forts would be crowded with people from other towns. In this situation we lived for two or three years.

Afterwards, the iron works were carried off by a flood; then rebuilt; and then, in the year 1750, they were burned to ashes, and a great many houses, and barns, and other buildings—eleven in all; and the same year the town was visited with great sickness among children. Thirty-three children and two old people died, almost all with the canker, and the next summer the dysentery carried off a great many old people. Thus the Lord hath visited us.

There were a great many bears killed about the town in 1760. There were five killed in one day. In the year 1765, there were five wolves killed in one day. There was a multitude of rattlesnakes on a hill that they call snake hill to this day. And Isaac Lawrence had a bitch that used to go out and be gone three days at a time; and she would come home all swelled up by being bitten by the snakes. Then she would dig a hole in the earth and bury herself up until it drew out all the poison; and then she would go out again. And thus she did till her hair all came off, and then they killed her.

The above named John Franklin was father to the late Silas Franklin, Esq.—the father of Charles W. Franklin, now (1857) living in Canaan.

SERMONS BY REV. SAMUEL PARRIS OF SALEM VILLAGE.

THE recent publication of the Danvers Church Records, in the Register, (Vol. XI., pp. 131, 316,) suggests a notice of a volume of his manuscript sermons, preached at Salem village, between his ordination in Nov. 1689 and May, 1694, now in the Library of the Connecticut Historical Society. The volume is a 12mo. very neatly and carefully written, and numbered on the first page as "Lib. 3" of the writer's sermons. It commences with his ordination sermon, prefixed to which is the following note:—

"My poor and weak ordination sermon at the embodying of a church in Salem Village, on the 19. 9. 1689. The Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr. Nicholas Noyse embodying of us: who also ordained my most unworthy self Pastor, and together with y<sup>e</sup> Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr. Sam: Phillips & the Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr. John Hale imposed hands. The same Mr. Phillips giving me y<sup>e</sup> right hand of fellowship with beautiful loveliness & humility."

The text is from Joshua, v. 9: "And the Lord said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from-off you."

The remainder of the volume consists of sacramental sermons, in regular course, (with occasional omissions and reference to "these sermons in loose papers, 8vo.") the last of which was preached, May 6, 1694, in the afternoon.

Before the sermon of "27 Mar. 1691—2. Sacrament day" is this note: "Occasioned by dreadful Witchcraft broke out here a few weeks past, & one member of this Church, & another of Sulem, upon publick examination by civil Authority, vehemently suspected for Shee-witches, [& upon it committed.]"

The text is from John vi. 71; and the running title, "Christ knows how many Devils there are in his church and who they are."

The two sermons of 11 Sept. 1692, preached "after y<sup>e</sup> condemnation of 6 Witches at a Court at Salem, one of the Witches, viz. Martha Kory in full communion with our Church,"† and entitled, "The Devils & his Instruments will be warring against Christ & his followers," from Revel. XVII. 14, "These shall make war with the Lamb," &c.

In the "improvement" of this subject, Mr. Parris remarks, that "It may serve to reprove such as seem so to be amaz'd at the war the Devil has raised amongst us by Wizards & Witches against the Lamb & his Followers, that they altogether deny it. If ever there were Witches, men & women in covenant with the Devil, here are multitudes in New England. Nor is it so strange a thing that there should be such; no, nor that some church members should be such. Pious Bishop Hall saith, The Devil's prevalency in this Age is most clear in the marvellous number of witches abounding in all places. Now hundreds (says he) are discovered in one shire; & if Fame deceive us not, in a village of 14 houses in the North, are found so many of this Damned brood. Heretofore only Barbarous Desarts had them, but now the civilized & Religious Parts are frequently pestered with them: Heretofore some silly ignorant old woman &c., but now we have known those of both sexes, who professed much knowledge,

Holiness & Devotion, drawn into this damnable practice.—Baxter's Apparitions & Witches, page 122."

With such lights to guide him, who can wonder that Mr. Parris went astray? We cannot be too often reminded that the witchcraft delusion was not of indigenous growth in America,—that it did not begin nor end at Salem Village,—or, as Mather states it, "that New England is not the only place circumvented by the wiles of the wicked and wiley serpent, in this kind."

COLD FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, JAN. 18 & 19, 1857.

From various sources we gather the following record of the two coldest days that have occurred the present century, as asserted by all observers. It is said that the winter of 1835 was as severe in the southern states, but in the northern nothing has exceeded it since 1800. The cold Friday of 1810 was a more blustering day, yet it did not freeze so hard. The time of the record is sunrise.

THE COLEMAN FAMILY.

[By WILLIAM C. FOLGER of Nantucket, Cor. Member N. E. H. and Gen. Soc.]

In reply to the article on the Coleman family by Joshua Coffin, Esq. of Newbury, I will remark that Thomas Coleman was one of the Partners or purchasers of one twentieth part of the Island of Nantucket in 1659, being of those chosen by the first ten purchasers as partners. He must have moved here long previous to 1680, the time fixed upon by my friend Joshua Coffin, Esq. He had a house lot and other lands set off to him at different times, by the Committee for laying out lands. I find by the old Book of Records that he was on a jury, Oct. 20, 1673.

He deeded his lands, houses, &c., to his son Tobias,* to take effect after his death, dated Nov. 3, 1673, at which time he was, by his own declaration in the Deed, a resident of Nantucket, as well as his son Tobias, who had a wife Lydia and a son Thomas.<sup>3</sup> See the copy appended.

Tobias<sup>3</sup> Coleman had a daughter Deborah, born May 25, 1676. Vide Book of Record of Births, Marriages and Deaths, in the office of our Town Clerk. Of the other children of Tobias I know nothing, as he moved away.

Thomas and Tobiah Coleman, both inhabitants in the town of Sherburne, upon the Island of Nantucket, sell Samuel Bickford half a share of Land, Nov. 12, 1678.

In presence of Peter Folger.
W<sup>m</sup> Worth.

Signed Thomas <sup>E</sup>- Coleman.

Of Benjamin Coleman<sup>3</sup> I do not know any thing.

Joseph Coleman<sup>3</sup> the son of Thomas<sup>4</sup> came to Nantucket and married Ann Bunker, daughter of George and Jane (Godfrey) Bunker. They had 2 children, viz. ; Joseph,<sup>3</sup> b. Nov. 17, 1673, who was drowned when young, in the fulling mill pond, and Ann,<sup>3</sup> born Nov. 10, 1675, who married Edward Allen, and had 10 children, viz. 6 sons and 4 daughters. From 4 of the sons are descended many bearing the name of Allen in Nantucket and New Bedford and vicinity, and from the daughters are also many descendants, the writer being descended from Rachel Allen, who m. Thomas Starbuck.

Joseph Coleman<sup>3</sup> died in 1690, as Letters of Administration on his estate were granted Aug. 12, 1690. Book 2, Deeds.

Thomas Coleman<sup>3</sup> died in 1682, and Letters of Administration were granted to Tobiah Colman, and Joseph also became a surety, Aug. 1, 1682.

John Coleman,<sup>3</sup> son of Thomas<sup>3</sup> and Joanna Folger, dau. of Peter and Mary (Morrell) Folger.

John, Jr.,<sup>3</sup> b. Aug. 2, 1667, m. Priscilla Starbuck.

Isaac,<sup>3</sup> b. Feb. 6, 1671-2, m. 1, Ann Reynold ; 2, Jane Watson.

Phebe,<sup>3</sup> b. 1674, m. Gershom Cathcart of Bristol Co.

{ Benjamin,<sup>3</sup> Jan. 17, 1676, died young.

John Colman,<sup>2</sup> son of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> died at Nantucket, in 1715 or 1716, and Joanna, his widow, d. 18 of 5 mo. 1719.

The name of Coleman is now common among the names of Nantucket, there being many descendants now living of John Coleman,<sup>2</sup> Thomas,<sup>2</sup> Solomon,<sup>2</sup> and Jeremiah.<sup>3</sup>

Isaac Coleman,<sup>2</sup> son of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> is said by Benjamin Franklin Folger of this town, the genealogist, to have accompanied Thomas Macy in the autumn of 1659, in the boat, in his emigration to this island, he then being a boy, about 12 or 13 years old. By the Town's Record of Births, Marriages and Deaths, I find "John Barnard and Bethiah his wife and Isaac Coleman ended their days y<sup>e</sup> 6th June 1669 being drowned out of a canoe between nantucket & ye Vineyard, at the same time Eleazer Folger was preserved." This Bethiah Barnard who was drowned was a daughter of Peter Folger, and sister to Abiah Franklin.

The Joanna<sup>2</sup> Coleman mentioned in the article under consideration, I think must have been Joanna Coleman, wife of John,<sup>2</sup> and daughter-in-law of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> and not an own daughter. There was a Benjamin Coleman drowned in Hampton, 21 Oct. 1650; perhaps he was son of this Thomas<sup>1</sup> Colman. Isaac<sup>2</sup> Colman who was drowned in 1669 was the son of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> and was unmarried.

Isaac<sup>2</sup> Coleman, son of John,<sup>2</sup> left no children, though he was twice married. To give the names of all the descendants of Ann (Colman) Allen<sup>2</sup>, daughter of Joseph Coleman,<sup>2</sup> and of John Coleman,<sup>2</sup> would swell this article to a greater length than my time or ability will now permit. They are spread through many States and Territories of the Union. Being a descendant, both of Joseph Coleman<sup>2</sup> and of John Coleman,<sup>2</sup> sons of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> it will do for me to quote from some verses characterizing the different families of Nantucket, "A learned Coleman very rare." I believe that line conveys the true characteristic of this family, although there have been very many worthy people among them.

ABSTRACT OF THE WILL OF ANDREW OSBORNE, OF LONDON, 1614.

Hartford, November 19, 1857.

DEAR SIR,—I forward you an abstract of an early will;—from the original in the collection of the Connecticut Historical Society, handsomely engrossed on parchment and in good preservation, except the fold on which were the signatures and attestation, which has been cut off. I know nothing of the history of the document or of its line of descent to the place of its present deposit: but as the names of Osborne, Plympton, and Center were all represented, at an early period, in New England, the will may possibly supply important genealogical information to some of the descendants.

Yours, &c.

J. H. T.

Andrew Osborne, "citizen and marchant taylor of London," by his will executed Nov. 20th, 1614, directs his body "to be hurried within his Majesty's free Chappell Church of St. George w<sup>thin</sup> his highnes Castle of Windsor," and gives his estate as follows:—

To his wife Margaret, the lease of his house "called the Garter house," within the castle of Windsor; the lease of his house called "the Bucks head" in Watling Street, parish of St. Augustine, city of London; and

Also, to his wife, the use for five years after his decease, with the rents and profits of his "five houses in Distaffe Lane," city of London; and of his "sixteen houses scituate and being without Temple Barr," in parish of St. Clement Danes; and of one house in Gutter Lane; with remainder as before, to his sons; and from the rents of these houses an annual payment of £200 to be made to Andrew, Henry, Richard and Alice Plumpton, the children of his son-in-law, Henry Plumpton, citizen and salter of London, now dwelling in Fryday Streete, city; and an annual payment of £100 to his "cozen Joane Center."

JOHN ENDICOTT.

What office did John Endicott sustain in Massachusetts, after his arrival hither, Sept. 6, 1628, to his being elected, by the Company in London, Governor of the same Plantation, April 30, 1629?

At the former date, the Abigail arrives at Naumkeag, with her passengers and supplies. Of the colonists thus come to their new residence, was Endicott, of whom Bradford wrote, he "brought over a patent, under the broad seal, for the government of Massachusetts."

Here is one of the clearest and most pertinent statements which could possibly be uttered to express the prominent ideas which its author most evidently intended to communicate. It distinctly portrays on the tablet of our perception a patent or charter, sanctioned by the King's seal, and for the purpose of governing the emigrants, who dwelt in Massachusetts, under the administration of John Endicott. We might as well assert that the daguerreotype of a man, impressed with a complete likeness on its plate, is fully represented even after its head is erased, as to assert that the image, made on our minds by Bradford's language, is full and exact, in its original lineaments, when deprived of its royal patent. We have never heard nor read that the author of such language varied a single hair, either in its phraseology or signification, though he must have had frequent suggestions to do it, had there been any need for it to be done, while preparing his History of Plymouth Plantation, embracing various concerns of its adjacent colonies, for the long period of twenty-nine years.*

When Nathaniel Morton issued his Memorial twelve years after the death of this honorable chief magistrate, in speaking of Endicott's arrival, he uses the same language and communicates the same thoughts, which his uncle did, and thus made a literal quotation from the said history, then in manuscript. Care for the good fame of his uncle as an accurate historian, and care for himself in a similar respect; his well known regard for veracity, and his earnest desire for the truthful representation of his adopted country's character in its rulers, laws and transactions, would have naturally kept him from publishing such a passage, and thus deliberately and consciously perpetuating a mistake—had he known or even suspected that it was so at fault. His relations to Bradford, as a resident in Plymouth with him, from 1623,—and as Secretary of State from 1645, under him for the years he was Governor, and otherwise in public and private concerns; and his own personal knowledge of Endicott's political course to his decease in 1665,—leave not the shadow of a probability that he would, with the most evident and fullest assurance, have seconded, as he did, the plain and positive statement of his uncle, that Endicott brought over a royal patent, unless he regarded it as an undoubted and indubitable fact.†

Before the Memorial was issued by Morton, he submitted it to the supervision of John Higginson and Thomas Thacher, in order to have it accompanied with their recommendation to the reader. These two ministers, from their long acquaintance with Bradford, Morton and Endicott, were well qualified for the discharge of this office, and to judge of the quotation made from the MS. of Bradford. Mark their language in the address.* They assign as a reason why the production of Morton and others like it should be encouraged, is, "that there may be a furniture of materials for true and full history in after-time." They add, "the work itself is compiled with modesty of spirit, simplicity of style, and truth of matter." Such caution and desire as here manifested on their part, as well as their acquaintance with Endicott in his political antecedents, is totally inconsistent with their suffering the quotation to remain unaltered, had it contained an essential error, as to a primary, prominent, and important matter of a royal patent, in the civil relations of Massachusetts.

In reference to this matter, Prince remarks,† "Governor Bradford and Mr. Morton seem to mistake in saying, 'he (Endicott) came with a Patent under the broad seal for the government of Massachusetts.'" He did this 108 years after the occasion of it, and 67 years from its publication by Morton, and confirmation of it by Messrs. Higginson and Thacher. What his reason was for the impression, so vaguely entertained and expressed, he did not assign, and thus came short of his extraordinary correctness. Suppose that one of our writers had stated, that Robert Gorges came over in 1623, as Governor-General of New England, and that he saw his commission for it, and this statement was repeated by another, and authorized by two more of credible qualifications,—but, many years after their concurrent testimony, an author arises and observes, that two of the first, just referred to, seemed incorrect in their statement, without so much as giving the lisp of a reason for his observation? Should we call this the presentation of facts and sound conclusions, which should lead us to disbelieve the relation of the two first authors? By no means. We should pronounce it insufficient to invalidate their testimony and set it aside.

That this is substantially the state of the case, the subsequent considerations are offered.

We look at the royal charter of Massachusetts, of 1628–9. This clearly narrates what took place, at different periods, in relation to such territory. It begins with the conveyance of it by James I., in 1620, with all the other territory, then comprised under the term of New England, to the Plymouth Company or Council. It then describes the sale of it in 1627–8, by this corporation, under their common seal, to six patentees, including John Endicott, and also the conveyance to the latter body of all authority to govern, and every other privilege essential to the regulation of a colony. The charter having so proceeded, notices the appearance of the royal grantor, so that he might secure to himself the fulfilment of a contract in which the Company or Council had promised him a fifth part of all gold and silver, obtained from any mines discovered in their jurisdiction, and, consequently, within the limits of Massachusetts. At this point a new relation is formed and assumed. "The Council having given their deed to the patentees, did not continue their mineral obligation to the King, but passed it over to them. How do we know this? He states it himself. He declares, in the charter of 1628–9, that the patentees, having received the territory from the Council, do henceforth retain it "of us, our heirs and successors, in free and common socage," and, as a collateral condition, they were to reserve a fifth of the gold and silver, obtained from mines, discovered within their bounds, as the Council had previously engaged to do. An exigency thus occurs, which demands some document or other, in order to preserve it and its conditions, subsisting between the King and the patentees. Who of these two parties should, according to rank and custom, take the lead in this matter? Evidently he, as their sovereign. In view, then, of nothing more than the nature of the case, he did do it and issue a document. What should we naturally expect this to be, coming from his order, short of a patent, describing the grant and all its privileges, and the mineral condition of them, under the royal or broad seal? Nothing. For his own security, he would do as much as this for the patentees, notwithstanding they had a deed from the Council under their common seal. In this state of the case, Endicott came over, and, from the preceding facts and considerations, with the declaration of Bradford and Morton, there is no reason to doubt that he brought such a document, as these two authors have described. The conclusion thus drawn is confirmed by the language of Johnson,* when referring to the emigrants of 1628, as "the much honored Mr. John Endicott come over with them to govern," and also by the letter of Dudley to the Countess of Lincoln. The last author states that, in 1628, "we procured a patent from His Majesty" for planting Massachusetts, "as also for the government of those who did or should inhabit within that compass, and, the same year, we sent Mr. John Endicott and some with him, to begin a plantation and to strengthen such as he should find there, which we [were?] sent thither from Dorchester and some places adjoining; from whom, the same year, receiving hopeful news." This passage plainly declares, that a patent was granted to proprietors of Massachusetts, by the King, for its government, and evidently denotes that the grant, so made, was before Endicott came to Naumkeag, and, therefore, must have been made to him and the other five patentees; and thus, with the testimony of Johnson, positively establishing the declaration of Bradford and Morton.

It is not unlikely that Prince may have formed his slight objection to the assertion of Bradford and Morton, just presented, from the subsequent passage in the letter of the Massachusetts Company in England to Endicott, dated April 17, 1629. "Since your departure, we have for the further strengthening of our grant from the Council of Plymouth, obtained a confirmation of it from His Majesty by his letters patent, under the broad seal of England, by which said letters patent we are incorporated into a body politic, with ample power to govern and rule all His Majesty's subjects that reside within the limits of our plantation."†

This may appear, in the minds of some, to suggest the two following questions: Does it not indicate that there was no patent under the broad seal, before its own existence, and, of course, none in 1628 for Mr. Endicott to bring over;—and that there was no government under him, because he had no such royal authority till 1629?

To the first question, we may truly reply, that to substantiate its affirmative, there is no conclusive evidence. Though only about a year passed between the Council's deed to the six patentees and the royal patent of 1629, yet this would not absolutely do away the need of a royal patent in 1628, so that these patentees, who had no prescience to foretell the speedy necessity of another similar document, might safely hold their settlement here of him, as the patent and charter of 1629 declares they did; and he still held them, instead of this Council, bound to him for the mineral stipulation;—nor dispense with the need of having a royal patent in 1629, because of the formation of a new company, including the six patentees, and properly requiring that the interests of their contract should be thus secured to them. While the quotation makes no denial of a royal patent in 1628, it has the succeeding phrase, "for the further strengthening of our grant from the Council," which implies, rather than otherwise, that there had been already such confirmation by some document, aside from the Council's deed, which document might very properly be a royal patent.

As to the second question, we know that colonial government was exercised through the English and other territories of America, by settlers like those of Massachusetts, having patents from companies chartered by their kings. As one of the nearest instances, we may point to the Plymouth Colony, who had nothing more than patents from the Council for New England, and yet they enacted and executed laws for their Commonwealth down to their union with Massachusetts. Of course, then, though the quotation from the letter might, in the opinion of some, seem to deny colonial government to Massachusetts until the patent of 1629, it is directly contrary to well substantiated fact. With regard then to the two preceding questions, we perceive no cause to answer them any otherwise than in the negative.

The subject before us seems to have received the attention of Hutchinson, as intimated in the first volume of his history. It is probable that he was reminded of it by Prince, or his Annals, who was cotemporary thirty-one years, and long a townsman with him, after he graduated at Harvard College, and also by the quotation already adduced from the Company's letter. Referring to the arrival of Endicott, Hutchinson remarks, "The patent from the Council of Plymouth gave a good right to the soil, but no power of government. A royal charter was necessary."<sup>6</sup> This declaration seems not to comport with its author's usual carefulness. The Council had the right of government over Massachusetts, which they conveyed to the six patentees, comprising Endicott, in common with the rest of their jurisdiction, as plainly narrated in the charter of 1628-9. This is strengthened by the fact, previously mentioned, that a similar deed or patent from them to Plymouth Colony did invest these with such power, which they did exercise down to the day of their being united with Massachusetts.

In addition to this, there are other like proofs. Of these, we have room now only for the patent of 1622, to Robert Gorges, from the same Council, granting him a part of Massachusetts. This document, after reciting various interests conveyed by it to him, proceeds to confer upon him, his heirs or assigns, or "deputies, lieutenants, judges, stewards or other officers, all prerogatives, rights, jurisdictions, royalties, and power of judicature, in all causes and matters whatsoever, criminal, capital and civil, arising, or which may hereafter arise, within the limits aforesaid," with all the privileges and rights as claimed by the grantors. This language evidently signifies that the patent of the Council did bestow on the Colony, which Robert Gorges expected to settle within his boundaries, not only a claim to the soil, but also a power of government, and, consequently, overthrows the position of Hutchinson. Therefore, even if the supposition be made that Endicott did not bring over a patent or charter with the royal seal which Bradford and Morton say he did, he and his associates had one from the Council of New England, on his arrival at Naumkeag, who did empower them to have government administered here, as they actually did Robert Gorges and the Colony of Plymouth in their respective jurisdictions.

Thus we have finished the course proposed. We have done it with the single purpose, to expose and reject the guises of error, and to discover and confirm the claims of truth.

Upon hearing the Guns, Capt. Lane, Capt. Robison, Capt. Herd, Messieurs. Elisha Plaisted, Roger Plaisted, Philip Hubbard, and Joseph Curtis, mounted each a Horse, well arm'd that were ready first, ordering about a dozen soldiers in the interim to run over the field a nearer way, in which their Horses had been, to relieve their Friends, but before the Horsemen got to the place intended, they were Ambuscaded by another party of Indians, who slew Capt. Robison and dismounted all the rest by killing their Horses under them, All of which made their escape from the Enemy, except Mr. Elisha Plaisted, whom they took Captive. Upon this Disaster Capt Harman and Capt. Lane rallied their Men together, to the number of 70, and engag'd the Enemy, but they being sheltered under covert of the bushes, could not do any great execution upon them, but forced 'em to retreat to a large Swamp, which gave cause of suspicion that they had a further Strength that lay in Ambush, which caus'd our Men to draw off. ## THE DESCENDANTS OF PETER HILL OF YORK CO., ME.,

With some Incidents relating to the French and Indian Wars,—gleaned from old Manuscripts of the time.

[BY USHER PARSONS.]

PETER HILL, a planter, was a member of the Assembly of Liconia or Ligonie in 1648. He probably settled in Biddeford, near the mouth of Saco river, a few years previous to this date, with his son Roger, who was admitted a freeman in 1653. New Hampshire, having sought admission into Massachusetts, was soon followed by the settlers of York County, who had become weary of the government of Thomas Gorges, and among them was Peter Hill, who applied for admission in 1652. He died in 1667.

Roger Hill, the son of Peter, married Sarah Cross of Wells, and died in 1696. Their children were Sarah, Hannab, John, Samuel, Joseph, Mercy, Benjamin, and Ebenezer. Each of these will receive brief notice, after which, our attention will be confined to the eldest son, John and his descendants. This John, whom we are to notice, settled in Saco, and after removed to South Berwick.

JOSEPH HILL resided in Wells, where he died in 1743. He married Sarah, daughter of Joseph Bowles of Welles and sister of Mary, the wife of Major Charles Frost of Kittery, who was killed by the Indians in 1697. [See his Life in Vol. 3, No. 4, in the Genealogical Journal, 1849.] Mr. Hill purchased the estate of Bowles. He had two sons, Joseph and Nathaniel, to whom he bequeathed a large estate, and among the property were several negroes. Joseph, Jr. died before his father, and left a large estate, which he ordered to remain in the Hill family, to perpetuate the name; and, if the two sons should die without issue, the real estate was to pass over to their cousins John and Elisha Hill of Berwick. He provided liberally for teaching his children, and, indeed, it may be said that all the immediate descendants of Roger Hill, were well educated for their day. The estate was administered by his son, his son-in-law, Sawyer, and his nephew, Hon. John Hill of Berwick. This Joseph Hill, senior, served as a lieutenant under his brother, Captain John, at Saco fort, and he held various offices in the town and parish, and was Collector of Customs.

SAMUEL HILL, the third son of Roger, was commander of a packet that carried supplies from Boston to the forts eastward, in the time of the Indian wars, and thus acquired the title of Captain. He was taken captive by the French and Indians about 1701, and detained some years in Canada with his wife. In 1704, Oct. 7, he writes to his brother John, from Canada:—

"Loving brother and sister,—My kind love with my wife's, hoping these few lines will find you in good health, as they leave us at this time, blessed be God for it. This is to give you to understand that we are not likely to come home until next summer, when there will be a general exchange of prisoners, and the reason of my not coming home this fall is, because our government sent no prisoners home, for those which this governor sent by Livingstone, for which there was a great deal of reason to have done, and in the mean time we remain sufferers, whereas, if the governor at Boston had sent them, I should have come home with my family, and a great many others, nay, in so much that if the governor of Massachusetts had but sent one man for me, this governor would have let me had my family home with me. But I desire to wait, as Job did, for my appointed time is not come. I pray give my respects to Major Hammond and wife, cousin Pearce, Charles Frost, John Frost and their wives, and to Mr. Whittemore. Brother and sister Hill, (i. e. Ebenezer and wife) desire to be remembered to you both, and all friends, desiring your prayers, and of all God's people.

Your loving brother and sister,
Samuel and Elizabeth Hill."

The Governor of Canada sent this Capt. Samuel Hill to Boston to arrange an exchange of prisoners. From Kittery he writes to John Hill, at Berwick, May 10, 1705:—

"Loving Brother,—These are to acquaint you of my health, and to let you know I have got leave of his Excellency at Boston to go to Wells and visit my friends there. Here are Brother and Sister Storer and Brother Hill (Joseph) come from Wells yesterday, with whom I intend to go thither in their boat, and I hope to return next week. The Governor has promised that I shall continue here till the messenger returns from Canada. Your loving brother."

The following year, Jan. 13th, 1706, Samuel writes from Portsmouth, thus:—

"Loving Brother,—After my kind love to you and to your wife, praying that you would be very careful of yourself in going into the woods, for the enemy will assuredly be skulking about to take all advantages, and I am afraid they are near at hand, for they did design mischief this winter, before I came out of Canada, and people's boldness and security denote sudden destruction, therefore I pray, let not people's carelessness be your danger."

Ebenezer Hill, a younger brother, being in Canada with his wife and child at the same time, writes from Quebec, March, 1704-5, to his brother John at Berwick, expressing great discontent in Canada, adding,

"Cousin Pendleton Fletcher," meaning his sister's son at Saco, "Mary Sayer, brother Joseph's daughter, and Mary Storer of Wells, with our other friends and neighbors here, are all well, and myself, wife and child are well, and send kind love to you all, begging your prayers that God would direct, protect and keep us, and in due time deliver us.

Your loving brother and sister, Ebenezer and Abiel Hill."

BENJAMIN, the son of Roger, died in youth.

EBENEZER HILL, the fifth son, was, as may be seen above, a prisoner in Canada, and he was taken in the following manner:—"Several Indians in Saco, who professed to be friendly, and were frequently in the houses of the inhabitants, called at Mr. Hill's in the usual manner one morning and partook of some food which was offered them. They left the house, but soon after returned, and, finding Mr. Hill gone, told his wife they must make her prisoner. They proceeded to plunder such articles as they could carry away, and destroyed others. When Mr. Hill returned, he found his wife secured, having her arms pinioned, and the savages employed in emptying a featherbed. He gave himself into their hands, and the Indians decamped with their prisoners." They were carried to Canada, where they remained three years. Their oldest son Ebenezer was born in Canada, and was afterwards called the Frenchman. Ebenezer Hill resided at Saco, and died there in 1748, aged 69. He held many town and parish offices, and was deacon of the church. His children were Ebenezer, (born in Canada) Dorothy, Susanna, Benjamin, Lydia, Joshua, and Jeremiah. Jeremiah, the youngest, was justice of the peace, married a Miss Smith, daughter of Captain Daniel, and was father of the late Hon. Jeremiah Hill, collector of the port of Saco.

Sarah, the daughter of Roger Hill, married Pendleton Fletcher, a man of distinction in Saco. He died a prisoner in Canada, and his widow married William Priest.

Hannah, married Lieut. Joseph Storer, who was an active officer in the second Indian War in Wells, and had a garrison near the late Dr. Hemmenway's church. He was the ancestor of the Hon. Joseph, Clement and Woodbury, and of Commodore Storer, and Prof. D. H. Storer of Boston.

Mary married Daniel Littlefield, and their descendants are numerous in Wells and Kennebunk.

Leaving the other children of Roger Hill, our attention will now be directed chiefly to his oldest son, named John, and his descendants, and to the Indian war, with which his life was interwoven.

JOHN HILL was born in Saco, and there, like his brothers and sisters, received a good common-school education. In 1686 he entered into partnership with Francis Backhouse [modernized to Backus] in building a sawmill at a place called Backus's Creek, they owning equally. By the contract, Backus was to furnish timber, and Hill "to learn how to kilter the saws, and keep them in order."

In 1689 the Indian war broke out, called King William's war, which lasted nearly ten years. A military company was called into service this year, under the command of Edward Seargent, and John Hill was commissioned by Thomas Danforth its ensign. After this he was employed sometimes in scouting, but served mostly in the forts at Saco, Wells and South Berwick. In 1690 the settlement at Salmon Falls was destroyed and many killed or carried into captivity, and also the fort at Falmouth, near Portland. The neighboring garrisons drew off to Saco, and from thence the inhabitants mostly fled for protection to Wells, and among them the Hill family, where Joseph and Samuel, Hannah and Mary, with their parents, remained permanently. John, however, remained in the fort at Saco.

He had, the preceding autumn, received orders from Col. Benj. Church, the renowned Indian fighter, to scout, and "to command the twenty soldiers quartered at Saco garrison." It was ordered too, that "the 40 soldiers posted at Saco, Scarboro', and Spurwink, (Cape Elizabeth,) be in separate commands, but are to attend to the commands of Ensign John Hill, respectively, as they are concerned upon their scoutings."

Signed "Benj. Church."

The mother of Ensign Hill probably remained in the fort with her son at Saco, as we find the following letter, written to her from Wells, the 7th of May, 1690, by her husband, Roger Hill:—

"Dear and loving wife,—These are to let you know that we are all well here, blessed be God for it, and all our children remember their duty to you. The Indians have killed Goodman Frost and James Littlefield, and carried away Nathaniel Frost, and burnt several houses, here in Wells, and I would have our son John Hill to hire a boat if he can, to bring you and some of our things by water, for I fear it is not safe to come by land. Son John, be as careful of your mother as possibly you can, for it is very dangerous times; the Lord only knows whether we shall ever see one another any more. Praying for your prosperity,

Your loving husband, until death,

Roger Hill.

Remember my love to son Fletcher and daughter, and all their children, and to all my neighbors in general.

Son Storer and wife remember their duty to you, and love to their brother Fletcher and all cousins, and yourself."

The following year Mr. Hill was stationed at Wells, where he received the following note from the Governor's Secretary, dated Boston:—

"Ensign Hill at Wells"

These come to accompany 35 soldiers ordered for enforcing of the garrisons at Wells, who are to be put under your conduct until Captain Convers returns, within ten days. Expecting you will carefully improve them for scouting to observe the motion of the enemy"—

On the 25th of January, 1692, the Indians surprised the town of York, killed seventy-five of the inhabitants, carried about the same number into captivity, and nearly destroyed the town. On the 10th of June following a large force of more than two hundred French and Indians made a furious attack on the garrison at Wells, commanded by Captain Convers, who, with fifteen regular soldiers, aided by a few families collected there for protection, repulsed the enemy with a heavy loss. This was considered the most brilliant achievement of the war. Cotton Mather, in his "Magnalia," describes Ensign Hill's good conduct in the fight, and of his meeting a flag of truce of the enemy to hold a parley, and of his escape from an ambush the Indians had prepared to take him. The people in the garrison, women as well as men, assisted bravely in passing cartridges and firing muskets at the enemy.

After this victory Hill was promoted to a lieutenant, and was stationed at Quampegan and Newichewannock, in South Berwick, under Major Charles Frost, who was stationed at Frost's Garrison, at Kittery, and commanded all the forts on the east side of the Pascataqua. Spies were usually sent by the Indians to reconnoitre before the enemy approached places intended for destruction, who lurked about the woods, and required a constant ward and watch. The following letter to Lieutenant Hill gives an idea of the vigilance and circumspection necessary to be observed in these trying times.

Hill's station was about five miles from Major Frost's Garrison and dwelling, where official duties required his frequent visits. A daughter of the Major, named Mary, attracted his attention, and soon after became his wife. Another daughter of Frost married Ichabod Plaisted, then in the legislature; another married Lieut. Joseph Storer of Wells.

Towards the close of April, 1693, Hill received the following letter from three of the Council in Boston:—

"Capt. John Hill"

Sir, His Excellency hath been pleased to commissionate & appoint you to take the charge of a company for their Majesty's service, and pursuant thereunto hath sent you a Commission of Captain. By virtue of a Commission and Instructions given to us by his Excellency, with the advice and consent of the Council, we have ordered Capt. Convers to erect a garrison upon Saco River, where his Excellency intends to be, to give further orders and directions about the same;—these are to order you to march, with such of your company as are suitable unto Saco, there to attend Capt. Convers's orders or such other orders as you shall receive from his Excellency Major Frost, or from us, from time to time. There are 80 men to be sent to Saco; for dispatch, in erecting 3d garrison,—fifty whereof will be drawn off with Capt. Convers, to march East, in an expedition for their Majesty's service, and then the remainder, which will be 30, together with those posted at Wells, are to be your company, yourself to keep the post at Saco and see the garrison finished. Those at Wells to be left under the conduct of your lieutenant, Jeremy Storer. Signed,

Barth<sup>m</sup> Gedney,
John Wally."

Immediately after John Hill's arrival in Saco, his brother-in-law, Ichabod Plaisted, writes to him, June 9th, 1693, "Last night we had four persons carried away from the Garrison by the Indians, and one wounded. The place was at Sturgeon Creek, and those carried away were Nicholas Frost's wife, and two children, and the Widow Smith."

Captain Hill was married to Mary Frost, Dec. 12th, 1694. He remained in the command of Fort Mary for many years, until 1700. His commission, of the same tenor as the former one by Governor Phips, was renewed in Sept. 1696, by Lieut. Governor Stoughton. The following letter was addressed to him by his father-in-law, Major Frost, soon after the cowardly surrender by Capt. Chuuh of Fort Pemaquid, on the Kennebec, and when the combined force of French and Indians had devastated the whole province of Maine, with the exception of Saco, Wells, York, and Pascataqua, and when it was feared these must soon fall.

The fort at Saco was not surrendered by Hill, although all the inhabitants of the town were driven away or killed, and many of Hill's soldiers were waylaid and murdered while venturing out of the fort.

Early this year, 1696, died Roger Hill, the father of Capt. John Hill. A division of the movable estate took place soon after, as appears by this receipt of the children.

"Wells December 18th 1696—Received of Capt. John Hill Administrator to father Hill's estate of the movables to our full satisfaction. Rec<sup>d</sup> by us whose names are hereunder written,—Joseph Storer, Samuel Hill, Joseph Hill, David Littlefield, Pendleton Fletcher."

The real estate was divided among the children in Oct. 1702, by mutual agreement; John, the oldest son, taking a double portion, and the others all sharing equally. Previous to this, Pendleton Fletcher had died in captivity in Canada, and his widow had married William Priest, whose name appears among the signers of the agreement, and Ebenezer Hill was absent in Saco; otherwise the names were as in the former paper relating to movable estate.

The widow of Roger Hill made her home with her son John, and conveyed to him or his widow all her property at Berwick, in 1720, where she died soon after.

Captain Hill, while at Saco, acted as agent for Col. William Pepperrell, father of Sir William, in directing the building of vessels, to whom Pepperrell writes, Nov. 2, 1696—

"Sir,—With much trouble I have gotten and sent men for the sloop, and desire you to dispatch them with all speed. I think it may be safest to mast and bend her sails before you launch her. Desire you to hasten them night and day, for, sir, it will be dangerous tarrying there, and chargable keeping the men on pay. I shall send you a barrel of rum and a barrel of molasses, and there is a cask of wine to launch her with. So with my service to yourself and good lady, your humble servant, William Pepperrell."

Capt. Hill received the following sad tidings of the death of his father-in-law, Major Charles Frost, dated Wells, July 10, 1697, from his brother-in-law, Joseph Storer :—

“ Brother Hill

Wells the : 10th July 1697

Major John March, who succeeded to the command after Major Frost's murder, writes to Capt. Hill :—

Sir,—My kind respects and service to yourself, hoping these will find you in health, as I am, blessed be God for it. Sir, I thought it good to write to let you understand I am now at Wells, and thought it convenient to inform you of my proceedings as to ordering out scouts from Wells to Saco to yourself, by reason of the inhabitants of Wells standing in much need of guards in marshes now in their hay season. I have ordered scouts to come every two days to you, but they shall come mounted and in the night, and stay with you the next day, and to return to Wells the next night. Likewise I have sent out two or three Englishmen with Lieut. Leatherby, with about 30 Indians, who have orders from myself to go out as far as Casco (Portland) and Black Point, and they are to lay out in ambuscade a week or ten days, I in hopes they will make some discovery of the enemy, or come up with them, and sir if they should have occasion for any provisions or any assistance by way of advice, pray sir supply and assist in the matter, and sir for what provisions they have, I will give you a receipt, and in so doing you will oblige

Your friend and servant to command

John March, Major.

Mr. Lemuel Putnam Grosvenor, who died in Pomfret, Conn., on the 19th inst., has bequeathed to the Connecticut Historical Society the sword that was owned and used by General Israel Putnam during our revolutionary struggle.—Jan. 27th, 1858.

REV. THOMAS WATERMAN

Was born in London on the 31 December, 1774, became a member of Dr. Rippon's church in that city, and, for a short period previous to his immigration, he was a preacher of the Congregational order. He came to the United States in 1801, and having embraced the religious tenets of the Calvinistic Baptists, he was installed as the first pastor of the Baptist Church in Charlestown, Mass., on the 7th of October, 1802. On that occasion, the Rev. Dr. Stillman preached the sermon, Rev. Dr. Baldwin gave the charge, and Rev. Stephen Gano, the right hand of fellowship. Soon after his settlement he married Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald McNeil, Esq.; she died in Charlestown, in June, 1804, aged 25 years. Mr. Waterman's connection with the church in Charlestown was of short duration, only eight months, and in some respects unhappy, being for a time deprived of his ministerial office, yet afterwards restored and preached with great acceptance. Having lost his wife, and his pastoral relation dissolved as before mentioned, he left Charlestown and removed to Bow, N. H., where he was settled as pastor of the Baptist Church in that town, in the year 1804. While here he married Miss Mary Gault, a lady of great intelligence, possessing the virtues and graces of the Christian in an eminent degree; his success and happiness in after-life were in a great measure the result of her good management and kindness of heart.

On the 4th of July, 1806, Mr. W. delivered an address to the "Republican Citizens" of Concord, N. H. The celebrated Daniel Webster also addressed the "Federal Republicans," on the same day and in the same town. These addresses were printed, and both exhibit a candor and forbearance highly creditable to their authors, at a time when party spirit ran high in the community.

Mr. Waterman resigned his pastoral office in Bow in 1807, and it is supposed he was subsequently Preceptor of Addison Academy, as an individual of the same name held that office in 1810. In the spring of 1811, he removed to Woburn, Mass., where he was engaged to preach by the year, (he was not settled.) Besides attending to his ministerial duties, he kept a private school for boys, a position he was eminently qualified for, and in which he was very successful.

He died suddenly at Woburn, on the 23d of March, 1814, in the 40th year of his age. His wife survived him, and was living in 1854. One who knew him says, "he was a highly educated man, very eloquent and popular as a preacher; his death was deeply lamented by a large circle of friends, and by the community generally among whom he dwelt."

The following notice appeared in the Boston Weekly Messenger of April 1, 1814:—"Died at Woburn, the 23d ult., in a fit of apoplexy, Rev. Thomas Waterman, aged 39, pastor of the Baptist Society in that town; a man of distinguished talents and honor, a blessing to the church of Christ, and universally esteemed."

His children were as follows, all by his last wife.—1. Thomas B., educated at Dartmouth Col., grad. 1826; emigrated to the West and d. young. 2. Alfred, died young. 3. Josephine, married Dr. J. M. Brodhead, and resides in the city of Washington.

CHURCH RECORDS OF FARMINGTON, CONN.

He was so feeble that he remembreth [nothing after coming down the last mountain by sight, and memory and strength in a manner] gone;—but God who leadeth the blind in a way that they know not, directed him to John Norton, Jun., who was thrashing in his barn, who took him in and put him to bed,—called friends about him, who were diligent in the use of means for his recovery, after some time spent betwixt hope and fear, as not knowing whether he would die or live;—He lying in a sad manner, grating his teeth [and round in his hand that pleased God he exhibited and came to rights again.]

The day in which this fell out was January 6, 1682,—a snowy Saturday,—especially the latter part of it. Had the man not been directed home, in likelihood he had perished in the wilderness, and perhaps have been so far covered with snow as not to have been found 'till wild fowls or beasts had preyed on him.

BIOGRAPHICAL MATERIALS, COLLECTED FROM FUNERAL SERMONS.

[By PLINY H. WHITE, Amherst, Mass.]

BROWN.—Discourse at the Funeral of DANIEL M. BROWN, by Rev. Orville G. Wheeler. "Daniel M. Brown was a man of fine intellectual abilities. There was a capaciousness in his mind which enabled him to entertain a subject, make it a matter of well-directed thought, upon which was brought to bear a judgment, which, for one in his circumstances, was remarkably sound and discreet. His mathematical powers were extraordinary, and as to his knowledge of his mother tongue he surpassed most men of ordinary pursuits." He was drowned in attempting to cross the Lake from Plattsburgh, N. Y. to South Hero, Vt., May 28, 1849.

BRADFORD.—Discourse delivered at Franchestown, N. H. on the last Sabbath in July, 1838, in commemoration of the character and usefulness of Rev. MOSES BRADFORD, by Rev. Ephraim P. Bradford. Mr. Bradford was born at Canterbury, Ct., August 6, 1765. His parents were William and Mary Bradford. He was the fourteenth and youngest child of his mother, and a descendant in the fifth generation from William Bradford, second Governor of Plymouth Colony. He prosecuted his studies under the tuition of an elder brother, who was a man of a vigorous and cultivated mind, and an eloquent preacher; and he entered the senior class in Dartmouth College, after remaining in which institution a few months, he received a regular degree, with a good reputation for talents and scholarship, in 1785. He pursued the study of theology with his brother, then pastor of a Congregational Church in Rowley, Mass. He was married, Nov. 4, 1788, to Dorothy Bradstreet, who died June 24, 1792. His second wife was Sarah Eaton of Franchestown, N. H., who survived him. He died at the house of his son in Montague, Mass., June 14, 1838.

BENNETT.—Discourse on the Life and Character of Rev. ALFRED BENNETT, delivered at Homer, N. Y., May 18, 1851, by Rev. H. Harvey. Mr. Bennett was born at Mansfield, Ct., Sept. 26, 1780, and became a resident of Homer, N. Y. in 1803, commencing life there as a farmer. With great reluctance he entertained the idea of going into the ministry, and only decided to do so, after a severe mental struggle of two years. He was ordained pastor of the Baptist Church in Homer in 1807. During his ministry of twenty-five years at that place, he baptized 770 persons. In 1832 he became agent of the Baptist General Convention for Foreign Missions, and labored as such till his death in 1851.

BENNETT.—Discourse delivered at the Funeral of Rev. JOSEPH BENNETT, at Woburn, Mass., Nov. 22, 1847, by Rev. John W. Chickering. Mr. Bennett was born in Framingham, Mass., May 13, 1798, was graduated at Harvard College in 1818, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1821. He was ordained at Woburn, Jan. 1, 1822, and in the following February married Mary Lamson. In 1846, in consequence of severe disease of the digestive organs, he became subject to extreme depression, with suicidal tendencies, which resulted in death by his own hand in November, 1847. His father, having fallen into a similar state of gloom, in consequence of an affection of the liver, and being seized with an impression that a famine existed, and that the only way to save his family from starvation was to starve himself, resisted for fourteen days all efforts and entreaties, and died of inanition.

BURNHAM.—Discourse delivered at the Funeral of REV. ABRAHAM BURNHAM, D. D., Pembroke, N. H., Sept. 23, 1852, by Rev. Daniel J. Noyes. Mr. Burnham was born in Dunbarton, N. H., Nov. 18, 1775. He was the son of Samuel and Mary Burnham, both of whom were eminent for their piety. At the age of fourteen he determined to procure a liberal education, but was not able to execute his purpose till after he had attained the age of twenty-one. He entered the Junior Class in Dartmouth College in August, 1802, being then 27 years old. The following was his division of time during the College course: "Six hours for close study, as close as my weak and pained eyes will admit; six hours for deep thought, reflection, and mentally reviewing my lessons; eight hours for sleep; one for meals, and three for manual labor to pay for my board." He was graduated with honor in 1804, and taught the Academy at Bradford, Mass., from May 1805 till February 1807, when he commenced the study of Theology with Rev. Dr. Parish of Byfield, and after studying four or five months was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Essex Middle Association at Topsfield, Mass. March 2, 1808, he was ordained Pastor of the Congregational Church at Pembroke, N. H., and continued in that pastorate till Nov. 1850, when, "at his own repeated and earnest request, his people consented to receive a successor in his place." He was Secretary of the New Hampshire Home Missionary Society from 1822 to 1837, in which last year he was elected President of the Society and retained the office till his death. He was appointed Treasurer of the General Association of New Hampshire in 1809, and was never absent from one of its annual meetings till 1851, when feeble health prevented his attendance. The degree of D. D. was conferred on him by Dartmouth College in 1850. He died September 21, 1852.

HOWE.—Discourse preached in Pepperell, Mass., July 21, 1840, at the Funeral of REV. JAMES HOWE, by Rev. George Fisher. Mr. Howe was born in Jaffrey, N. H., Aug. 13, 1796, prepared for College at New Ipswich Academy, was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1817, taught a High-School at Concord, Mass. for one year, was graduated at Andover Theological Seminary in 1821, was ordained Pastor of the Church and Town of Pepperell, Mass., Oct. 16, 1822, and relinquished that connection in January, 1832, to become the minister of the Evangelical Congregational Society, then recently formed. He was recognized as minister of that Society by an Ecclesiastical Council, Feb. 1, 1832, and retained that relation till his death, which took place July 19, 1840. He married, Oct. 13, 1823, Miss Harriet Nason of Harvard, by whom he had six children. "He possessed a good, and in some respects a superior mind. It was a far-seeing and sagacious mind, a well-furnished and well-cultivated mind. Under his ministry the church increased from about seventy to nearly four hundred members.

If materials of this character are desirable for the Register, more will be furnished. [Let us have them, but older are more desirable.]

NEW WEAPON OF WAR.—We were shown a breach-loading rifle yesterday, which, for facility, the combined efforts of loading, safety, and self-capping, is, it strikes us, the most perfect weapon of its class we have seen. It is, moreover, in whole or in part, on the Minnie principle. It was invented by Mr. J. C. Day, but of what part of the country we did not learn.—[National Intelligencer, 1855.]

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE FAMILY OF REV. THOMAS WELLS, FIRST MINISTER OF AMESBURY, MASS.

[Br D. W. HOTT.]

REV. THOMAS WELLS was settled as first pastor of the first church in Amesbury, in 1672 or 1673. Occasional preaching had been enjoyed in the "new town" for ten or twenty years before that time, but he was the first who was recognized as the town's minister. A committee were chosen, May 11, 1672, "to see if they can obtain Mr Weels to be helpfull to us in the work of the Ministry." He was admitted as a commoner in 1673-4, and was evidently a man of much influence and usefulness in the new town.

Various circumstances render it extremely probable, if not almost certain, that Rev. Thomas Wells was the Thomas Wells who was born Jan. 11, 1646-7, youngest son of Dea. Thomas Wells of Ipswich. The generations of the family are here numbered in accordance with that idea, Dea. Thomas being considered the first, and Rev. Thomas the second generation. If the above is the date of the birth of Thomas,<sup>1</sup> he must have been 87 yrs. 6 mos. old at the time of his death. According to the inscription on his tombstone, he was then in his "87th year;" but that may have been intended to imply that he was between 87 and 88, though the expression, if properly used, would justify Farmer's statement, that his age was 86. Thomas<sup>1</sup> Wells of Ipswich was "a gentleman of large property," and it has been supposed that he was a physician. He had land granted to him at Ipswich in 1635, and took the Freeman's oath at Boston, May 17, 1637. He died Oct. 26, 1666. From a branch of his family, the town of Wells, Me., took its name. Further particulars respecting him and his family may be found in vol. 4 of this periodical, pp. 11, 12.

By his will, Thomas<sup>1</sup> made provision for his son's "going to College;" but his name is not to be found among the early graduates of any American college. Rev. Thomas<sup>2</sup> Wells enjoyed the distinction, however, of being the first individual who received the honorary degree of A. M. from Harvard College. In the triennial catalogue of 1727, his name is put at the bottom of the class of 1669; in 1745, perhaps earlier, it was separated from the others by a line, and 1703 added. In 1830, the names of those who had received honorary and ad eundem degrees, were made a distinct division of the catalogue, and Thomas Wells was placed at the head of the list, under the year 1703. It is possible that he may have been at one time a member of the class of 1669; but if he received the degree in 1703, he must then have been 56 years old, and his name might have been placed under 1669 only because that class were near his own age.

A copy of the will of Rev. Thomas<sup>2</sup> Wells is to be found on the Probate Records at Salem. It was dated Aug. 7, 1728, proved July 29, 1734. He there mentions four sons, three daughters, four daughters-in-law, and NOTE. Richard Wells was one of the original proprietors and commoners of the town of Salisbury, and it would naturally be surmised that the Wells family of Salisbury and Amesbury were descended from him. "Dea. Richard Wells" died July 12, 1672, and we have no evidence that he left any children.

In a previous number of this magazine (July, 1850, p. 261), is found "Richard Wells, 26," and two or three other Salisbury names, among the "Passengers for Virginia, August, 1635," "in the Globe of London, Jeremy Blackman Mr." two sons-in-law; three sons and one daughter-in-law having died before that time. John Martin, the other son-in-law, is not mentioned. The dates of the deaths of Mr. Thomas Wells and his wife, as given on the town records, correspond with the inscriptions copied below, except that the double date, 1726-7, is given. From the spelling and appearance of the inscription, one would suppose Mr. Wells's tombstone to be of later date than those around it.

Dartmouth then embraced, besides its present territory, Westport, New Bedford and Fair Haven; and her records, more shattered, probably, than those of any other town in Massachusetts, are essential to the early history of these towns, if not to that of the rise of Quakerism in New England; and it is hoped that public action will rescue them before it is too late. The Proprietors' records have not been committed to the clerk of Dartmouth, but remain in the hands of George Gifford, Esq., of Westport, son to their last clerk.

NOTES ON THE INDIAN WARS IN NEW ENGLAND.

CHAPTER III.

"The prudent discourse of this Indian prevailed so far as that Alexander yielded to go, only requesting that he might go like a Sachem, with his men attending him, which, although there was some hazard in it, they being many, and the English but a few, was granted to him. The weather being hot, the Major offered him an horse to ride on, but his squaw and divers Indian women being in company, he refused, saying he could go on foot as well as they; entreating, only, that there might be a complying with their pace, which was done; and, resting several times by the way, Alexander and his Indians were refreshed by the English; no other discourse happening while they were upon their march, but what was pleasant and amicable. The Major sent a man before, to entreat that as many of the Magistrates of that Colony as could, would meet at Duxbury. Wherefore, having there had some treaty with Alexander, not willing to commit him to prison, they entreated Major Winslow to receive him to his house, until the Governor, who then lived at Eastham, could come up. Accordingly he and his train were courteously entertained by the Major. And albeit not so much as an angry word passed between them whilst at Marshfield. Yet proud Alexander, vexing and fretting in his spirit, that such a check was given him, he suddenly fell sick of a fever. He was then nursed as a choice friend. Mr. Fuller, the physician, coming providentially thither at that time, the Sachem and his men earnestly desired that he would administer to him, which he was unwilling to do; but by their importunity was prevailed with to do the best he could to help him, and therefore gave him a potion of working physic, which the Indians thought did him good; but his distemper afterwards prevailing, they entreated to dismiss him, in order to a return home; which upon [his] engagement of appearance at the next court, was granted to him. Soon after his being returned home he died. And this is the truth and substance of what concerns transactions with Alexander, concerning which so many fabulous stories have been spread abroad."

Crispinus Mather

The remarkable particularity of this narrative gives it the first consideration, and is a very strong evidence of its truth. It fully corroborates Mr. Hubbard's account, so far as that author goes; and Mr. Mather, like him, was well aware that various other reports had gone abroad, and it is very clear that both of those gentlemen had inquired into the matter, and were fully convinced of the truth of what they had given. It is pretty evident, however, that Mr. Mather intended to make the most of his story; was willing his readers should think the number of Indians with Alexander was very large, while he took good care to keep within the bounds of truth, by making no statement as to their real number. This historical license cannot be defended, and is too easily seen through to have any very bad effect; as it only tended to exaggerate the danger the few English were in, and to make their conduct appear the more heroical. The Indians were surprised, with their guns standing outside of their wigwam; but nobody has said how many "guns" they had. Now it seems pretty clear that the company of Indians captured were upon a fishing design, upon the cool and beautifully shaded banks of the little lake before mentioned, and had not the remotest fears of being taken for enemies. Had they been upon any mischievous design, or had there been any plot undertaken, would they have allowed themselves in broad day to be surprised as is related? They doubtless saw the English approach, and had no suspicion that they were coming upon them as enemies.

Some time after this transaction, when its justice and propriety had been discussed in various quarters, the Rev. John Cotton* of Plymouth wrote to Dr. Mather of Boston concerning it, "lest you should," he observes, "through misinformation, print some mistakes." What he wrote, he says, was from Major Bradford's own mouth, the Major being one of the party who seized Alexander. Mr. Cotton remarks briefly that Alexander was found at Munponset river, not many miles from Plymouth, "with about 8 men, and sundry squaws. He was there about getting canoes. He and his men were at breakfast under their shelter, their guns being without. They saw the English coming, but continued eating; on Mr. Winslow's telling their business, Alexander, freely and readily, without the least hesitancy, consented to go; giving his reason why he came not to the court before, namely, because he waited for Capt. Willet's return from the Dutch [at Manhattan,] being desirous to speak with him first. They brought him to Mr. [William] Collier's, that day, and Gov. Prince living remote, at Eastham, those few magistrates, who were at hand, issued the matter peaceably, and immediately dismissed Alexander to return home, which he did, part of the way; but in two or three days after he returned and went to Major Winslow's house, intending thence to travel into the Bay [Boston] and so home; but, at the Major's house he was taken very sick, and was, by water, conveyed to Mr. Bradford's, and thence carried upon the shoulders of his men to Tetchquet river [in Middleborough,] and thence in canoes, home; and, about two or three days after, died."

This statement, though sent to Dr. Mather, had no influence, so far as known, to cause him to publish any modification of what he had already penned. The reader will judge for himself, whether Mr. Cotton's statement is to be taken for the whole truth.†

* Son of the Rev. John Cotton of Boston.

† The Rev. Samuel Niles, minister of Braintree in Massachusetts, from 1711 to his death in 1762, left a History of Indian Wars in New England in manuscript, which was published in 1837 in the 16th vol. of the Colls. Ms. H. Soc. This author's account of the death of Alexander differs very much from all others. It is brief, and in these words:—"This Alexander, after his father's death, became very surly and ill-tempered toward the English people; for which reason the Court at Plymouth, which was then a distinct colony from the Massachusetts, suspecting him to have some treacherous purpose in view, brought him to Plymouth and put him under confinement; at which the fellow was enraged to that degree that he refused to eat, and soon starved himself to death in this miserable manner."

Where Mr. Niles obtained his information he does not tell us, but he seems to have paid no attention to what had been published upon this subject before he wrote and yet he says, in his Introduction, that "the reader will find an exact narrative of the Indian Wars, as far as his intelligence had reached, and upon the best grounds he could obtain, from approved authors and otherwise."

Upon the death of Alexander, there was a remarkable solemnity among the Indians, and it was bewailed with great sincerity by his tribe. Multitudes of Indians from all parts, Chiefs and others, flocked to Mount Hope, and there, according to the ancient customs of that people, mourned his death for many days, by the practice of their strange rites and ceremonies. As soon as that was ended, a season of rejoicing and feasting succeeded, in honor of the accession of Philip to the Chieftainship.

This numerous assembling of Indians at Mount Hope, in view of what had happened in connection with the death of Alexander, alarmed the English at Plymouth. They were fearful that Philip had some evil design upon them. He was therefore required to come to Court, and to explain the cause of this seemingly strange conduct. The Court having met on the sixth of August, Philip soon after appeared, and was ready to renew the treaties already in existence, or make a new one. Accordingly a new treaty was drawn up and signed by Philip, Francis, Sachem of Nauset, and John Sausaman witnessed it.

Of the family of Alexander very little is known. That he had a wife and son has been mentioned in the extracts already given. His wife, whose name was Namumpum, survived him. She was afterwards called Weetamoo, and was Queen or Squaw-Sachem of Pocasset, and for a period was the wife of a somewhat noted Indian named Petanauet, which the English transformed into Peter Nunnit. Weetamoo espoused Philip's cause and perished in the war, in which she was conspicuous, and will be hereafter particularly noticed.

CHAPTER IV.

A glance at some opinions respecting the Origin of the Indians.—Gen. Gookin's views.—What he learned from the Indians themselves.—Dr. Cotton Mather's notions upon this subject.—Principal Tribes occupying New England.—A Digression concerning the Narragansets.—The Wampanoags.—Their description of the Pestilence of 1617.—The Massachusetts.—Pawtucketts.

ALMOST all of the early writers who touched upon the history of the aborigines of America, indulged in conjectures concerning their origin. It is not intended to revive the question in this narrative, having formerly, in another work,* given specimens of the opinions of various authors upon it. However, it may be interesting to general readers to know to what conclusion Major General Daniel Gookin came in regard to it; he having the best means of learning what the Indians themselves thought about it; therefore, before entering upon the business of this chapter, a few statements and observations will be given from the writings of that distinguished man,† to whom every historian must † Maj. Gen. Daniel Gookin left several valuable works in MS. That here referred to is his Historical Collections of the Indians in New England. It has never been printed except in the Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society. In that work it appeared in 1792; but its value is much impaired by its appearance in a modern dress. Whether the original is preserved, is unknown to the writer. There is much wanted a correct edition of it, in a volume by itself.

be indebted for the best account of the numbers and condition of the Indians in New England previous to, and during the war with King Philip. He says, "I have discoursed and questioned about this matter with some of the most judicious of the Indians, but their answers are divers and fabulous. Some of the Inland Indians say, that they came from such as inhabit the sea coasts. Others say, that there were two young squaws, or women, being at first either swimming or wading in the water, the froth or foam of the water touched their bodies, from whence they became with child; and one of them brought forth a male, and the other a female child; and then the two women died and left the earth. So their son and daughter were their first progenitors. Other fables and figments are among them, touching this thing, which are not worthy to be inserted."

Of course, no intelligent person would put the least reliance on Indian stories of this nature. Like all ignorant people, the Indians delighted in the recital of marvellous stories, of which there was never wanting among them a host of inventors. They took much satisfaction in making up and relating improbable stories, especially when they found persons weak enough to be deceived by them.

But General Gookin's conclusion was, that they, the Indians, "were Adam's posterity." Hence, some wandering tribe of Asiatics or Europeans, by some means found its way into America; but when, it was as difficult to determine, as how. Gen. Gookin believed that all mankind were descended from one pair, and this was the general belief in his time. He seems to have been of opinion too, that the branch of the human race which had found its way into this continent, had got beyond the reach of christianity, or the gospel; and hence the inference, that, although men could not wander so far without divine assistance, that assistance immediately forsook them on their arrival here, and they were left to perish. But a reason for this conclusion was never satisfactorily given. Dr. Cotton Mather, however, finds no difficulty in supplying what may be supposed to have been, to himself, very satisfactory explanations of these difficulties; one or two of which, for their singularly characteristic qualities, are given.

Dr. Mather says, "The Natives of the Countrey now Possessed by the New Englanders, had been forlorn and wretched Heathen ever since their first herding here; and tho we know not When or How those Indians first became Inhabitants of this mighty Continent, yet we may guess that probably, the Devil decoy'd those miserable Salvages hither, in hopes that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus would never come here to destroy or disturb his Absolute-Empire over them. But our Eliot was in such ill terms with the Devil, as to alarm him with sounding the Silver-Trumpets of Heaven in his Territories, and make some Noble and Zealous Attempts towards ouing him of his Ancient possessions here." *

The same author, in another work, remarks, that, "by the year 1636, it was time for the Devil to take the Alarum, and make some attempt in Opposition to the Possession which the Lord Jesus Christ was going to have of these utmost Parts of the Earth.* These Parts were then covered with Nations of Barbarous Indians and Infidels, in which the Prince of the Power of the Air did Work as a Spirit; nor could it be expected that Nations of Wretches, whose whole Religion was the most Explicit sort of Devil-Worship, should not be acted by the Devil to engage in some early and bloody Action for the extinction of a Plantation so contrary to his Interests, as that of New-England was."† But to return to the design of the present Chapter.

It is asserted that when the English first settled in New England, it was occupied by about twenty different nations or tribes of Indians.‡ These nations or tribes were generally independent of each other, but united sometimes for mutual protection, and the purpose of making war. In every tribe or clan there was a Chief or head man or head woman, to whom the rest paid a sort of deference; but these Chiefs had very little power, other than that bestowed upon them by nature. That is to say, Chiefs or Leaders became so usually, by being endowed with superior intellects, or great physical importance.

The principal tribes scattered over New England at the period of its settlement, were, according to General Gookin, the Pequots, Narragansets, Pawkunnawkuks, Massachusetts and Pawtucketts. Each of these was subdivided into many clans. There were also the Mohegans and Nipmucks. Some of these tribes are reported to have been very numerous. The Pequots were the most powerful at the time of the arrival of the white people; numbering about four thousand warriors. Their dominion extended from beyond Quinnipiack§ southwesterly, to the Narraganset country northeasterly. They exercised some jurisdiction over the Indians on a part of Long Island, and also as far inland on the main as the country of the Nipmucks.

Next in order of importance were the Narragansets. "They were a great people heretofore, and the territory of their Sachem extended about thirty or forty miles from Seaconk river and Narragansett Bay, including Rhode Island and other islands in that bay, being their east and north bounds or border, and so running westerly and southerly unto a place called Wekapage, four or five miles to the eastward of Pawcutuk river, which was reconed for their south and west border, and the easternmost limits of the Pequots." This tribe also exercised some sort of jurisdiction over a part of Long Island, and likewise over a part of the Nipmuck country, Block Island, Cawesitt, and other places. The Pawkunnaukuts or Pokanokets (Wampanoags) stood much in fear of the Narragansets, and were threatened by them with war, when they found the Wampanoags were treating with the white people who came to settle at Plymouth. Canonicus was then Sachem of the Narragansets. He was a Chief of extraordinary capacity, and doubtless saw that mischief might accrue to his people by this lodgment of strangers upon the Indian territory. Therefore he determined to see what kind of people they were, whether they were warlike, and if they would fight should they be attacked. To ascertain with certainty what the character of the intruders was, in these particulars, in the month of February, 1622, he sent a challenge to them. This challenge was brought by an Indian named Tokamahamon, and consisted of a number of new arrows, which were wrapped in a rattlesnake's skin. These the messenger left at Plymouth without any explanation, but Tisquantum explained them to mean a challenge for war. The English took the snake's skin and, filling it with powder and ball, sent it back to the Chief, with a message, to the purport that they had never done any wrong to the Narragansets, and desired to live in peace with them; but, if they were determined on war, to begin as soon as they had a mind to; nor would they find the English unprepared. This message was delivered with an air of defiance, and they rejected the returned snake's skin, probably from a superstitious fear of its contents; nor would they allow it to remain among them; every one casting it from his neighborhood, until at length it was returned to Plymouth with all its contents.*

* This and similar expressions were in constant use among the fathers of New England. See New Eng. Hist. and Antiq. Jour vi. 22. Not only the Fathers who came first to New England used to speak of it as "The Ends of the Earth," but their children and even their grand children viewed it as such. And whatever their hopes may have been of its importance in a Christian point of view, it is pretty evident that they had no notion or conception that they were founding a great nation, such as we now see. Dr. Increase Mather says, in his Election Sermon of 1677. p. 76, ed. 1685—"Our Fathers did not in their coming hither, propound any great matter to themselves respecting this world," &c. Here they believed was the place where Christ was to take up his abode while on earth, at his "second appearing." And as the Saints would be few in comparison to the rest of the human race, His kingdom would require but a small corner of the American Continent. It is evident too that the pious founders did not wish or desire a great nation composed of those who were not believers; and when such came among them they took measures to send them away again. This course they continued in until they were overwhelmed by numbers.

§ At the close of this work I propose to give a list of all the Indian names of places, and their corresponding English names.

The prompt action of the English seems to have awed the belligerent Narragansets into a respectful silence, as they issued no proclamations of war against the English for a long period. Canonicus was then aged, but he lived until the fourth of June, 1647, supposed then to have been about eighty-five years old. His decease was observed by all the Natives as a great and sad event.

Mention has already been made of the Wampanoags. Of them General Gookin says, "their Chief Sachem held dominion over divers other petty Sagamores; as the Sagamores upon the island of Nantuckett, and Nope, or Martha's Vineyard, of Nawsett, of Monnamoyk, of Sawkattukett, Nobsquasitt, Matakees, and several others, and some of the Nipmucks. Their Country, for the most part, falls within the jurisdiction of New Plymouth Colony. This people were a potent nation in former times, and could raise, as the most credible and ancient Indians affirm, about three thousand men."

* The estimate of Indians of their former numbers and importance is to be taken with allowance; and according to the accumulated knowledge of them now available for a comparative view, it is reasonably doubtful whether any of the great tribes of New England were as numerous as was formerly believed. General Gookin speaks of the pestilence already noticed, by which "these people were sorely smitten by the hand of God, but what this disease was, that so generally and mortally swept away, not only these but other Indians, their neighbors, I cannot well learn. I have discoursed with some old Indians, that were then youths, who say, that the bodies all over were exceeding yellow, describing it by a yellow garment they showed me, both before they died, and afterwards."

The same author says of the Massachusetts,—they were the next great people northward of the Wampanoags, and "inhabited principally about the Massachusetts Bay. These were a numerous and great people. Their Chief Sachem held dominion over many other petty governors; as those of Weechagaskas, Neponsitt, Punkapaog, Nonantum, Nashaway, some of the Nipmuck people, as far as Pokomtakake, as the old men of Massachusetts affirmed. This people could, in former times, arm for war, about three thousand men, as the old Indians declare. They were in hostility very often with the Narragansets, but held amity, for the most part, with the Pawkunnawkutts and with the Pawtucketts."

The Pawtucket, Gen. Gockin continues, "is the fifth and last great Sachemship of Indians. Their country lieth north and northeast from the Massachusetts, whose dominion reacheth so far as the English jurisdiction, or colony of the Massachusetts, now doth extend, and had under them several other smaller Sagamores, as the Pennacooks, Agawomes, Naamkeeks, Pascataawayes, Accomintas, and others." The Pawtucketts were anciently about equal in numbers to the Massachusetts, namely about three thousand men, and were generally in amity with them. But the pestilence, before described, "almost totally destroyed them, so that, at this day," says our author, "they are not above two hundred and fifty men, besides women and children."

CHAPTER V.

The fate of Races.—Internal Troubles of the Indians.—Philip's circumstances at the time of Alexander's Death.—Did not intend a general War with the English.—Prudence not duly exercised to prevent the War of 1675.—Philip's authority limited.—Said to have wept at the news of hostilities.—Indians had feeble means to counteract evil reports of them.—False reports became permanent.—Philip assumes a bearing corresponding to that of the English.—His sales of territory.—Brief account of them.—His Counsellors.—Presented with a Horse.—His Expedition to Nantucket.—Other sales of land.

As the settlements of the Europeans advanced, the Indians receded and shrunk away; but they did not go without a struggle, though it were indeed against fate itself. And why they could not withstand the current which they saw sweeping them along, they could not tell; nor could they comprehend that this current was soon to plunge them down a cataract, from the vortex of which there was no escape! The instability and fate of human races was not within the scope of their philosophy.

Besides the disturbance given to the Indians of New England by the English settlers, one tribe continually harrassed another, and diseases, unknown in the country before the Europeans came, were added to the destructive use of fire-arms and spirituous liquors to hasten their destruction.

The manner of the death of Alexander unquestionably had considerable effect upon Philip, who was ready to believe anything unfavorable to the Plymouth people. He had seen that they exercised authority over his father and brother; an authority which was inconsistent with the natural freedom of the Indians. Nor could he understand the grounds of such an assumed authority; inasmuch as his tribe were independent, and had not been subdued by the English. He was at this time a young man, scarcely twenty-two years of age perhaps, and when he was in the presence of the venerable Pilgrim Fathers he could not summon courage enough to deny any of their demands; but when he was in his native forests he remembered his promises as matters at too great a distance to be of any special account, as it respected his actions.

Although the Massachusetts, Narragansets, Mohegans and other tribes were engaged in frequent wars with Indians bordering upon them, there is no account that Philip was ever actively engaged in any war until that called by his name. And it appears pretty evident that he never contemplated a general war with the English. What are called his aggressions upon them were only intended by him as retaliatory for wrongs which he believed he had received from them. But by this course affairs soon got beyond his control. Had prudence been exercised on both sides, war might have been avoided; at least in 1675. Had the white settlers been assured that the Indians were more than a match for them in war, they would have had much greater forbearance towards them. It was far otherwise. They despised the Indians, looked upon them as inferiors in almost every respect, and were haughty and overbearing on numerous occasions. Revenge is the consequence of such relations of man to man.

It is also pretty evident that many of the chiefs of the small clans of the Wampanoags desired a war with the Plymouth people. These, although they were under or within the Sachemdom of Philip, were not controlled by him, in any such sense as a European king controls his distant subjects. But when war did come, Philip was accounted at the head of it, and he could not escape its responsibilities, or avoid its disasters.

It was told,* at a time when the truth could scarcely be mistaken, that Philip was averse to the war in which his young men had plunged him by their blind rage for revenge and plunder. "All the histories," says Mr. Callender, "from Mr. Hubbard and Dr. Mather, make Philip to be the spring and mover of the war; but there is a constant tradition among the posterity of the people, who lived next to him, and were familiarly conversant with him, as also with the Indians who survived the war, that both Philip, and his chief old men, were utterly averse to the war, and they show the spot (Kikemuit Spring, in a farm belonging to Stephen Paine, Esq. in Bristol) where Philip received the news of the first Englishmen that were killed, with grief and sorrow, and wept at the news; and that a day or two before the first outrages,

* By the Rev. Mr. Callender, in his Centennial Discourse on the Civil and Religious Affairs of Rhode Island, p. 73. This excellent Author holds a place in the same rank with our PRINCE; and had he lived to apply himself as Mr. Prince did, he might have been his equal in knowledge of New England history. He wrote in 1738.

he had protected an Englishman the Indians had captivated, rescued him from them, and privately sent him home safe.*

It must be remembered that it was not a day of Newspapers then. A story often gained much of its wildness and improbability in its passage through a wild and savage country. The Indians had very scanty means to counteract any reports concerning them, however absurd they may have been. There was a very general prejudice against them, and hence a readiness, on the part of the English in general, to credit stories and reports against them. Boston was the great centre where all reports found their way. Here they were talked over, and probably lost nothing as they passed from mouth to mouth. Letter writers took up these reports, and hence they acquired a permanence detrimental alike to truth and to the Indians. Specimens of such letters will be given in the progress of this narrative.

It is asserted that Philip intended to begin a war with the English from the time he came in to be Chief, and was only waiting for a good opportunity. This assertion does not appear to be well supported. It is however very clear, that by the year 1674, he became convinced that a war could not be avoided, and that towards the close of that year he began to enlist as many in his cause as he could. Up to this period there appears nothing in his actions which cannot be accounted for without the imputation of treachery or a covert design of mischief. Until then he went from tribe to tribe in a friendly way, sold land to the English, and appeared proud of the consequence they imputed to him; dressed himself up in a rich and gaudy manner, called the King of England his brother, and assumed something of the haughtiness of the English themselves.†

He was so fond of the goods of the English that he sold off his territory rapidly, which was as rapidly occupied and improved by them. His lands were of small value to him, but under the improvements of the English he saw they were immediately increased in value. It is probable, therefore, that this may have been a cause of irritation; and, when too late, he felt a dissatisfaction with himself for his imprudence, and perhaps fancied himself overreached by those with whom he traded.

The people of Dedham had been negotiating for about five years for the tract of land now Wrentham, but were not able to obtain it until 1662. In that year they succeeded in purchasing it of Philip. The tract was then called Wollomonopoag, was six miles square, and cost twenty-four pounds and ten shillings.

* Historical Discourse, 73. At the breaking out of the war of 1675, two of Hugh Cole's sons were made prisoners by the Indians and taken to Philip's head-quarters at Monot Hope. Philip ordered them set at liberty, because their father had always been his friend. He also sent word to Mr. Cole, that as he could not control his young warriors, he advised him to remove at once to Rhode Island. Mr. Cole did so, and saw his house in flames before he had left it an hour—Fessenden's Ist. Warren, 39. Col. B. Cole, of the 4th generation from Hugh, gave me a similar account in 1874. See Church's Hist. p. 339.

† John Josselyn saw Philip at Boston about 1669, and thus describes him:—"His coat and buskins were thick set with beads [Wampumpage] in pleasant wild works and a broad belt of the same. His accoutrements were valued at twenty pounds."—Two Voyages to New England, 146. Josselyn says, "their beads are their money; of these there are two sorts, blue and white; the first is their gold, the last their silver. These they work out of certain shells, so cunningly, that neither Jew nor Devil can counterfeit them."

In 1664 he sold Mattapoissett to the Hon. William Brenton of Newport. In the deed he is styled "Pumetacom alias Philip, Chief Sachem of Mount Hope, Cowsumpsit and of all territories thereunto belonging." He then had a wife, whose name appears with his upon the deed. Her name was Wootonekanuske. In this transaction John Sassamon was interpreter and a witness, and his brother Roland Sassamon was also a witness. Of the former there will be special occasion to speak hereafter.

Philip had constantly about him several men who became very noted in the course of the war, and all perished in it. They were chiefs of clans or small tribes of Wampanoags, and are called Counsellors to King Philip. Some of the most noted of them were Watuspaquin, often called by the English the Black Sachem; his son, William; Uncom-poin; Umnathum or Munashum, more generally known by the name of Nimrod; Annawon; Peebe,* and several others. The most of their names appear frequently to sales of land; sometimes as principals, but more frequently as witnesses.

In 1665 Philip gave a sort of quitclaim to Acushena and Coaxet. The same had been sold by his father. For this he received ten pounds; but this sum included Philip's services in "marking out the bounds" of the old purchase. The same year the Court of Plymouth made him a present of a horse.

In May of this year Philip made an excursion to Nantucket, partly, as tradition reports, to punish an Indian who had spoken disrespectfully of his father, and partly to assert his authority over the Indians of that Island. The name of the offending Indian was Assasamoogh, called by the English John Gibbs. He was a preacher to the Indians on the island. Philip intended to surprise and kill him, but Gibbs' friends had notice of Philip's design, and the object of his wrath had barely time to escape by leaping a precipice. Philip however was not to be thwarted in this manner, and demanded the delivery of his victim into his hands. Meantime search was continued for him without effect. At length a negotiation was entered into for his ransom. Philip's demands were exorbitant, but were eventually complied with, and amounted to nearly all the money upon the island. Assasamoog was thus saved from destruction, and was living there about ten years afterwards, and had thirty members belonging to his Church.

In 1666, by a written instrument Philip gave to Watuckpoo and Sampson power to sell certain lands, but where they were situated does not appear. In 1667 Philip sold to Constant Southworth and others, "all the meadow lands from Dartmouth to Matapoissett," for the sum of fifteen pounds. The same year he sold to Thomas Willet and others, "all that tract of land lying between the River Wanascat-ta-quett and Cawatoquissett, being two miles long and one broad." For this he received ten pounds sterling. Pawsaquens, counsellor to Philip, and Tom, alias Sawsnett, an interpreter, witnessed the sale.

In 1668, "Philip Pometacom and Tatamumaque, alias Cashewashed, sachems," for "a valuable consideration" sold to several English a tract of some square miles, adjacent to Pokanoket. Among the witnesses were Sampointeen, alias Tom, and Nananuntnew, son of Thomas Piant. The same year Philip and Uncompawen having laid claim to a part of New-Medows-Neck,* alleging it was not intended to be conveyed in a former deed by Philip's father and brother, Ousamequin and Wamsutta, to remove any cause of complaint it was re-purchased by those who had before purchased it; yet they protested that it was, according to the record, comprehended in the former purchase. This quitclaim, however, cost but eleven pounds. The purchasers were Capt. Thomas Willet, Mr. James Brown and John Allen, "in behalf of themselves and the rest." To this conveyance the names of Philip and his wife seem to be represented as "Philip Nanuskooke." Nimrod and Tom Sansawest were witnesses. In 1669 Philip sold to Hugh Cole and others, 500 acres of land in Swanzea, on the west side of the river now known as Cole's River, so called from this proprietor.†

These sales are but a few specimens of many made by Philip and his chief men, and are introduced to show the progress the English made in acquiring the Indian territory. It was so in every direction, and continued until the natives had very little left. Seeing this when too late, it was, as before remarked, a cause of irritation and dissatisfaction, and had something to do in preparing the way for more serious troubles.

CHAPTER VI.

Government among Indians.—Philip and the Narragansets.—Murder of an Englishman.—Its consequences.—King Philip implicated.—Arguments for and against him.—Continued complaints against Philip.—Plymouth appeals to Massachusetts to interfere.—Philip consents to attend a Conference at Taunton.—The meeting.—Transactions at the Conference.

THE nature of government among the Indians must not be considered like government among the white people. The authority of Indian Chiefs was so unlike any government among civilized people, as to amount to almost no government at all. For mutual safety they would sometimes appear in force, and so if a few of them planned any important expedition, volunteers joined it, as it promised plunder, or a chance of revenge for former injuries, either to themselves or their friends or kindred. A distinguished leader could always obtain followers; and these would stand by him as long as he was successful, and he had no authority to keep them longer.

It is said that King Philip endeavored early to engage the Narragansets against the English, but this does not very clearly appear, until war had actually broken out. But it is certain that the Narragansets had been enemies to the settlers of Massachusetts ever since the war between the former and the Mohegans. The part they took in that war, which ended in the capture and death of Miantonimo, was a sufficient cause for the Narragansets to hate the English, and especially those settled in and about Boston. That they ever after hated them is to be seen through all the records of the United Colonies, as troubles were continually occurring. Hence, when the Wampanoags took offence to the English, the latter had the best reason to apprehend a union with the former, although they knew they were enemies to each other; that both the Narragansets and Wampanoags laid claim to the same portion of the Nipmuck country, only a short time before the war began with Philip, and that jealousies and difficulties had always existed between them.

* In Barrington, R. I.

It is wrong, therefore, to infer that the Narragansets joined Philip in the war merely because he desired them to do so, or from any affection they had for the Wampanoags. Either could have been, at almost any time, influenced to make war on the other, if they could have enlisted allies who could ensure them success. It was as much as Roger Williams could do, with all his philosophy and philanthropy, to prevent an open war between them at different times.

These introductory observations and details being understood by the reader, will enable him to proceed understandingly with the events of the war. It is pretty certain that, as early as the year 1671, there was cause of apprehension on the part of the English settlers, that the Wampanoags intended mischief. This alarm probably grew out of a murder which was perpetrated by some Indians in "Dedham woods," in the month of April of that year. With this affair Philip's name was immediately connected, though it does not appear that he knew anything about it. The circumstances attending the murder were these. Zachary Smith, a young man, in travelling through Dedham, stopped for a night at the house of Caleb Church, a millwright, then residing there. He left, the next morning, and, when he had been gone about half an hour, three Indians came along, and went the same way which Smith had gone. As they passed Church's house they behaved insolently, throwing stones and using insulting language. They were known to the English, having been employed as laborers among them in Dorchester, and had said they belonged to King Philip. These Indians, on overtaking Smith, killed him for some little effects which he had about him, and his body was found "near the sawmill" in Dedham soon after. Search was then made for the three Indians; it being suspected that they were the murderers. They were in a few days found and taken into custody. At their trial but one of them was found guilty, and he was executed on the gallows on Boston Common. After the execution his head was cut off and set upon the gallows, where it was remaining at least five years afterwards. This Indian was the son of Matoonas, Sachem of the clan of Nipmucks living at Pakachoog. Of him there will be occasion to say more hereafter. It was remarked by the best historian of that age, that this son of Matoonas, "being vexed in his mind that the design against the English, intended to begin [in] 1671, did not take place, out of mear malice and spight against them, slew an Englishman travelling along the road." *

LETTER OF THE REV. JONA. PARSONS OF NEWBURYPORT.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN., Dec. 12, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR:—I herewith send you, for insertion in your "Genealogical Register," a letter written at Newburyport, Mass., October 20, 1769, by the Rev. Jonathan Parsons to his son, Samuel H. Parsons of Lyme, Conn., giving his reminiscences of family history, which may, perhaps, interest some of his descendants. I give the whole letter, verbatim et literatim. You can publish what you please. I am Very respectfully yours, &c.,

SAMUEL HOLDEN PARSONS.

Dear child :

I am glad to hear by yours of y<sup>e</sup> first & 10<sup>a</sup> Instant y<sup>t</sup> your health is restored, & pray God to give y<sup>e</sup> a heart to serve him in newness of Spirit. Sorry am I to find y<sup>e</sup> Ch<sup>h</sup> are thrown into Confusion, & y<sup>e</sup> more so, as I undersiand much of y<sup>e</sup> Controversy is whether y<sup>e</sup> Children of those Parents who do not come to y<sup>e</sup> Lord's Table shall be baptized or not? My Judgement is y<sup>t</sup> no minister or Ch<sup>h</sup> has a right to deny Baptism to those Children whose Parents openly profess good principles & lead a moral life, even tho' they do not come to y<sup>e</sup> Lord's Table. & I am very sorry Dr Bellamy & others have stirred up Strife abt y<sup>t</sup> Matter. I think they may be easily answered, and were I a minister in your Colony I believe I should think it my duty to enter y<sup>e</sup> List. I am persuaded if the Separatists from Mr Edwards had an able Leader, Mr Edwards must either be convinced or removed. Mr. Bird is not his Match & perhaps those y<sup>t</sup> separate do not desire him if he was. I should be loth to stand in a special connection with a particualar Church that goes into y<sup>t</sup> new Scheme. The like controversy gave great disturbance to y<sup>e</sup> protestant Church about 150 years ago, but was happily calmed by some able Pens.

You write y<sup>t</sup> one Samuel Parsons from Martinico desires to know from w<sup>t</sup> part of England our Anecestors came. I will tell you as near as my Memory enables me, (as I have no records of the matter but what I heard from my Parent.) I suppose my Great Grandfather Parsons came from Great-Torrington about 20 or 30 miles from Tiverton, and not far from Exeter. He came over and brought my Grandfather Benjamin Parsons and other children about 130 years ago, perhaps 140. I believe y<sup>e</sup> Record of my Great Grandfather and Grandfather might be found either at Great Torrington or Tiverton, & by y<sup>t</sup> means it might be known whether we & Samuel Parsons are descended from one Stock. My great Grandfather Marshfield came from Exeter, and brought my Grandfather when he was abt 4 years old. My Grandfather Marshfield's name, I think was Samuel, and my great Grandfather's name Josiah; They came over about the same time with my great Grandfather Parsons and his family. I should be glad if the history of the families could be traced back as far as those y<sup>t</sup> first came over, for it might be of service to some of their Descendants.

My love to my children and grand children & am your careful Father
Newbury Port, Oct. 20. 1769.

J. Parsons.

(addressed) Samuel H. Parsons Esq,
Lyme,
Connecticut

Benjamin Parsons, the grandfather of the Rev. Jonathan Parsons, married Sarah Vore, October 6, 1653, the daughter of Richard Vore of Windsor, Conn., and died in Springfield, Mass., August 24, 1689. [See Gen. Reg., Vol. I., for July, p. 269.]

Samuel Marshfield (the maternal grandfather of the Rev. Jona. Parsons) was the son of Thomas Marshfield, who is mentioned in 1640 as an owner of lands in Windsor, Conn., but removed from Windsor about 1642. His son, Samuel Marshfield, married, March 18, 1651, Hester Wright, the daughter of Deacon Samuel Wright, who settled in Springfield, Dec. 12, 1639, and had children: Sarah, d. May, 1653; Mary, b. June 10, 1653; Thomas, b. Sept. 6, 1654; Sarah, b. Feb. 2, 1656; Samuel, b. Aug. 20, 1661, m. Joseph Bedortha, July 24, 1634.

Hester, the wife of Samuel Marshfield, died at Springfield, April 3, 1664, in childbed, leaving a daughter, Abilene, b. April 2, 1664, who m. Thomas Gilbert, Aug. 15, 1686. And on the 28th Dec., 1664, Samuel Marshfield m. for his 2d wife, Mrs. Catherine Gilbert (the widow of Thomas Gilbert), by whom he had four children, viz.:

1. Josiah, b. Sept. 29, 1655; m. Rachel Gilbert, Sept. 22, 1686.
2. Hester, b. Sept. 6, 1667; m. Ephraim Cotton, March 26, 1685.
3. A child stillborn, Nov. 17, 1669.

4. Margaret, b. Dec. 3, 1670; m. Ebenezer Parsons of Springfield, the father of the Rev. Jonathan Parsons. [See Gen. Reg., Vol. I., p. 270.]

Mrs. Catherine Gilbert, the 2d wife of Samuel Marshfield, was the daughter of Deacon Samuel Chapin, who removed from Braintree to Springfield before the year 1643. She m., in 1646, Nathaniel Bliss of Springfield, son of Thomas Bliss of Hartford, by whom she had four children. She became a widow; and, July 3, 1655, m. Thomas Gilbert, who removed from Windsor to Springfield about 1655, Jan. 30, by whom she had four children, and again became a widow; and in 1664 m. Samuel Marshfield for her 3d husband, by whom she had four children, as above mentioned.

Samuel Marshfield frequently represented the town of Springfield as a deputy to the General Court, and held many important offices. He died at Springfield about 1692. His son, Josiah Marshfield, on the 23d Dec., 1692, presented an inventory of his estate before the Hon. John Pynchon, Esq., Judge of the Probate of Wills, which is recorded at Northampton, Mass., Vol. III., p. 3.

BOOK NOTICES.

Remarks on Currency and Banking; having reference to the present Derangement of the Circulating Medium in the United States. By NATHAN APPLETON. Third Edition. With an Appendix. Boston: 1857. 8vo., pp. 63.

[Prepared for the January number of the Register, but was crowded out by other matter.]

Mr. Appleton's pamphlet was published, in a first edition, in 1841, just as the country was beginning to recover from the great pressure of 1837. That work was widely circulated, and probably very extensively read, and therefore, had we space, it would not be necessary now to go into any analysis of its contents.

There has been a great deal written, and our newspapers have literally teemed with "Causes of the Revulsion in Financial Affairs," and under similar captions; but the real cause of the present depression may be set forth in a few words. It is solely owing to the credit system; at the bottom of which lies banking. Hence it is very hard for any one in the banking interest to set forth the real share which banks have in causing the troubles in question. There is, therefore, much mystification in nearly every attempt of a bank writer to explain the difficulty. By bank accommodations people can go on and manufacture, import goods, and build palaces, until there are five, ten, twenty, &c. times as many goods, houses, &c. &c. at cost value, as there is money in the country to pay for them. Every man in any way engaged in business of the wholesale kind, knows, or would know this on a few moments' reflection. The more extensive a man's business, the more easy he can get credit, so long as he promptly meets his engagements. He gradually gets into the credit of various banks and firms, and borrows of one to pay the other, until his expenses and discounts swallow all his profits. Then the day is not far off in which he must fail; and his failure brings with it others; numerous, or otherwise, according as his business is extended.

Memorials of the Chaunceys, including President Chauncey, his Ancestors and Descendants. By WILLIAM CHAUNCEY FOWLER. Boston: 1858. 8vo., pp. 304.

This work is an enlargement of the account of Chauncey given in the Register. The additions are many and important, and have involved long and untiring research of gentlemen every way capable of making it worthy of the subject. In the closing portion of his preface, the Editor (Prof. Fowler) mentions several gentlemen of the Chauncey Family who have promoted the undertaking; but from what we know of two of them, namely, Nathaniel Chauncey, Esq. of Philadelphia, and William Chauncey, Esq. of New York, he could with much propriety have given these gentlemen a more conspicuous place, as the prime movers in the matter; the former for his long and extensive research in England as well as America, and the latter for his liberality in obliging the world with one of the most important genealogical works which has yet appeared. But the Editor has no doubt said all they would allow him to say in those regards, as they are gentlemen who do a good work for the act itself, and not for any praise from others.

Some may think Mr. Fowler has rather overloaded some parts of his work from the learned lore of the early days of the Chaunceys in this country. But every one must, we think, acknowledge, that he has given us a volume of great interest and value. The several tabular folding pedigrees of different branches of the family add very much to the value of the work. And as to the mechanical part,—that is very beautiful, as all the work from Messrs. Dutton & Son's press is, when they are allowed sufficient latitude for the purpose.

A Historical and Genealogical Record of the Descendants of Timothy Rockwood. Born in Medway, July 5, 1727. Died in Holliston, Feb. 21, 1806. Compiled from Authentic Sources. By E. L. ROCKWOOD. Boston: 1856. 12mo., pp. 146. Index, &c. 5.

The writer of the Rockwood Genealogy has chosen an admirable motto for his title-page—"Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers." Proverbs, 17: 6.

It is rather singular that this family traces no farther back than 1695. It may be owing to the change of name; for this author tells us that "the Rockwoods, during the last part of the 16th and the first part of the 17th centuries, were called Rockets. Their names were pronounced Rocket and written Rocket in the old records." He begins with a Samuel Rocket, but in a note says the father and mother of this Samuel were John and Bethia of Medfield. "This Samuel," he continues, "was born a Rocket, lived a Rocket, but died a Rockwood." For aught we know to the contrary, Rocket may be as legitimate a surname as Rockwood.

This record of the Rockwood Family is a valuable accession to our New England Genealogies. It is printed in an intelligible manner, though we think not in the most approved form for such records. Its only references are by generations. In so small a book, this can be managed without much loss of time; but it would be a serious defect in an extensive work.

All persons engaged in compiling Genealogies for publication might very profitably consult the pages of the New Eng. Hist. & Gen. Register. In it they will see almost every mode of drawing up such work, and be able easily to choose those most experienced in such labors.

A Genealogical Chart of the Descendants of Gregory Dexter. By S. C. NEWMAN, Member of the R. I. Historical Society, and Genealogical Secretary of the Blackstone Monument Association. Providence: 1857.

The above title is partly our own; the sheet containing the Dexter Genealogy, not having a special title. From the valuable information contained in the chart before us we learn that Gregory Dexter was born at Olney, County of North-Hampton, England, in 1610; that he was a printer in London, but gave up that business and came to New England with Roger Williams in 1644; that while a printer in London he printed for Mr. Williams his Indian Dictionary, [Key into the Indian Language.] Settling in Providence, Mr. Dexter became a preacher, and was the fourth Pastor of the first Baptist Church there. He died in the year 1700. The Christian name of his wife was Abigail, but her surname is not given. Mr. Dexter had children, Stephen, 1647; James, 1650; John, 1652; Abigail, 1655; and Peleg, 1658.

What this Chart or Table contains, is very clearly laid down, but there are some important omissions. It does not show who any of the individuals married; nor is the month or day of month of birth or death given. Indeed the Author's plan could not well admit them. If he had taken the ancient legal method, (which is unquestionably the best which has yet been devised for a Chart,) all these omissions could have been inserted in a space not more extensive than the facts on this sheet require.

We are heartily glad that Rhode Island has so able a genealogist in the field as Mr. Newman has shown himself to be, but it is our opinion he would satisfy himself and friends better, if he should adopt another plan for the display of his genealogical information.

History of the Town of Dorchester, Massachusetts. By a Committee of the Dorchester Antiquarian and Historical Society. No. 7. Boston: 1858. 8vo.

This number of the History of Dorchester carries the work to 436 pages. It is one of the most interesting of the series, and we hope the Publisher will not feel obliged to close the volume, so long as matter of so much interest remains to be had. The History of the Schools of that town is thoroughly gone into in the present part, and should interest every one in New England, as we have no doubt it would, could it be brought to the knowledge of all. This paper alone ought to ensure a place for the History of Dorchester in every School Library in New England.

A Genealogical History of the Rice Family: Descendants of Deacon Edmund Rice, who came from Berkhamstead, England, and settled at Sudbury, Massachusetts, in 1638-1639; with an Index..... By ANDREW HENSHAW WARD, A. M., Member of the New Eng. Historical and Gen. Soc., &c. &c. &c. Boston: 1858. 8vo., pp. 379.

Among our ablest, best qualified, and most industrious genealogists is the Author of the book before us. To recommend a work coming from his hand would be a labor of supererogation. What has been remarked respecting the Genealogical work on the Cushman Family applies well to this, with the exception of the numbering for reference from one individual to another, and the want of the means to designate the generations.

In all matters of reference, the Cushman genealogy is perfect. Mr. Ward has numbered his families. This we do not think important.

The Rice Family is beautifully printed, while it is at the same time economically printed; and shows at once that the printers, Messrs. Dutton, have experienced and careful men who not only superintend their work properly, but also that those employed by them are masters of their business. If the paper used was fully equal to the typography, there would have been little indeed to complain of.

The Life and Times of Alexander Hamilton. By SAMUEL M. SMUCKER, A. M., Author of "The Court and Reign of Catherine II.," "Emperor Nicholas I.," "Memorable Events in French History," etc. Boston and Chicago: 1857. Pp. 408.

At this distance from the closing scenes of the life of Alexander Hamilton, his course ought to be viewed by his biographer without bias or prejudice; but it is very difficult, if not impossible for any of us entirely to free ourselves from the influence of our early impressions. We have been taught to view Hamilton as a saint, and Aaron Burr as the impersonation of Satan himself. This view of the two men is undoubtedly wrong. The one was not so faultless as is generally imagined, nor the other so wicked as to prevent a rational inquiry into his motives and his actions. It may be safely said that if Hamilton had killed Burr in the fatal duel, the world would now look upon the two characters in an almost reversed relation. Time softens asperities, but time will not blot out the wrongs of one man towards another.

Our Author has given us a readable and authentic narrative of the Life of Hamilton, but we are rather of the opinion that he has claimed a little too much for him, notwithstanding his intention of strict partiality. We readily allow that it is much easier to make a saint of Hamilton than of Burr, while we do not believe that either of them had very strong claims to that character.

Messrs. Crown & Co. have published their work in a very handsome manner, and accompanied it with a fine portrait of Hamilton.

The Genealogy of the Descendants of Several Ancient Puritans, by the names of Adams, Bullard, Holbrook, Rockwood, Sanger, Wood, Grout, Goulding, and Twitchell. By Rev. ABNER MORSE, A. M., Member of the N. E. Historical and Gen. Society. Boston: 1857. 8vo., pp. 355.

If Mr. Morse's remuneration is equal to his industry, it will be greatly to the credit of the numerous families for which he has labored so incessantly, and so success-fully. It is a mystery to those acquainted with Mr. Morse, how he can possibly find time to perform so much labor; labor requiring the closest application, and the minutest scrutiny into conflicting statements, and examinations of Records often made by incompetent persons, and imperfect in themselves.

The volume before us is almost entirely made up of names and dates; therefore if there are errors in it, that ought to surprise no one; and we apprehend they should rather wonder there are so few. The work is illustrated with a large number of well executed lithographic portraits.

In his future works on Genealogy, we hope Mr. Morse will adopt the universally approved method of putting them together, so often recommended in the Register.

Oration, Poem, Speeches, Chronicles, &c., at the Dedication of the Malden Town Hall. On Thursday Evening, October 29th, 1857. Malden: 1857. Pp. 52.

The Oration on this occasion was by Gilbert Haven, Esq; the Poem by Dr. John L. Sullivan, and the Chronicles by C. C. P. Moody, Esq. The Orator took a wide range in his remarks; from Plymouth Rock to the Pyramids of Egypt. After the Poem, Mr. Wm. A. Richardson made some appropriate house remarks, as did several others. But Mr. Moody's "Chronicles" must have set gravity at defiance. If any one doubts our opinion, let him procure a copy of this curious pamphlet and decide for himself.

Proceedings of the Kilbourn Historical and Genealogical Society. 1857. 8vo., pp. 4.

This Association continues its activity, and judging from the "Proceedings" of the late meeting at "Kilbourn House," in the town of Milton, Ct., it was as interesting as any of its predecessors.

Charlemont as a Plantation.—An Historical Discourse at the Centennial Anniversary of the Death of Moses Rice, the first Settler of the Town, delivered at Charlemont, Mass., June 11, 1855. By JOSEPH WHITE. Boston: 1858. 8vo., pp. 48.

The town of Charlemont has done a good act in taking the occasion of the death of its first Settler to have that event duly commemorated by a Discourse. This Discourse gives a very excellent outline of the History of the town, which was settled by Moses Rice in the Spring of 1743, and portrays in a clear and forcible manner the hardships to which the early settlers of the towns in New England were exposed.

Mr. White has been unable to ascertain from what circumstance the town received the name of Charlemont. Can any of our readers inform him? It was doubtless so named from a place of that name in Ireland or in France. Probably from that in the former country.

The American Almanac and Repository of Useful Knowledge, for the year 1858. Boston: 1857. 12mo., pp. 376.

The Proprietors and Publishers of this valuable, or we should rather say invaluable annual, contrive to keep it in a reasonably sized volume, and yet comprehensive enough for all practical purposes. It is an important recommendation to the American Almanac, that it progresses without any considerable change of its important features.

An Address delivered at West Springfield, August 25, 1856. On occasion of the 100th Anniversary of the Ordination of the Rev. Joseph Lathrop, D. D. By WILLIAM B. SPRAGUE, D. D., his Colleague and Successor in the Pastoral Office. With an Appendix. Springfield, Mass.: 1856. 8vo., pp. 101.

This effort of Dr. Sprague is exceedingly interesting, and as eloquent as it is interesting. About half of the pamphlet is occupied by the Appendix, chiefly in giving the proceedings of the occasion. Much valuable information was elicited from the various speakers, among whom were the Rev. Dr. Vernilye, Rev. Mr. Hawks, Mr. Wm. M. Lathrop, Rev. John Woodbridge, Rev. Erastus Hopkins, Rev. Dr. Osgood, Rev. A. A. Wood, Rev. Dr. Davis, Prof. Fowler, Rev. Henry M. Field, Judge Terry, &c.

A Sermon, in Two Parts, delivered on the Sabbath, June 28, 1856. The close of the 50th year of his Ministry, as Pastor of the First Church and Parish in Hingham, by JOSEPH RICHARDSON. Hingham: 1856. 8vo., pp. 48.

In this very excellent Discourse, we have a notice of the predecessors of Mr. Richardson. Four only had been settled over that Church before him. Their names were Peter Hobart, John Norton, Ebenezer Gay, and Henry Ware. Mr. R. was ordained in 1806. Hence, in the fifty years now closed, he could say, as he does towards the end of his Sermon,—“Few remain in life with me to remember that day.”

In the course of Mr. Richardson's time he has published a large number of Sermons and other tracts, and we hope to see a complete collection of them in the library of the N. England, &c. Society; of which Society he is a member.

Report of the Industrial Exhibition held in the Town of Waltham, Mass., Sept. 24, 1859. Boston: 1857. 8vo., pp. 79.

This is an exceedingly neat performance in all respects. The title of the work is a sufficient indication of what its contents are, and the names of the superintending Committee are good assurance that all parts were well performed. These gentlemen were J. B. Bright, Thomas Hill and Josiah Ratter. Mr. Banks, our present able Governor, was the principal speaker on the occasion.

The New Jersey Historical Society has issued Proposals to publish, “on the obtainment of a sufficient number of Subscribers,” the 5th Vol. of its Collections. To contain “An Analytical Index to the Colonial Documents of New Jersey; in the State Paper Offices of England; with Notes and Explanations and additional References to Manuscripts in other depositories, by Wm. A. Whitehead, Corresponding Secretary of the Society."

This Circular contains a specimen of the manner in which the volume is to be executed. Judging by this, the work cannot fail to be one of great value, and of interest to many besides the inhabitants of New Jersey. The volume will contain about 600 pages, and be afforded at three dollars. But a small edition will be printed.

History of Cape Cod.

The Rev. Frederick Freeman, of Sandwich, is engaged upon an elaborate work, the title of which we learn is to be "The Annals of Barnstable County, and its several Towns, Sandwich, Barnstable, Yarmouth, Eastham, Harwich, Chatham, Falmouth, Truro, Provincetown, Wellfleet, Dennis, Orleans and Brewster, including the District of Marshpee." Any one will readily perceive, that Mr. Freeman has upon his hands work enough for the present; but we are happy to learn from him that he has his work in a forward state, and is desirous to begin to print in a short time.

New England Society of Quincy, Illinois.

The 22d of December last was appropriately observed by the New England people, residents of the flourishing city of Quincy. The supper, speeches and music, were, judging from the reports, all of a high order. Upwards of three hundred were assembled at the Quincy House on the occasion. The festivity was closed with dancing, which was probably kept up till a pretty early hour; for a reporter said the next day, "they were dancing then, for ought he knew."

At one time in his life he owned the only packet then running between Boston and London, a ship called the 'Galen.' The destruction of a large amount of his property on sea by the French, gave him a claim upon the government, which he has prosecuted with great pertinacity during the latter part of his life. His age was 98 yrs. 10 mo. and 26 days, as inscribed on the plate on his coffin. His funeral took place from his late residence yesterday afternoon. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bradford of the First Unitarian Church, at which the deceased was a constant attendant during his life-time, and by the venerable Dr. Francis of Harvard University, who, in the fulfilment of a promise exacted from him years before his death, came to speak at his funeral. October, 1787, where he continued his pastoral labors for thirty-seven years, until 1824, when he resigned his charge, and a few years afterwards removed to Billerica, where he resided during the remainder of his long life. Mr. Norton retained his mental and physical powers to a remarkable degree until past the age of 90. For the last year or two he spent most of his time during the day reading, and without glasses, which he never used, with the exception of a short time, and then laid them aside as useless."—Daily Advertiser.

He was Town Clerk of Union for many years, and otherwise much engaged in the service of the town.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE SIR JOHN BURKE, K. H., AUTHOR OF "THE PEERAGE."

[By his son, Sir JOHN BERNARD BURKE, Ulster King of Arms at Dublin.]

THE family from which John Burke, Esq., the author of "The Peerage," paternally sprang, was seated in high repute for several successive generations at the Castle of Meelick, in the west of Ireland, an inheritance conferred on its immediate founder, John Burke, by his father Richard, second Earl of Clanricarde. Maternally, Mr. Burke had an equally honorable ancestry, deriving, through his mother, who was cousin-german of the eminent law reporter, Richard Vaughan Barnewall, and of the late Sir Robert Barnewall, Bart., from the distinguished Anglo-Norman house of Barnewall of Crickstown Castle, the parent stock whence issued the noble families of Kingsland and Trimlestown.

Mr. Burke's grandfather, John Burke, was an officer of the Austrian service; and his father, Peter Burke, Esq. of Elm Hall, in the county of Tipperary, was for many years an active magistrate for that and the King's county. In politics a moderate whig, Mr. Peter Burke held himself always aloof from the agitation going on around him, and on more than one occasion proved of great service to government in preserving the peace of his district. He lived on terms of friendship with the late and the present Earls of Rosse, with Colonel Bernard of Castle Bernard, and, indeed, with all his fellow-magistrates, by whom his sense, his rectitude and his independence were duly appreciated and respected. Mr. Peter Burke married Anne, daughter and co-heir of Matthew Dowdall, Esq., M. D. of Mullingar, an eminent physician, by Bridget his wife, daughter of Robert Barnewall, Esq. of Moyrath, county of Meath, and had issue, John, the subject of this notice; Joseph, late a poor-law commissioner in Ireland, from which office he recently retired with a pension, and Bridget, the widow of M. Hoey, Esq.

The elder son, John Burke, was born the 29th of November, 1786. His father, after securing him a good classical education, wished him to attach himself to mercantile affairs. He therefore, in pursuance of this desire, became a merchant, and for some years continued busily engaged in commercial pursuits. The occupation, however, was not to his taste. Naturally endowed with a mind that excelled in the excitement of politics and literature, he felt no pleasure in any other employment. While thus situated, and yet very young, he married his cousin, Mary, second daughter of Bernard O'Reilly, Esq.* of Ballymorice, in the county of Longford, a woman of beauty, talent and amiability, to whom he was ever after devotedly attached. With her he came to London. Once there, Mr. Burke gave vent to his genius. His first essays in writing were strictly political. Articles of his, of course anonymous, appeared in many newspapers, and particularly in the Examiner, then at the height of its popularity. One squib he inserted against Mr. Canning was so sensitively felt by the minister, that, long after, he took occasion to notice it and to express his unforgiveness of it.

Mr. Burke was also a poet; a little volume of verses which he published, partly also in a political vein, had an immediate and rapid sale. It would now be difficult to enumerate the many productions of this nature he at that period of his life successfully, though anonymously, brought out, in prose and verse. Through these, and subsequently the fruits of his attention to the more purely literary periodicals of the day, he always maintained a respectable position, and continued to rear and educate liberally a large family.

After having profitably edited an edition, with a continuation by himself, of Hume and Smollett's History of England, he happily thought of a new work, in improvement of the pitiful volumes called peerages at that time published. This idea brought him into connection with Mr. Colburn, and it is but justice to that eminent publisher, now deceased, to say that he at once fostered the speculation, and joined liberally and energetically in its advancement. The first edition of Mr. Burke's Peerage and Baronetage was published in 1826. The merits of that most popular and useful book are now universally known. Its success, from the beginning, was very great indeed, and that success has since gone on increasing. The last edition was the nineteenth, and it now sells an edition of at least fifteen hundred copies every year. After some few prosperous issues of the Peerage, Mr. Burke was assisted by his son, John Bernard Burke, then but just returned from college. Their united labors have since produced the History of the Landed Gentry, the General Army, and the Extinct Peerage and Baronetage—works of the greatest value to the historian and genealogist.

The cheering prosperity attending these pursuits, and his own friendly disposition, led Mr. Burke into the habit of seeing much company. His hospitality was unbounded, and many, too, of note and station were the visitors who spent frequent and pleasant hours under his social roof. But it was the will of Providence that the joys of his domestic life should not remain unchequered. Within the space of two years, Mr. Burke had the agony to see die three of those children to whom he was so fondly devoted—one of the three who thus perished in their youth was a boy of extraordinary ability and promise. That death the parents never entirely recovered from, but Mr. Burke's cup of bitterness was not yet filled. His wife, who had been the life and soul of his existence; she whose ready wit and perpetual good humor had charmed and won for him so many friends, who, in fact, made his home a paradise, died, after a severe and lingering illness, on the 17th of November, 1846, to the inexpressible grief of all around her. From that day his heart and spirit failed him. After attending her funeral, when he remarked to a relative near him that the pedestal of his life was gone from under him forever, he relinquished all his labor to his son, and retired to the Continent.

He for some time sojourned at Bruges, and latterly at Aix-la-Chapelle, where he was much courted and respected by the English residents. On the morning of the 26th of March, 1848, Mr. Burke went, in apparent health and spirits, to attend divine service. On his return from the church he was struck with apoplexy, and never rallied after. He lingered until the following evening, when he expired, in the sixty-second year of his age. The two physicians who were with him, Dr. Velten and Dr. Straaten, both distinguished practitioners at Aix, declared they never witnessed a more awfully sudden or hopeless case. Mr. Burke was interred with much ceremony in the cemetery at Aix-la-Chapelle, the English residents being present at the funeral. Mr. Burke left three children, viz.: a daughter, Mary Clarinda, and two sons—Peter, a barrister on the Northern circuit, author of various legal and other works, and John Bernard, the present editor of the Peerage and the Landed Gentry, now Sir John Bernard Burke, Ulster king of arms, knight attendant of the order of St. Patrick, and keeper of the records in the Binningham tower of Dublin Castle.

AMES'S ALMANACS.

[From the Boston Gazette, January 14, 1760.]

"In a Connecticut Paper was advertised Almanacks for 1760, with my Name thereto, to be sold by some of the Booksellers in Boston; and also some to be sold at New Haven, at the low Price of Two Shillings per Dozen; and having seen [? some] of them in Boston, it appears that said almanack is a notorious Cheat and Imposition: The Chief Design was (as given out by some who had Honor, Honesty and ingenuity enough to assist in Counterfeiting) to destroy the Credit my Almanack had gained, and prevent its having such Credit for the future: To which Purpose they have endeavoured to render my performance as despicable as possible, by omitting the Preface, Ephemeris, Verses, &c. also what is of Service, Interest Tables, Value of Coin, the several Roads and Stages; and further to make me appear still more contemptible omitted ALL the Week Days in the whole Year and above 50 Days in the Months, and fixed in some Places the wrong Dominical Letter: Surely such a Conduct is to the last Degree, Base!

"I therefore advertise again, That those Almanacks printed in Boston from my Copy have the Printers name thereto, and none others: And I hope that the Defence of my Reputation, in thus advertising, which at this Time seems necessary, will be a sufficient Apology to my Countrymen, whose Good I seek, and on whose Good-will I depend.

"Boston, Jan. 8, 1760."

FAMILY MEETING OF KELLOGGS.

The following account of the gathering of the descendants of the late Hon. CHARLES KELLOGG, of Kelloggsville, N. Y., is copied from the Auburn American, of October 9th, 1857, having been furnished to that paper by a clergyman, who was a guest on the occasion. As such meetings are full of interest to families composing them; and this was marked by the unusual circumstance of eleven brothers and sisters, whose united ages averaged forty-nine and one half years, and whose ranks had never been broken by a single death, it is hoped it will come within the objects of this Register.

I designed before this to have given you an account of the Kellogg reunion, which was enjoyed at the "Americann," in this city, on Tuesday of last week. The family made no parade of their gathering, and none of them have thought to publish it; but it seems to me that such an occasion is of too much interest to be kept from the public. As one who has long known them, and who shared their hospitality that day, I will give your readers an account of the family, and of their recent meeting.

The Kelloggs are of Scotch descent, and they trace an interesting and honorable genealogy. Charles Kellogg, father of the present family, was born in Sheffield, Mass., Oct. 3, 1773. At the age of fourteen he removed to Galwry, Saratoga Co., N. Y., where his father had settled as a pioneer seven years before. At twenty-one he married Mary Ann Otis, a descendant of the Pilgrims, and two years after, with their eldest son, then an infant, and with an outfit but little more than willing hands and stout hearts, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg sought a new home in central New York. Their conveyance was a sled and oxen; their road was through woods which they had to open some portions of the way; and after a fatiguing journey of fifteen days they arrived at their first home in Marcellus, on the western shore of Skeneateles Lake. They erected a log cabin, made a clearing in the forest, remained one year, sold their improvements to a wealthier immigrant, and purchased a second home in Aurelius, (now Owasco,) resided there two years, again sold out, and in the autumn of 1799 removed to the third forest farm, in Sempronius, (now Niles,) where they resided forty years.

These changes enabled them at each remove to enlarge their possessions, and at this home, for many years known as Kelloggsville, their family history chiefly transpired. Before the new farm was fully cleared, Mr. Kellogg added merchandizing to farming, and acquired a moderate fortune. The writer of this remembers when the farmers of Sempronius drew their grain on sleighs to Albany and returned with goods for Mr. Kellogg's store. He was the second justice of the peace appointed in that town, and was supervisor for several years. In 1808 he was elected to the State Assembly, and received a re-election the following year. He subsequently held the office of judge of the county courts. In 1812 the village post-office was established, and he was the first postmaster, while his own name was given by the postmaster general to the office, and since then the village has been called Kelloggsville. In 1821 and 1822, he again represented Cnyuga Co. in the Assembly; and in 1824 he was elected a representative in Congress, and took his seat in Dec. 1825,—the first Congress under Mr. Adams' administration. In all his services as a legislator, he was more a man of deeds than words, and held a high position as a man of eminent justice and practical common sense. In all his offices, and in all his life, he secured the highest confidence and warmest esteem of the public.

Returning from Congress, he gave his chief attention to his farm for the next ten years, and then sold the old homestead and removed to Ann Arbor, Mich., where four of his children were settled. He died in May, 1842, aged 68, leaving the example of as fine and as happy a christian manhood as one often sees on earth. Mrs. Kellogg, who was in all respects worthy of such a husband, survived him only two and a half years.

They had eleven children, six sons and five daughters, all of whom are alive and happy now.

They are, 1, Day Otis, b. Aug. 7, 1796, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; 2, Dwight, b. Oct. 4, 1797, of New York; 3, Dor, b. Feb. 8, 1799, of Ann Arbor, Mich.; 4, Delia, (Mrs. C. Whitwood of Auburn,) b. April 7, 1803; 5, Abigail Ann, (Mrs. E. A. Warden of Auburn,) b. June 10, 1804; 6, Charles Harvey, b. Sept. 19, 1808, of Lansingburgh, N. Y.; 7, Electa Semanthy, (Mrs. Abell, a widow, of Peekskill;) b. July 28th, 1810; 8, Dan W., b. March 26th, 1812, of Brooklyn; 9, Dorliska, (Mrs. Backus,) b. Jan. 17, 1816, of Peekskill; 10, Frances Louisa, (Mrs. Otis, of Almond, N. Y.) b. March 6th, 1818; 11, John Quincy, b. March 24th, 1823, of Yonkers.

The brothers and sisters now have thirty-one children, twenty-three sons and eight daughters.

The sons are, all but one, engaged in mercantile pursuits, and a more capable family of merchants I have seldom found. The daughters are not behind their brothers in mind or heart, while their marriage connexions are excellent. The eldest son, Day Otis, has been a member of the State Assembly, Mayor of Troy, Paymaster General of N. Y. State Militia, and U. S. Consul at Glasgow, Scotland; to all of which offices he gave character and honor. The youngest daughter, Frances, resided for a time with her husband on a consulship in Switzerland.

This excellent family were never all together but twice in their lives. In 1836, they all met for the first time in the old homestead at Kelloggsville, when their father and mother blessed them. Their second reunion was last week, (Sept. 29th.) The sun took their pictures in a group of excellent photographs, after which they dined at the American. Their wives and husbands, (with three exceptions,) were present, as were also a number of their children, with two or three guests. Hon. Day Otis Kellogg read an interesting sketch of their history, and addressed to them a few very tender and eloquent remarks on the character of their parents, on their reunion, and their family hopes and loves and duties. They sang family hymns, and related both sad and mirthful stories of early life. They intended to visit the old homestead together the next day, but were prevented from going. During the feast of reunion they received message after message of joy and love, by telegraph and otherwise, from absent children and old friends.

Here, sir, is a family, remarkable at least for numbers and fine health, and for a general resemblance of features and characters, with some finely drawn lines of personal dissimilitude; a group of good heads and faces, on each of whose characters and in each of whose lives and fortunes, the light of the best parental influence and christian education may be traced. And though I have enjoyed many happy occasions, I remember none that brought hearts to a warmer glow of gladness, or will shed a sweeter light on the future, than this last reunion of the Kellogg family.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1857.

GENEALOGICAL ITEMS OF THE KELLOGG FAMILY.

[By D. O. KELLOGG, a member of the N. E. Hist. Gen. Soc.]

There seems a propriety in introducing the name of KELLOGG into this "Register," as the earliest history of the family locates them in New England, and connects them with its annals. For several generations they are believed to have remained there, though now the name is found in many parts of the United States, and their descendants have become numerous. The name is found in the early records of the first settlements on the Connecticut River, but no connected history of the family of those days has been discovered.

It is not pretended that these fragments embrace more than a brief record of a portion of the family, and it is admitted that they are entirely deficient in relation to the immigration of its progenitors from Europe, as well as to the history of their early descendants. Much remains to be known before a complete genealogy can be written. It is, however, hoped that this beginning may stimulate some one having leisure, and feeling sufficient interest in the research, to continue the subject, until a full record shall be published.

The present writer has been unable, in the limited investigations his pursuits have permitted, to trace back the progenitors to their first settlement in America, or to their European home immediately prior to their immigration. An existing similarity of name, now in Scotland, gives a probable clue to their early history. Tradition relates that they were originally Scotch, and that, being partizans of James VI., of Scotland, they came with that prince to England when he ascended the throne of Great Britain as James I.—where they remained until their settlement in New England. They came here soon after the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, and settled somewhere in Massachusetts.

The Herald's College, London, records two ancient families in Scotland, bearing the name of KELLOCK. One was of the nobility,—the head of which was a duke. No trace of such rank now remains. The other were commoners, having a heraldic claim to the distinction of a coat of arms, the description of which is, for the present, omitted. The simplicity of American institutions suggests that the claim of descent should be based on the latter.

Late inquiries in Scotland, by the writer, led to the discovery of two families, now residing there,—one in Fifeshire, the other in Dumfriesshire,—there may be others, of the same name as that in heraldry. The Gaelic idiom justifies the belief that, originally, the name was written KILLOCK. The guttural sound given by the Scotch to the letter k, at the termination of words, is very nearly the American sound of g, and accouits for the change of spelling in this country. When surnames were first introduced into Britain, the names of cities, towns, manors, estates, and local objects were often adopted by families. This suggests a probable explanation of the origin and meaning of the name. In the Gaelic language, KIL is a burial place, and LOCH a lake. Thus KILLOCK indicates Lake Cemetery, or the family of the Lake Burial Ground. In process of time the name has become KELLOCK, in Scotland, and KELLOGG in the United States.

Materials now at hand serve only to give an imperfect account of that branch of the family settled in western Massachusetts, a century and a half ago, and of such of their descents as were among the early emigrants to the State of New York.

HOUSEHOLD REGULATIONS OF HENRY VIII.

The following extracts have been transcribed from a Manuscript of the time of Henry VIII. They relate to the Household regulations of this noted English sovereign.

We give the literal reading with an amended orthography.

Its design may have been to caricature certain customs common in high places at that day.

Quaint and inelegant though these extracts may appear, and meagre intrinsically as a historic record, as they confessedly are, yet from the great antiquity of the paper, (1537,) it may possess some interest, if from no other cause. A. W., of F., Ct.

"His Highness's attendants are not to steal any locks or keys, tables, forms, cupboards, or other furniture, out of Noblemen's or Gentlemen's houses where he goes to visit.

There shall be no romping with the maids on the staircases by which dishes and other things are often broken—Care should also be taken of the pewter spoons, and that the wooden ones, used in the kitchen, be not broken or stolen.

The pages shall not interrupt the kitchen maids;—and he that is guilty of seduction shall pay a fine of two marks to his Highness, and have his allowance of beer withheld for a month."

INSCRIPTIONS FROM THE BURYING-GROUND IN HULL, MASS.

[Transcribed, July, 1857, by W. S. BARTON.]

THIS collection comprises all the inscriptions, which are at all legible, found upon the various stones and monuments in the only burying-ground in Hull. There are a few rough stones, partially broken or buried in the ground, upon which inscriptions once existed, but are now too much defaced and weatherbeaten, where exposed to the elements, to allow their various memorials to be even partially decyphered. Two or three dates, only, are preserved from the fragments of stone found in the enclosure; one, with the title of a name, "Capt.," and the date, "Died April y<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> 1708," the earliest date found; one with the date only of "April 30. 1718," and another of "Sept 30. 1759." The burying-ground is situated towards the easterly part of the town, on the west side of the road so constantly frequented in the summer season by parties visiting Nantasket Beach, and is but a short distance from the Marine telegraph station at Hull, and the coast in the vicinity of the lower light in Boston harbor. The number of deaths recorded in this collection is one hundred and three, and the different inscriptions are given verbatim, as near as may be, the names of individuals and families being alphabetically arranged, so far as the inscriptions would allow.

The writer was engaged one summer afternoon only in transcribing these interesting memorials, and may have occasionally failed in literal exactness, but, in the main, believes his record to be faithfully accurate and reliable.

A BRANCH OF THE WHITNEY FAMILY.

[Communicated by Dr. L. M. HARRIS.]

On looking over the genealogy of the Whitney Family, as given in two late numbers of the Register, I find that the family name of the wife of John,<sup>2</sup> son of John<sup>2</sup> and Ruth (Reynolds) Whitney, was not known, either to Dr. Bond, or H. A. W.

Robert Harris, my emigrant ancestor, was married, Jan. 24, 1642-3, to Elizabeth Boughey, at Roxbury. Their eldest child, Elizabeth,<sup>2</sup> was born Nov. 9, 1644. Their next child, John,<sup>2</sup> was baptized Aug. 8, 1647. Elizabeth,<sup>2</sup> dau. of Robert H. m., (probably) in 1669, John<sup>2</sup> Whitney; and John,<sup>2</sup> son of Robert H. m., Sept. 20, 1670, Mary, b. 26. 7. 1650, dau. of Richard Sanger of Watertown. Now, by reading the will of Robert Reynolds, Vol. IX., p. 137, Gen. Reg., you will find that Ruth, the mother of John<sup>2</sup> W., and Mary, mother of John<sup>2</sup> H.'s wife were both dau. of the said Reynolds.

To make this more intelligible, I give the names of the Patriarch Robert's children in full, and in some order.

Children of Robert and Elizabeth (Boughey) Harris.

1. Elizabeth, born Nov. 9, 1644, m. 1669, John<sup>2</sup> Whitney of Watertown.
2. John, baptized Aug. 8, 1647, m. Sept. 20, 1670, Mary, b. 26. 7. 1650, dau. of Richard Sanger of Watertown.
3. Timothy, born July 9, 1650, m. April 2, 1697, Abigail, b. March 30, 1681, dau. of Thomas and Susannah Morey of Roxbury.
4. Daniel, born May 14, 1652, m. June 14, 1682, Joanna Brown. Parentage not ascertained.
5. Priscilla, born Oct. 7, 1653, died Jan. 2, 1718, unm. Have a copy of her will, made Dec. 31, 1717.

I find no record of the Patriarch, Robert's, death; but his signature to a deed, May 19, 1698, is yet in existence; and a legacy, to be paid two years after his decease, to his dau. Elizabeth Whitney, is receipted for by herself and husband, Jan. 14, 1702-3, which makes it probable that he died in Jan. 1700-1.

John Whitney, the grandson of John and Elinor Whitney, the first settlers, was made freeman in May, 1684, and d. March 4, 1726, aged 83. "Elizabeth Whitney owned covenant at Roxbury chh. 30. 2. 1671." The name of John W. appears in the list of members of the 2d chh. in Roxbury, when gathered by "ye Rev. Nehemiah Walter, Nov. 2d, 1712," and, doubtless, he had previously been a member of the first chh. in Roxbury. His houselot, containing nine acres, was situated in that part of Roxbury called Jamaica Plain; and lying on the right as you pass up Pond St. to the south part of Brookline, which town was called Muddy River until the year 1705.

Whitney's lot extended back from the street, westerly, to the line separating Roxbury from Brookline. The late Major Benjamin Weld of Roxbury, who died in 1852, being then in his 86th year, told me, a short time before his decease, that he well remembered the Whitney house to have been standing in his boyhood. The old tabernacle has, probably, been among the things that were, from 75 to 80 years. Within the last 14 years, two hollows, marking the places of the cellar and well have been visible; but the plough has since passed over, and obliterated all marks of them. The dwelling-house of Robert Harris stood about six rods over the line into Brookline; and the two houses—Harris's and Whitney's—were about  $\frac{1}{2}$  of a mile apart, following the road that leads into Brookline. In the rear of the spot where the old Whitney mansion stood, the ground descends on a gradual slope for several rods to a narrow strip of meadow, through which runs a pleasant little brook. Beyond the meadow, the ground rises abruptly to an elevation many feet higher than the front of the lot; and still rises, gradually, forming a slope of considerable dimensions, and extending westerly to its boundary on Brookline. All that part of the lot lying west of the brook is covered with a fine grove of forest trees. On the removal of the Whitneys, the property came, by purchase, into the possession of the Child Family, whose premises it joined, and was by them retained until about four years since, when Mr. Stephen Child of Boston, lately deceased, sold the lot to Mr. Abel Adams. On the elevated plain in the rearward portion of his lot, Mr. Adams has erected a magnificent stone edifice, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, which fairly out-gables Hawthorne's Pyncheon house.

The numbers given in parentheses refer to the same persons mentioned in the Whitney Genealogy, as given in Vol. XI. of the Register, beginning on page 113, and continued on page 225.

NOTES.—The ages of John and Elinor Whitney, and of their children, as recorded, at the time of their embarkation for New England, in April, 1635, (see Vol. X., Third Series, Mass. Hist. Coll., p. 24.) and, as stated in the beginning of the Whitney Genealogy, were doubtless incorrect. It is probable that they were several years older than this record would make them appear.

Samuel Whitney of Brunswick and son Samuel taken prisoners, to Canada, July 24, 1751, and sold for 126 livres. He had a wife and 6 children. He since made his escape.

Solomon Whitney made his escape from the Indians, and died at Hospital, Nov. 18, 1750. Timothy Whitney was bought for £315. Per "Revolution" Book, Vol. 74, (VIII.) pages 46 and 59, at State House, Massachusetts.

THE HONG KONG MONTHLY MAGAZINE.—Newburyport is somewhat celebrated for the great number of publishers and editors it has produced. They are scattered all over the Union, and we can call to mind enough to supply a whole state with publications; but we were not aware till Monday, when we received No. 4 of the above-named Magazine, edited by Mrs. Annie E. Beecher, (formerly Miss Annie E. Goodwin,) at Noronha's office—Oswold's Terrace, Hong Kong, that a native of Newburyport was editing for the Chinese. It is a Magazine of 48 pages, very creditable to the editor, who had gained some celebrity as a writer before enlisting as an American missionary in that distant land.—Newburyport Herald, 28 Dec., 1857.

"Salem April 23<sup>d</sup>. Last Lords-Day dyed and this day was buried the Honourable Madam Ann Bradstreet aged 79 years; She was the relict widow of Governour Bradstreet, and a Gentlewoman of good Birth and Excellent Education, being Daughter to Emanuel Downing Esq; and Sister to the Honourable Sir George Downing Bart, sometime Envoy Extraordinary from King Charles the II. at the Hague: But that which rendered her one of the Excellent ones of the Earth was her known Eminence in Religion both as to the knowledge and power of it, with which were happily joyned many rare Endowments of mind, and a most agreeable Conversation: she was born in London, and came very young to New-England, was first Married to Capt Joseph Gardner of Salem, and afterwards to Governour Bradstreet, but left no Issue by either."—Boston News Letter, April 20–27, 1713.

THE FAMILY OF PADDOCK.

[Communicated by Z. Eddy, Esq.]

I. Robert Paddock, the Pilgrim ancestor, was settled in Plymouth in 1634, and probably several years before and after that time.* He afterwards settled in Duxbury, and is noticed in Windsor's history of that town. He died in 1650. See Reg., vol. 8, p. 316. He had a son Robert, who lived in Dartmouth; and John Eddy, son of Samuel, the Pilgrim, married his daughter, Susanna, Nov. 30, 1665. He had also a son John, and there are families of his descent now in that region. Also, Zechariah, brother of said John Eddy, married "Alice Paddock, daughter of Robert Paddock of Duxbury, May 7, 1663. It is probable she was the daughter of the first Robert, who also left a son, Zechariah, born in the "fore part of the year," May, 1636; also George and John. George married Sarah Ricard in 1657. John married Anna Jones; he was born in 1643. Mary, his daughter, m. Thomas Roberts, 1656; she was born in 1638. Alice was born March 7, 1640.

II. Zechariah Paddock, son of the first Robert, lived in Yarmouth, (Cape Cod,) and died there May 1, 1727. A very full and favorable account is given of him in the Register, vol. 8, p. 251, taken from the N. E. Weekly Journal, of June 5, 1727. He married Deborah Senrs, (1659,) who survived him, and left "of his own posterity, forty-eight grandchildren and thirty-eight great-grandchildren. "He obtained the character of a righteous man." The most of his descendants were through his son Zechariah, born in 1664.

III. Zechariah Paddock. Of his personal history little is known. Two of his sons emigrated to the town of Middleborough,—Ichabod and Thomas. No doubt the records and graveyard, at Yarmouth, afford the account of his birth, death, and those of his children.

IV. So, of his son, Thomas Paddock of Middleborough; there are records and grave stones which give an account of his numerous family. Two of his sons, Thomas and Adino, are remembered. Thomas lived in Middleborough, and was distinguished, physically, as the most powerful and robust man in town. Adino lived in Boston, and had a store in Tremont Street, and planted the large elm trees in that street, near Park Street Meeting-house; was captain of a company then called "the Train Artillery;" was a loyalist, and left Boston with the British troops, when evacuated by them in 1776. He was called Col. Paddock.

Of Ichabod, son of Zechariah, jr., we have a more full account. He was born in Yarmouth, June 1, 1687; married Joanna Faunce, daughter of Elder Faunce, son of the Pilgrim John Faunce, and had born to him, in Yarmouth, Bethiah, b. Sept. 21, 1713, d. same year; Priscilla, b. Oct. 1, 1715; Jane, b. Aug. 1717; Joanna, b. June 15, 1719; Ephraim, b. April 15, 1721. He removed to Middleborough in 1722, and had born to him there, Thomas, May 5, 1723; Zechariah, b. Feb. 20, 1725; Patience, b. Nov. 6, 1727, and James, b. April 11, 1730.

He was unfortunate in his removal, having the sole money of his farm stolen from the vessel in which he sailed to Plymouth; and having driven all his neat cattle to his new farm, and feeding them with fresh meadow hay, they all died, having before been kept upon hay from the salt marsh; and English hay at that time was very little cultivated. He and his wife were both active and respectable members of the First Church in Middleborough. He died August 5, 1750, aged 63; and she died May, 1758, aged 68.

* He lived in Plymouth, 1643; he also d. there. See Reg., vol. 4, p. 255.

V. 1. Priscilla, daughter of Ichabod, married Thomas Savery, by whom she had a large family of sons and daughters. One, Dea. Thomas Savery, is remembered as a man of sound sense and shrewdness, and of eminent piety. One daughter married a Burbank, and another, Capt. William Stephens of Plymouth.

2. Jane, married Gideon Bradford, Esq., of Plympton, a descendant of Gov. Bradford, of whose genealogy there is a full account in the Register, vol. 4, p. 337, and the names of her seven children are there given. They were all heads of numerous families.

3. Joanna married Lewis Harlow, and lived in Woodstock, Vt., and had a large family of children.

4. James, son of Ichabod, had a family and lived in Holland and in Brimfield, Mass.

5. Thomas, son of Ichabod, lived in Middleborough; m. Hannah, dau. of William Thomas. Had sons, William and Stephen, and daughters, Mary and Sally. Mary m. Holmes Cushman, and Sally m. Samuel Eddy. They all had large families in the State of Vermont.

6. Ephraim, son of Ichabod, m. Sarah Bradford, sister of Gideon, who m. his sister. They lived in Pembroke. See Reg., vol. 4, p. 49.

7. Zechariah, son of said Ichabod, and great-grandson of said Zechariah, first named, m. Martha Washburn, lived in Middleborough, and was an extensive manufacturer of fishermen's hooks and women's glow-shoes. She was a descendant of the Pilgrim, Joshua Pratt. He lived on the ancestral lands inherited through his mother from Elder Faunce. He d. June 4, 1795, aged 70 years. He was a well read and well informed man, and had a good report in the church to which he belonged. She d. April 10, 1819, aged 87, long well reported and distinguished for her piety. They were married in 1748, and had a family of ten children. These are their names.

VI. 1. Jane, b. July 20, 1752. She m. John Faunce of Duxbury, a descendant of the Elder, and d. young, leaving one or two children.

2. Elisha, b. May 5, 1754. He enlisted in the revolutionary army, and died in the retreat from Ticonderoga.

3. Lydia, b. July 22, 1756. She m. Capt. Joshua Eddy, of the army of the revolution, April 19, 1778. An account of their family is given in the Register, vol. 8, p. 203. He died in 1833; she d. in 1838. He was 85 years of age; she was 82.

4. Gaius, b. Nov. 2, 1758. He was a revolutionary soldier, and d. on his farm in the State of Illinois, aged about 70 years, leaving a numerous family. His wife's name was Polly Wood.

5. Apollos, b. Sept. 8, 1760, also a revolutionary soldier; he lived in the State of Vermont, and died at the age of 77, leaving a number of children.

John, b. June 3, 1763; m. Lydia Cushing of Plympton, daughter of Col. Cushing; lived in Middleborough and had eight children, all daughters, some of whom have large families. He was a carpenter and died at the age of about 70. Distinguished for his practical jokes.

7. Peter, b. July 3, 1765; d. at the age of two years of accidental death.

8. Joanna, b. July 21, 1767; m. Oliver Cushman of Plympton; lived in Plainfield, Cona., and in Brookfield; removed to the State of Illinois, where she died, leaving two sons and two daughters.

9. Joanna, —; was betrothed to Isaac Thompson, Esq., but died unmarried. She was born in the year 1750, being the eldest of the family.

10. Zechariah, a bachelor, who died about 40 years of age.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

MR. EDITOR,

Among your "Notes and Queries," be pleased to insert the following, and oblige
Yours, respectfully, W. J.

NOT far from the beginning of this century, and while several of the spoils of revolutionary Europe were brought under the hammer in America, an elaborately sculptured marble bust of Pope Nicholas V., in pontifical dress, was sold by the auctioneer, T. K. Jones, then keeping his rooms at the corner of Kilby and State Streets.

This Pope was the Founder of the Vatican Library; and the inquirer wishes to ascertain to what quarter his bust was transferred, and where it is now preserved. This inquiry is of some literary interest, of course; but it will not be thought unimportant if it tends to keep alive or to resuscitate the memory of a benefit conferred on literature and science by a pope—so rare, unhappily, is such a record!

A recent historian, or biographer, thus characterizes him:

"Nicolas V. [Tommaso de Sarzana, who died March 24, 1455,] was one of the brightest ornaments of the pontifical throne. In the exercise of authority over the ecclesiastical dominions, he exhibited a happy union of gentleness and firmness. Purely disinterested in his views, he did not lavish upon his relatives the wealth which the prudent administration of his finances poured into his coffers; but appropriated the revenues of the church to the promotion of its dignity. The gorgeous solemnity which graced his performance of religious rites, evinced his attention to decorum and the grandeur of his taste. In the superb edifices which were erected under his auspices the admiring spectator beheld the revival of ancient magnificence. As the founder of the Vatican Library he claims the homage of the lovers of classic literature. His court was the resort of the learned, who found in him a discriminating patron and a generous benefactor. It was the subject of general regret, that the brief term of his pontificate prevented the maturing of the mighty plans he had conceived for the encouragement of the liberal arts. When his lifeless remains were consigned to the grave, the friends of peace lamented the premature death of a pontiff, who had assiduously labored to secure the tranquillity of Italy; and they who were sensible of the charms of enlightened piety regretted the loss of a true father of the faithful, who had dedicated his splendid talents to the promotion of the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of the Christian community."

OLD AGE IN WOBURN.—Woburn, March 17, 1858. Mr. Editor: I saw in one of the daily papers a few days ago a notice of an old man living in Woburn, named Converse, and thought I would give you a further description of the family.

Jesse Converse, the oldest man in Woburn, was 93 years old last Feb. He was the third of seven sons, children of Josiah Converse. (His two older brothers were in the revolutionary war, one of whom was at the taking of Burgoyne.) He is hale, hearty and bright. He has a brother, Joshua Converse, living about a mile from him, who was 91 years old last January, and who would, at reaping or binding stalks of rye, put many a man of half his years to thinking seriously whether he might not come out second best in a trial. He was a member of the Legislature in 1836. He has another brother, Luther Converse, who resides about half a mile from him, who was 81 years old last January, who is also smart and bright. They are all moral and temperate, but not total abstemious. In their religious opinions they are Calvinist Baptists. The oldest brother is a deacon. The second brother don't want that office, and the third won't have it. Politically they are hunker democrats of the straightest sect, and they can either of them give strong reasons for the faith that is in them, either religious or political. If there are three brothers in any town in the State, as old, bright, smart, moral and temperate, let us hear from them.

Yours, C. D.

The evidence in support of the questioned fact contained in the preceding communication, and in the letter of Amos Foster, was so conclusive that another article appeared in the Patriot of the 15th of August, 1825, acknowledging the successful vindication of the authenticity of the toast given upon the preceding 4th of July. This article, although without any signature, was universally attributed to Dr. Waterhouse, and the internal evidence points to that source, for even here is an apparent unwillingness to allow to Warren the honor he so richly merited.

The article referred to is in these words:—

BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL—ONCE MORE.

History is under obligations to the Adjutant General for his successful elucidation of a doubtful point, referred to by "Historian." It would have been well had the like pains been taken 50 years ago, as it regarded the Battle of Bunker Hill: but alluring fashion, instead of heightening the charms of truth, injures her dignified simplicity. The partisans, amongst the "Sons of Liberty," following, in that day, the fashion of monarchies, were not contented with a glorious battle, fought by the people, but must needs have some particular leader or Hero,—some Leonidas, who might, for what we know, have been in the rear of his 300 Spartans. Our Fathers, like all those of the whole world, deemed it expedient to emblazon a victory by some well known name or some man of rank, as the Dukes of Cumberland or York, though dead weights on their respective armies. The good Washington, when he last visited Boston expressed his pain and uneasiness at having so much credit given to HIM, during our seven years' contest, and so little to the patriotic army and officers which he commanded. The noblest democratic battle fought was that at Bunker Hill, where each man did that which seemed good in his own eyes.

It is a mistake to suppose that the writer grudged the great credit due to Dr. Warren. In proof of it we cannot help subjoining, that if any one should think fit to attach to Warren the epithet of "chivalrous," we hope he will add it to no other valiant American who fought on that day. Before the revolutionary contest ended, there were some chivalrous British and French who fought bravely under our banners; but Warren stepped forth as a private citizen, in a more serious and solemn manner. The error has been in calling him a General, instead of an illustrious and fearless patriot, as was likewise Judge Winthrop, who was slightly wounded, and among the very last who retreated.

The serious question is—why sink the names of Gardiner of Cambridge,—Parker of Chelmsford,—McClary of New Hampshire,—More of —, who all had commissions, and lost their lives, to elevate the name of one Bostonian who had none? Our country people have thought, feeling and pride, and have talked all these things over their mugs of cider, on winter evenings, for half a century past; and, take them collectively, they generally think right; and when they come to know more of John Paul Jones they may think more justly of some other foreigners; more lightly of some of our people. Truth is eternal and unbending. It allows of no tamperings, humblings, intrigues, barbers or exceptions, and is not at the caprice of times, places and persons. It depends not on particular lights or positions. In studied dress, or dishabille,—in every attitude and look, Truth is the same; equally captivating and commanding. Histories composed of ingredients of this high quality come forth but rarely; for few can produce them. A work of elastic spirit and commanding genius, which has all the mastery of a ruling mind, appears but now and then in the long course of centuries; and when it does it commands all before it, like that voice from the dominion of thought, which philosophers, real politicians and historians have considered the Vox Dei. That is the history which alone teaches philosophy by example.

On this general subject it may not be amiss to make a particular and illustrative remark, viz., that every account, and among them this of Gen. Sumner's, tends to confirm the narrative of the Battle of Bunker Hill, written by Major Gen. Dearborn, especially the incidental or circumstantial observation of Amos Foster, who, in his letter to Gen. Sumner, says: "I know Gen. Putnam (he should have said Colonel) and Col. Prescott well. I saw Putnam riding round, very active. I saw him ten times at least, I should think. Putnam went off with David Baily and a number of others; and they took tools with them to intrench on Bunker Hill; but a number of them came back again," (to Breed's Hill, where the battle was raging.)

This is precisely Gen. Dearborn's account of it, which has been corroborated by Governor Eustis, and confirmed by his friend the late Mr. Andrew Cragie, who were both together on the hill, and assisted in burying Asa Pollard; and who saw Col. Putnam, "very active, riding about." Truth is a spirit too close for confinement.

That first military lesson which was given to Gen. Howe, on the 17th of June, 1775, was emphatically the battle of the people. Col. Prescott was the first and most commanding character in it; yet if you cast your eye on that apocryphal painting of the battle by Mr. Trumbull, you will see Col. Prescott represented more like the driver of a baggage-wagon than a soldier, while the British officers appear in all their flattered pomp of Victory and Humanity! We cannot denounce too strongly, nor castigate too severely, false medals, false statuary, and false pictures, or value too highly faithful ones, because of their durability.

Perhaps there will be no more appropriate place than this to introduce one or two incidents relating to Bunker Hill which came within my personal knowledge. While I was Adjutant General, I learned that Gen. Ward's Order Book was in the hands of Mr. Ward of Brookfield, a relative of the Gen., who was the Commander of the American forces at Cambridge till the 3d of July, when Gen. Washington assumed the command. I obtained the loan of that Order Book, and found it so interesting that I caused the whole volume to be copied and placed in the Adjutant General's office, where I left it when I resigned, lest the original should be lost. In the same volume there was also made a copy of Gen. Thomas's Order Book at Roxbury. That volume is now, I presume, where I left it. My chief solicitude to obtain the Order Book of Gen. Ward was to ascertain what order he had given for the fortifying of Bunker Hill. I also wanted to read his account of the battle. I found nothing of the kind; but, on the margin of the book, against the seventeenth of June, there was this memorandum: "The battle of Charlestown was fought this day. Killed, 115; wounded, 305; captivated, 30; total, 450." Gov.

Gage, in his account, acknowledged a loss on the part of the British, of 1054, of whom 226 were killed, 828 wounded, including 19 officers killed and 28 wounded. It is remarkable that no full account of the battle was recorded by Gen. Ward, because hereafter everybody will inquire for his Order Book to learn about the battle. It does not appear from that book that either Putnam or Prescott made any report; nor does there appear any order approving the conduct of the troops in the battle. This omission may be accounted for by the fact that the troops were not organized, and that Gen. Ward had as yet no regular staff.

Another interesting matter that occurs to me relates to the fortifications on Bunker Hill. After my appointment, in 1818, to the office of Adjutant General, by Gov. Brooks, his staff was completed by the appointment of Samuel Swett, Benjamin Pickman, and Theodore Lynam, as aids. About this time Gen. Dearborn made a publication respecting Gen. Putnam, in which his bravery in the battle of Bunker Hill was doubted. He also, in connection with the publication, gave a "plan" of the redoubt, the breastwork and the rail fence, behind which he stated that Col. Stark's regiment, in which he was a Captain, was stationed. The plan struck Gov. Brooks as being erroneous; and he said to Col. Swett and myself, "Gentlemen, I have not been on to that ground since the battle, and if you will accompany me I will go there and examine it."

It must be recollected that Brooks returned to Cambridge on the 16th of June, the day before the battle of Bunker Hill, and that the battalion of Bridge's regiment, in which was his company, was left at Cambridge, and not ordered to Charlestown. As the troops were about to march to Charlestown, Brooks applied to Bridge for leave to go with his company, among the other troops, to Charlestown. Bridge said he had no authority to allow it, and referred him to Gen. Ward. On applying to him he replied to Brooks, "I did not order your battalion of Bridge's regiment to Charlestown, because I want to have troops here that I can rely upon, in case the enemy should consider that the main position at Cambridge is so weakened by the expedition, that they can safely make their main attack here." This may account for Brooks not being in the battle, when a part of his regiment was there; but, as he had obtained permission from Gen. Ward to go as a volunteer, under a charge to return to his command in case of necessity, he went as a volunteer, without his company, and was engaged all the night before the battle, in counselling Putnam, and Gridley the engineer, about the position of the works that were to be thrown up. He left early in the morning, with a message from Col. Prescott to Gen. Ward, requesting a reënforcement. His recital of the position of the works at Bunker Hill must be of the highest authority.

According to assignment, the Adjutant General and Col. Swett, his first aid, met the Governor on the hill, in the beginning of the month of June, 1818, for the purpose of examining the works and comparing them with Dearborn's plan. We went into the redoubt together. After looking about him and examining the ground, the Governor said, "Gentlemen, where is the sallyport? I do not see where it was. Let us look about and see if we can find it." We found an excavation in the lines of the fort on the side opposite to that where we afterwards found it had been when the works were thrown up, the night before the battle. "Gentlemen," said the Governor, "can we verify this? For," continued he, "the fact is, the breastwork ran in a northerly or northeasterly direction from the sallyport; and if we can ascertain where that breastwork was we can identify the true position of the sallyport." He requested Col. Swett and Major Swan, (who came down with the Governor from Medford, and whose father owned or leased the ground) to go several rods in a direction which he pointed out; then to turn and walk at right angles to the course they had before taken, to see if they could find where the old breastwork was, which had probably been ploughed down. The grass was high, and it could not be seen until the gentlemen, wading the grass, came into a hollow place and ascended a little height, and then passed down into another hollow on the other side. The gentlemen exclaimed, "We have found it." Gov. Brooks said, "I thought you would; let us examine a little further. Take the same course, and go down a short distance and see if you find there the same evidences of its position." They did so, and satisfied the Governor that they had discovered the place where the breastwork was built, and thus verified the fact, that the sallyport was originally in the place where he had indicated that it ought to be found.

It was plain to the observer that if the breastwork ran in the direction indicated by Gen. Dearborn's plan, it would puzzle the commander to tell on which side of it his men should be placed, in order to defend the main position. Thus it appears, from Gen. Brooks' recollection of the ground, that the plan which Gen. Dearborn had published, in connection with his work impeaching Gen. Putnam, was not a plan of the ground, as it was on the 17th of June, when the battle was fought. The explanation of these facts is probably this: that Dearborn's plan was that of the works after the retreat of the American forces, and the consequent change of the relative position of the two armies.

For, if the works had not been thus changed, it would have been easy for the Americans, if they designed to re-take the fort from which they had retreated, for those of them who were posted on Winter Hill and Prospect Hill to pass over Charlestown neck, and for those on Cobble Hill to cross the mill-dam over the creek, or, in winter, to go over the mill-pond on the ice, and thence to march up the hill unmolested from the breastwork.

After finishing the examination of the works on the hill, the Governor pointed out the place where those who were on the ground at the time, stated to him that Warren was killed. It was about three or four rods northwesterly from the work, near a young elm tree which had grown up since the battle. The location of the "rail fence" was also pointed out.

The American redoubt was about eight rods square. Notwithstanding the firing from the Lively, man-of-war, which commenced early in the morning, the men continued to labor steadily upon the breastwork for some time. At dawn, the officers and men on the decks of the British vessels in the harbor were seen, with their spy-glasses, taking observation. As their firing upon the works continued, with some intermissions, at length one man fell mortally wounded. The name of the man who was thus killed was Coburn. The others were so much alarmed that they hesitated to work in that place. Prescott, to show that there was not so much danger of being killed as they supposed, mounted the parapet in his banyan gown, and, strutting backward and forward upon it, he raised his "three-cornered scraper," as his cocked hat was called, and in raising it turned his queue around so that it hung over his right shoulder, giving him a quite ludicrous appearance; and, swinging his hat in the air, with loud exclamations he shouted to the British, "Hit me if you can." The men still hesitated to work while the body of Coburn was lying there, and Prescott accordingly ordered it to be buried immediately. It was interred at once, a little in the rear of the redoubt. When the order was given for the man to be buried, some one exclaimed, "What! bury a man without prayers?" Of this, Prescott took no notice.

Gen. Dearborn, in his publication, states that he saw Gen. Putnam carrying off spades and other intrenching tools when he should have been directing the forces. Dearborn, it should be noticed, was stationed behind the rail fence, which was not a favorable position for making observations. Putnam was as active as any man that morning. He saw how much necessity there was for reinforcement, and went to Cambridge to urge Gen. Ward to send it. That act Dearborn considered as retreating from the field.

From Gen. Ward's order-book, it appears that Gen. Washington took the command at Cambridge July 3, 1775, and that the first order respecting military operations which he gave, was one approving of the sentence of the court-martial upon Capt. Callender, which broke him. It is dated July 7th. Gen. Washington says:—

"It is with inexpressible concern that the General, upon his first arrival in the army, should find an officer sentenced by a general court-martial for cowardice; a crime of all others the most infamous in a soldier, the most injurious to an army, and the last to be forgiven, inasmuch as it may, and often does happen, that the cowardice of a single officer proves the destruction of an whole army. The General, therefore, with great concern, (and more especially as the transaction happened before he had the command of the troops,) thinks himself obliged, for the good of the service, to approve the judgment of the court-martial with respect to Capt. John Callender, who is hereby sentenced to be cashiered. Capt. John Callender is accordingly cashiered, and dismissed from all further service in the Continental army as an officer."

The justice of this sentence was universally acknowledged. It should be stated, however, to the credit of Capt. Callender, that he was so much mortified by the decision, that he determined to restore himself to favor; and for this purpose, he joined his company as a volunteer private, and fought bravely in every action in which his company was engaged. At the battle of Long Island, after both the captain and lieutenant of the company were killed, by the request of the company he took the command. He continued in the service, and distinguished himself on many occasions.

It is a very singular circumstance, that Gov. Gage had determined to take possession of Dorchester heights on the same day that the battle of Bunker Hill took place; but the demonstration by the Provincials, in taking possession of Breed's Hill, diverted him from that purpose. In the following year, we took possession of Dorchester heights ourselves. At the time they were taken possession of, as I have received the impression from some person—whose name I do not now recollect—Washington had but little ammunition. In order to conceal from the soldiers the true state of the army in that respect, he ordered powder casks to be filled with sand, and that several loads of them should be carried to the heights by the way of Roxbury, where the right wing of the army, under Gen. Thomas, was posted. By this deception, the soldiers were satisfied that the army was in a condition to defend itself, notwithstanding the reports that the supply of ammunition was nearly exhausted.

After possession was taken of the heights, hogsheds were filled with earth, and so placed that they could be rolled down upon the enemy to break the columns, if they should dare attempt to march up the hill.

As my intentions in this article were limited to facts and incidents connected with Gen. Warren, I will forego the recital of other items which crowd upon my recollection, and which may form the basis of some future communication.

REMINISCENCE OF GEN. WARREN.

Dr. David Townsend, June 17, 1775, in the morning, went to Brighton to see Mr. Carnes's family of Boston. About one in the afternoon, Mr. Carnes came and reported that there was hot work. The British at Boston, with their shipping, were firing very heavy on our men at Bunker Hill. Dr. Townsend said he must go and work for Dr. Warren. He was very young, and a student with Dr. Warren, who was appointed Major General on the day previous. Gen. Warren left him in Boston to protect his effects, and he had just before come to Cambridge from Brighton to Gen. Ward's quarters, and found Cambridge quiet as the Sabbath,—all the troops gone, and no one at Ward's quarters but Gen. Warren, who was sick with one of his oppressive nervous headaches, and, as usual, had retired to rest, and taken some camomile tea for relief. Mrs. Hastings said no one else was in the house. Gen. Warren told Dr. Townsend that if he would wait he would accompany him to Bunker Hill immediately. He took tea and walked with him as far as the road to Milk Row, in Cambridge. People said there were some wounded soldiers there, brought away, and Warren remarked that Dr. Townsend had better remain and dress their wounds, which he did. The British ship Glasgow was firing across. Gen. Warren had presided in the Provincial Congress that morning, and was decorated very much. He wore a light cloth coat with covered buttons worked in silver, and his hair was curled up at the sides of his head and pinned up. He was very cheerful and heartily engaged in preparation for the battle, which was just commencing, and the muskets must have begun firing when he arrived. When Warren left Dr. Townsend he had a cane only. Dr. Foster of Charlestown was principal surgeon to the troops. Dr. Eustis, probably Dr. Hart, and Dr. Brickett, who was Lieutenant Colonel, and Dr. Townsend were at the hospital, the first house on the north side of Bunker Hill, known as the Sun Tavern. Col. Patterson's regiment was at Jack Tufts's storehouse, near down to the road leading to Milk Row. Dr. Townsend took dressings and instruments with him. He was rather of opinion that there was a battery in Mystic River. He saw nothing of Gen. Ward or his aids. All the troops, except Patterson's, went upon Bunker Hill. Col. Gardner was wounded with a musket ball, and carried home by four men with a blanket and poles. The wound was just plastered together before he arrived at the hospital. He did not remain there. Dr. Church did not belong then to the hospital. There was very little organization of that department. Col. Small and Gen. Warren were very well acquainted with each other, and both were remarkable for very fine manners. Dr. Warren cheerfully avowed his presentiment that he was destined to fall in the conflict. The truth of this presentiment, alas, was soon to be recorded in his heart's blood! A nobler heart never panted after immortality.

GENEALOGY OF THE MCKINSTRY FAMILY, WITH A PRELIMINARY ESSAY ON THE SCOTCH-IRISH IMMIGRATIONS TO AMERICA.

[By HON. WILLIAM WILLIS, of Portland, Me.]

The MCKINSTRIES originated in Scotland. The first of the name who emigrated to Ireland was Rodger, who had lived in the neighborhood of Edinburgh, and emigrated thence to the north of Ireland about the year 1669. I propose, as a preliminary to the history of this family, to give a brief account of the Scotch emigration to Ireland, and from that country to America previous to our Revolution.

During the Irish rebellions in the reign of Elizabeth, the Province of Ulster, embracing the northern counties of Ireland, was greatly depopulated, and it became a favorite project with her successor, James I., to repeople those counties with a protestant population, the better to preserve order, and introduce a higher state of cultivation in that portion of his dominions. To promote this object, liberal offers of land were made, and other inducements held out in England and Scotland, for persons to occupy this wide and vacant territory. The project was eagerly embraced; companies and colonies were formed, and individuals without organization were tempted to partake of the advantageous offers of government. A London company, among the first to enter upon this new acquisition, established itself at Derry, and gave such a character to the place as to cause it to be afterwards and forever known as the renowned city of Londonderry.

The first emigration from Scotland was chiefly from the Highlands, where agricultural resources were scanty and often wholly cut off, and where the fruits of labor were gathered from a stern soil. Sir Hugh Montgomery, the sixth Laird of Braidstone, a friend and follower of King James, was among the earliest to obtain possession of forfeited land in the county of Down, and laid his rough hand upon many broad acres. The coast of Scotland is within twenty miles of the county of Antrim in Ireland, and across this frith or strait flowed from the northeast a population distinguished for thrift, industry and endurance, which has given a peculiar and elevated character to that portion of the emerald island. It is said that the clan McDonald contributed largely to this emigration, and was among the first of the Scottish nation to plant upon its shores. They scattered chiefly in the counties of Down, Londonderry and Antrim, and greatly assisted to build up Newry, Bangor, Derry and Belfast, the principal cities of those counties.

This was the first protestant population that was introduced into Ireland, the Presbyterians of Scotland furnishing the largest element; and they have maintained their ascendancy to the present day, against the persevering efforts of the Episcopalians on the one hand, and of the Romanists, bigoted and numerous, by whom they were surrounded, on the other. The first Presbyterian church established in Ireland was in Ballycarry, in the county of Antrim, in 1613.

The Clan Alpine, otherwise called the McGregors, in the latter part of the 17th century, had made themselves very obnoxious to government and the neighboring clans by a wild and reckless course of life. Argyle, the chief of the Campbells, their inveterate enemy, who was high in court favor, procured a decree of extermination against them, extending even to the obliteration of their name and place of residence. Heavy penalties were proclaimed against all who bore the badge of the clan. To avoid this withering persecution, many sought refuge in the neighboring islands; many changed their names and fled to remote parts of their own country or to other countries. Descendants from this clan are now found in the United States and elsewhere, under the names of Grier, Greer, Gregor, Gregory, &c., the Mac being dropped. Thus we shall probably find that a distinguished Judge of the Supreme Court of the U. States, residing in Pennsylvania, Judge Grier, derives his origin from the same wild tribe, which, under the guidance of Robroy McGregor, was the terror of the high and low lands of his native soil. Nor was the change of name confined to that clan; for we are assured that the Mackinnons, from the isle of Skye, are now McKenna, McKean, McCannon; that McNish has become McNiece, Meness, Munniss, and Moniss; and Graham is Graeme, Grimes, Groom, &c.

Although the rebellions of 1715 and 1745, against the House of Hanover, made large additions to the Scotch population in the north of Ireland, yet by far the largest accessions to this colonization were occasioned by religious persecutions in the time of the latter Stuarts. That fated race, blind to the dictates of justice and humanity, and devoted with sullen bigotry to their peculiar notions in religion and politics, pursued a system of measures best calculated to wean from their support subjects the most devoted to their cause. The Scottish race was bound to the Stuarts by a national prejudice and a sincere affection. But they were imbued with a religious enthusiasm, inspired by Knox their great apostle, which ruled their consciences, and rendered the sanctions of a higher law superior to their patriotism, or their attachment to their native sovereigns. Rather, they believed that true patriotism consisted in maintaining the religion transmitted by their fathers.

When, therefore, the Charleses and James II. endeavored to introduce prelacy among them, and to force it upon their consciences by arbitrary laws and the iron hoofs of the dragoons of Claverhouse, very many of these hardy, persistent and enduring Presbyterians, having suffered to the bitter end of cruelty and oppression, abandoned the land of their birth, the home of their fondest affections, and sought an asylum among their countrymen in the secure retreats of Ulster, or fled across the ocean. They carried their household gods with them; and their religious peculiarities became more dear in their land of exile, for the dangers and sorrows through which they had borne them.

Presbyterianism was transported from Geneva to Scotland by John Knox, who composed his first Book of Discipline, containing the substance of his intended policy, in 1561. In 1566, a general assembly approved the Discipline; and all church affairs, after that time, were managed by Presbyteries and General Assemblies. They did not at first formally deprive the bishops, who had ecclesiastical jurisdiction, of their power, but they went on gradually and steadily doing it, as they acquired confidence and strength. In 1574, they voted bishops to be only pastors of one parish; in 1577, they decreed that bishops should be called by their own names without title; and the next year they declared the name of bishop to be a nuisance. In 1580, they pronounced with one voice, in the General Assembly, that diocesan episcopacy was unscriptural and unlawful. The same year, King James and his family, with the whole Scotch nation, subscribed a confession of faith, embracing the "solemn league and covenant," obliging them to maintain the protestant doctrine and presbyterian government. Thus, in the space of twenty years, grew up this formal, extensive and powerful institution, twining itself over the Scottish mind with stern and inflexible bands, which death only could sunder; and for which, home, country, life—all things beside—were freely given up.

James had hardly become secure and easy on his English throne when he began his attack upon the religious system of his early life, and of his native country, and his successors followed it up with a pertinacity worthy of a better cause. The attempts to establish the church of England over Scotland, and destroy the religious system so universally established and so dearly cherished by that devoted people, was pursued by the Charleses and James the 2d, by persecutions as mean, as cruel, and savage, as any which have disgraced the annals of religious bigotry and crime. And they did not cease until they had greatly depopulated Scotland, and were stripped of their power by the happy revolution under William and Mary, which restored repose to a distracted and long suffering people.

Scotland, a country no larger than Maine, with a population at the close of the seventeenth century of a million, and in 1800 not so much as the present population of Massachusetts and Maine; with agricultural and other resources by no means equal to ours—of which a writer in a recent number of the Edinburgh Review, on the Highlands, says, "at the end of the 17th century the chief social feature of the Highlands was famine, and another was emigration." Yet this country has contributed largely, by emigration, to furnish numerous and prominent settlers for many other lands; to the nation with which she is connected, profound statesmen, brilliant writers, and men the most renowned in every department of scientific and philosophical research.

This is the race, composed of various tribes flowing from different parts of Scotland, which furnished the materials of the Scotch-Irish immigration to this country. By their industry, frugality and skill, they had made the deserted region into which they had moved a comparatively rich and flourishing country. They had improved agriculture and introduced manufactures, and by the excellence and high reputation of their productions had attracted trade and commerce to their markets, so as to excite the jealousy of government in the reigns of Anne and the first George, notwithstanding that by their efforts and example the prosperity of the whole island had been promoted. The patronizing government began to recognize them, in the shape of taxes and embarrassing regulations upon their industry and trade. The same jealousy controlled that government afterwards, in regard to the American Colonies, by which the commerce and enterprise of their subjects on this side of the ocean, were, in like manner, hampered and restricted, so that they were hardly permitted to manufacture articles of the most common necessity, but were driven to import them from the mother country, as glass, nails, hats, cloths, &c.

These restrictions occasioned general distress, not only in the north of Ireland, but throughout the whole island. To this, Douglass (p. 368) says, "was added an extravagant advance in rents by landlords, whose long leases were now expired." The energetic and self-willed population of the north of Ireland, animated by the same spirit which subsequently moved the American mind, determined no longer to endure these oppressive measures; and they sought by another change to find a freer verge for the exercise of their industry and skill, and for the enjoyment of their religion.

One of their spiritual leaders, the Rev. Mr. McGregor, in a sermon which he preached on the eve of the departure from Ireland, assigned the following reasons for their removal to America: 1, to avoid oppressive and cruel bondage; 2, to shun persecution; 3, to withdraw from the communion of idolaters; 4, to have an opportunity of worshipping God according to the dictates of conscience and his inspired word. He looked at it chiefly from a religious point of view; others, from a material and commercial stand point. It was undoubtedly suggested and promoted by a variety of motives gradually operating upon the mass of the population, which brought them to the determination, solemn and painful, to sunder the ties which had bound them firmly to their adopted country, and impelled them to seek new and doubtful homes in a wild, unexplored, and far-distant land.

The first immigration of these people to this country was to the Middle and Southern Colonies. As early as 1684 a settlement was formed in New Jersey, and in 1690 small groups were found in the Carolinas, Maryland and Pennsylvania. But it was not until the reigns of Anne and George I. that large numbers, driven by oppressive measures of government and disastrous seasons, were induced to seek, even in the wilderness, a better home than their old settled region could give them. Gordon says, "Scarcity of corn, generally prevalent from the discouragement of industry, amounted in 1728 and the following year almost to a famine, especially in Ulster. Emigrations to America, which have since increased, drew above 3000 people annually from Ulster alone." Dr. Boulter, afterwards Archbishop of Armagh, who labored strenuously in 1728 to divert the horrors of famine in Ireland, wrote to the English ministry, March 7, 1728, that there were seven ships then lying at Belfast that "are carrying off about 1000 passengers; most of them can neither get victuals nor work at home." He also says, "3100 men, women and children went from Ireland to America in 1727, and 4200 in three years, all protestants." The principal seats of these emigrations were Pennsylvania and the Middle States. New England was found not so favorable to their farming and other interests. Douglass, who wrote at Boston in 1750, says, "at first they chose New England, but being brought up to husbandry, &c., New England did not answer so well as the Colonies southward; at present they generally resort to Pennsylvania." By Proud's history of Pennsylvania, we find that in 1729 near 6000 arrived in that Colony; and before the middle of the century nearly 12,000 arrived annually for several years. These were protestants and generally Presbyterians; few or no Catholics came, until some time after the Revolution.

In the summer of 1718, the first organized company of this class of immigrants, of which we have any knowledge, left the shores of Ireland in five vessels, containing 120 families, for the new world, and arrived safely in Boston, August 4, 1718. Here all was new, the wilderness and the world before them. Imagine this little colony, strangers in a strange land, seeking new homes and not knowing whither to turn. There they lie at the little wharf at the foot of State Street in the town of Boston, which then contained about 12,000 inhabitants, taking counsel where to go, and how to dispose of themselves and their little ones, to begin the world anew. With their wonted energy, they were soon astir. One brigantine, with a company of twenty families, sought their fortunes at the eastward, among whom were Armstrong, Means, McKean, Gregg;—they spent a hard and long winter in Portland harbor, and then fled westward, most of them, to join their companions in founding their new Londonderry. Another portion went to Andover and its neighborhood, led on by their pastor McGregor; another to Pelham, Mass., under the lead of the Rev. Mr. Abererombie; another remained in Boston, under their pastor the Rev. John Moorhead; and still another sought refuge in Worcester and its vicinity. Wherever they went, this devoted people first of all planted the Presbyterian church, adopting the discipline and usages of the church of Scotland. Mr. McGregor and his flock finally established themselves at Nutfield, in N. H., and built up a town which they called, from their venerated city in Ireland, Londonderry. Here they founded a colony, which, like a fruitful mother, has been sending forth from its prolific bosom men and women, of their hardy and enlightened stock, to instruct and adorn society. And here were gathered the McGregors, McClintocks, Starks, Reid, Bell, Morrison, Anderson, McKean, and others, who have given vigor to our varied institutions.

The society in Boston established the Presbyterian church, which continued for more than half a century to worship in their meeting-house on the corner of Long Lane and Bury Street, where Dr. Gannett's church now stands, under the pastoral care of Rev. John Moorhead, familiarly called Johnny Moorhead, whose ardent and impulsive temper often led him into embarrassments, but who faithfully ministered to his people until his death in 1773. He was succeeded by the Rev. Robert Annan, a Scotch presbyter, who occupied the pulpit until 1786, when the people cast off Presbyterianism, assumed the Congregational form of government, and, in 1787, settled the excellent and learned Dr. Jeremy Belknap. In 1715, they established the first Presbytery, consisting of twelve churches, called the Presbytery of Boston.

This company introduced into Boston the cultivation of the potato, which had not before been known in the country, and the flax spinning wheel, the familiar domestic instrument of their native households. The latter had quite a run in Boston; schools were established to teach the art of spinning, and ladies of the first quality were found among the votaries of this useful art.

The party which went to Worcester fared worse than any other; they encountered a severe persecution, and were not permitted to erect a house of worship of their peculiar order. In one attempt of the kind, the structure was entirely demolished by a mob. A great prejudice was enlisted against them, both from their religion and their country; they were called Irish, a term they greatly resented. Mr. McGregor wrote, "We are surprised to hear ourselves termed Irish people." The Worcester immigrants struggled awhile against a bitter opposition, and finding repose there hopeless, they abandoned the place, some for Pelham, others for their head-quarters in Londonderry, and some to plant themselves at Unadilla, on the banks of the Susquehanna in New York. In the Worcester company were the names of Clark, McKinstry, Gray, Ferguson, Crawford, Graham, Barbour, Blair, and Thornton; Mathew, then a child, became the distinguished patriot and statesman of New Hampshire, and a signer of the declaration of Independence.

In 1719 and 1720, five ships, under the conduct of Capt. Robert Temple, who had previously explored the country, landed several hundred families from Ireland on the shores of Kennebec River and Merry Meeting Bay. Temple was of a distinguished family in Ireland, and the ancestor of the numerous and respected family of the late Lt. Governor

Thomas L. Winthrop of Boston, who married his grand-daughter Elizabeth Bowdoin.

Dummer's Indian war broke up this colony, and the larger part of them went to Pennsylvania. After the war was ended, other companies of this race occupied various points in Maine, as Topsham, Brunswick, Boothbay, Pemaquid, and the Waldo patent, which region contained a larger number of this description of immigrants than any part of New England. They were entirely under the religious government of Presbyters and Assemblies, until the eve of the Revolution, when large accessions of Congregationalists or Independents mingling among them, a struggle took place between the two orders for the government of the church. This resulted in the overthrow of Presbyterianism and the establishment of Congregationalism over the churches of the State. There is not now a Presbyterian church in Maine. Once it boasted of Murray, famed for his eloquence,—of Rutherford, Blair, Boyd, Dunlap, McLean, Urquhart, Whittaker, Strickland,—none remain, and hardly a record of them. The same struggle took place in Massachusetts, until Synod, Presbytery and Church disappeared, and now only the feeble Presbytery of Londonderry remains in New England to record and perpetuate the religious characteristics of that great race which sought refuge on these shores, and has done so much to advance the honor and prosperity of the country. Their power as a sect is most prevalent in the Middle States.

Independency or Congregationalism was not introduced into England until 1616. But Puritanism, which embraces both orders of dissenters, had its origin in Elizabeth's time, in her attempts to cause subscriptions to be made to the liturgy, ceremonies, and discipline of the Church, in 1564. Those who refused subscription and preferred a simple worship, were called Puritans by way of reproach. When the doctrines of Arminius began to prevail in the English church, the Puritans adhered to the system of Calvin, and were defined to be men of severe morals, Calvinists in doctrine, and non-conformists to the ceremonies and discipline of the Church. The first Presbyterian church was established in England, near London, in 1577, by a few scattered brethren; and both these branches of dissenters, Independents and Presbyterians, made at first but slow progress; and although agreeing in doctrine, they differed from each other on the form of government as widely as they both did from Episcopacy.

The Independents or Congregational brethren were small in number in the Westminster Assembly, although they increased prodigiously afterwards under Cromwell. They made a bold stand against the proceedings of the high Presbyterians. They maintained "that every particular congregation of Christians" has an entire and complete power of jurisdiction over its members, to be exercised by the elders thereof within itself." They add, "this they are sure must have been the form of government in the primitive church."—Neal, 3, 157.

The system of the Independents was attacked by the rigid Presbyterians with great severity, "as tending to break the uniformity of the church, under the pretence of liberty of conscience." But one of their number, Mr. Herle, the prolocutor of the Assembly, with great candor and good sense, remarked, "The difference between us and our brethren who are for Independency, is nothing so great as some may conceive; at most, it does but ruffle the fringe, not any way rend the garment of Christ."

Yet the quarrel continued and has continued with more or less violence to the present day; the sound of the controversy, even in this country, is now ringing in our ears; in the last century it was discordant and harsh throughout our churches in the ambitious struggle for power. The controversy then related to church government, for in doctrine there was a substantial agreement. The Savoy confession of 1658 proceeds upon the plan of the Westminster Assembly; the preface declares, "that they fully consent to the Westminster confession, for the substance of it." The disagreement was not in matters of faith, but only in matters of form.

It is not my intention to trace further the migrations of these people upon this continent. Having accompanied the earliest colony to Massachusetts, which contained the first of the McKinstry family who came to America, I leave the nation to follow the fortunes of the individual.

EARLY SETTLERS OF WESTERLY, RHODE ISLAND.

[Communicated by J. D. CHAMPLIN, Jun., of Stonington, Conn.]

The town of Westerly was settled in the year 1661 by a colony from the island of Aquidneck, (now Rhode Island,) and mostly from the town of Newport. Its Indian name appears under the various orthography of Misquamocuck, Swampscot, Squamicutt, Squamicuck, &c. For a particular account of the first purchase and settlement, see Potter's Narraganset, Vol. III, Collections Rhode Island Historical Society. The following list of "free inhabitants" is a literal transcript from the first volume of town meeting records, and although bearing date, 1669, was probably not entered until 1682-3, as may be inferred from the following, recorded on the next page, immediately after the list:—

"The records of the acts and orders of the Inhabitants of the towne of westerle—

ONE THOUSAND FUNERALS.—Rev. J. Rebaugh, in a funeral sermon which he preached on the occasion of the death of Mr. George Cushwa, which took place week before last, stated that he (Cushwa) was the thousandth person he had buried in the course of his ministry. Dr. Rebaugh is not an old man, and we believe has never preached in a city, which makes the matter astonishing.—Greencastle (Pa.) Ledger, 12 Oct. 1857.

DANVERS CHURCH RECORDS.

3 That they in publick do consent to the Covenant, propounded unto y<sup>m</sup> by our Pastour in these words (or words to y<sup>e</sup> like effect)—

You—A. B. do before y<sup>r</sup> holy Assembly acknowledge y<sup>e</sup> only Living and true God to be y<sup>r</sup> God, & do give up y<sup>r</sup>self to him to love, fear, serve him, and to be happy in the enjoyment of him forever.

You do also acknowledge y<sup>e</sup> Lord Jesus Christ the Eternal son of God to be your only Saviour and Redeemer; and (under a sense of y<sup>r</sup> sin and misery & need of him) do give up y<sup>r</sup>self to him to be saved by him from sin and from the wrath of God.

You do also acknowledge the Eternal Spirit of God to be your only Sanctifyer, and do give up y<sup>r</sup>self to him to be sanctified, comforted, and guided by him to Glory.

You do also submit to the discipline and government of Jesus Christ in y<sup>e</sup> Chh, and do promise y<sup>t</sup> you will live in y<sup>e</sup> use of all means y<sup>t</sup> so you may be fit to come to all y<sup>e</sup> ordinances of Christ in his Church.

This was first voted by the Chh.

4 We do also consent y<sup>t</sup> the children of such persons be baptized provided the parents publickly give y<sup>m</sup> up to God, and promise y<sup>t</sup> if God shall spare their lives they will see such their children educated in the nurture and admonition of y<sup>e</sup> Lord.

This was voted by itself—and there was none that manifested any dissatisfaction—but all gave their consent to each particular.

Blessed be God for such a peaceful meeting."

1701, June 18. "A day of Publick Thanksgiving. God smiled on y<sup>e</sup> season, y<sup>e</sup> work of y<sup>e</sup> day was carried by Mr. Noyes (who prayed) & Mr. Pierpoint preach<sup>d</sup>, & concluded." The reasons for the Thanksgiving were, 1. Y<sup>t</sup> God has so far discovered y<sup>e</sup> wiles of y<sup>e</sup> Devil which might have been more hurtfull and destructive to us, if God had not in judgm<sup>t</sup> remembred mercy. 2. Y<sup>t</sup> when y<sup>e</sup> people were farthest from peace & unity y<sup>t</sup> God was pleased to hear prayers & unite us, & especially to hearken to those prayers y<sup>t</sup> were put up here on a day of publick fasting & prayer by Mr. Hale & Mr. Noyes, from w<sup>ch</sup> day God was pleased to succeed all publick endeavours for a peaceable settlem<sup>t</sup>. 3. & y<sup>t</sup> God has now for some years continued peace and prosperity to us. & 4. that he has been carrying on his work in y<sup>e</sup> midst of us, &c."

Oct. 19. "The Pastor read a Letter to the Church at Beverly, to desire our assistance in ordaining Mr. Blower—and three messengers were chosen with y<sup>e</sup> Elder &c."

Oct. 29. "We assisted in Mr. Blowers ordination, all impediments removed."

Jan. 13. "We kept a day of fasting and prayer on account of y<sup>e</sup> small pox, &c."

1706. Aug. 25. "Rec<sup>d</sup> Ann Putnam to full communion.

The confession of Anne Putnam when she was received to communion: 1706.

I desire to be humbled before God for y<sup>t</sup> sad and humbling providence that befell my fathers family in the year about 92, y<sup>t</sup> I then being in my childhood should by such a providence of God be made an instrument for y<sup>t</sup> accusing of severall persons of a grievous crime whereby their lives were taken away from them, whom now I have just grounds and good reason to believe they were innocent persons, and y<sup>t</sup> it was a great delusion of Satan y<sup>t</sup> deceived me in that sad time, whereby I justly fear I have been instrumental with others tho' ignorantly and unwittingly to bring upon myself & this land the guilt of innocent blood Though what was said or done by me against any person I can truly and uprightly say before God & man I did it not out of any anger, malice, or illwill to any person for I had no such thing against one of them; but what I did was ignorantly being deluded by Satan. And particularly as I was a chief instrument of accusing of Goodwife Nurse and her two sisters I desire to lye in the dust & to be humbled for it in that I was a cause with others of so sad a calamity to them & their families, for which cause I desire to lye in y<sup>e</sup> dust & earnestly begg forgiveness of God & from all those unto whom I have given just cause of sorrow & offence, whose relations were taken away or accused. (Signed) Anne Putnam.

Whereas this Church passed a vote Sept. 11. 1692 for the excommunication of Martha Cory, and that sentence was pronounced ag<sup>t</sup> her Sept. 14 by Mr. Sam<sup>l</sup> Parris formerly the Pastour of this Church; she being before her excom<sup>s</sup> condemned & afterwards executed for supposed witchcraft: and there being a record of this in our Chh book page 12. We being moved hereunto do freely consent & heartily desire that the same sentence may be revoked, and that it may stand no longer ag<sup>t</sup> her for we are thro' Gods mercy to us convinced y<sup>t</sup> we were at that dark day under the Power of those errors which then prevailed in the land; and we are sensible that we had not sufficient grounds to think her guilty of that crime for which she was condemned & executed; and y<sup>t</sup> her excom<sup>s</sup> was not according to the mind of God; and therefore we desire that this may be entred in our Church book, to take off that odium that is cast on her name and that so God may forgive our sin, & may be atoned for the land, & we humbly pray that God will not leave us any more to such errors and sins, but will teach & enable us always to do that which is right in his sight.

There was a maj<sup>r</sup> part voted—& 6 or 7 dissented. J. G. Pr."

NARRATIVE OF COL. JOHN ALLAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW ENG. HIST. AND GEN. REG. :—

I send you for publication in the Register, the following extracts from an unfinished manuscript, written toward the close of the last century, by Col. John Allan, who, during the war of the Revolution, was an agent of the American government among the Eastern tribes of Indians. All of whom (both agent and Indians) rendered important service to the country in the times "that tried men's souls."

Dennyville, Dec. 1, 1857.

PETER E. VOSK.

After a geographical description of the country inhabited by the Eastern tribes of Indians, and an account of the facilities for communication with each other, the writer says,—

I shall now attempt briefly to notice the different transactions and Operations, with the Indians from the commencement of the revolution, which have come within my knowledge—before my leaving Nova Scotia in 1776. It was suggested by some persons in Government to encourage the Indians to take an active part against the United States, as a check upon the Inhabitants of the Province, (a great proportion of whom were attached to the Interest of America) and to aid and Influence the Indians more Westward to harass and disturb the Eastern settlements of Massachusetts so as to annex those parts to that Colony. In consequence of this I despatched couriers to the different Villages thro' the Mickmack country. And previous to my departure, met a large body; among them were deputies from St. John and other parts adjacent. A long and tedious conference took place, and a satisfactory explanation given of the dispute between America and Britain. It was concluded by a lengthy speech from them and a solemn declaration made, that if from situation and distance they could not assist, they would not injure or molest the Americans. A chief from Merrimachi spoke for the whole,—they were all as one,—no distinction made between the different tribes. Being compelled to leave that country suddenly, the business was soon communicated to the Council at Boston.

Mr. Bowdoin, then President, entered very minutely into particulars, and pressed my departure to the southward. General Washington approved of the proceedings and desired me to lay it immediately before Congress, that steps might be taken to retain their friendship. As the nature and extent of the business was fully understood by the several official departments, to whom it was communicated, the Agency, appointed for this purpose, comprehended the whole, Eastward and Northward of Connecticut River,—making no exceptions in what nation or country the Indians resorted.

Previous to my appointment there were several negotiations, by order of the Massachusetts and Genl Washington. Letters and speeches are now to be seen among the Indians,—great encouragements and promises made them.

In May 1777 I arrived on the river St. John; where a number were collected—the business was communicated and myself accepted as an agent. We soon had a general meeting composed of deputies from different parts, including the whole tribes of St. Johns and Passamaquaddy. It was agreed and concluded, that Peace and Friendship be now established permanent and Lasting, between the United States and the several Tribes, that such of them as were in the proximity of the States, should immediately withdraw and assist in the defence of the country, which lay within the jurisdiction of the United States,—that any individual belonging to those tribes whose situation would not permit publicly to take an active part, were admit'd to join with those who did—that those employed should be supported during their service and the widows and children of those who died in the time, to be taken care of 'till otherways provided for. That they should be forever viewed as brothers and children under the Protection and Fatherly care of the United States and enjoy every right and privilege according to the difference of situation, in proportion with others. They should enjoy the free exercise of religion, agreeable to their profession, a clergyman of that denomination be furnished, and a suitable residence be provided for him, on which a place of Worship was to be erected. They were to have an exclusive right to the beaver hunt, or if not consistent with the rights of others, necessary steps were to be taken, as to prevent a destruction of the dams and other enormities, committed by the white hunters, by which conduct a great diminution of that ancient and profitable support has been the consequence—that in times of difficulty and distress, or by any unforeseen calamity those who live within the territory of the United States, should be furnished with ammunition for Fowling, &c. in proportion as their necessities required,—that trade was to be so regulated as to prevent impositions,—that an agent should constantly reside as near them as possible, to whom they might apply for redress: to assist in the transacting of business among the inhabitants and such other necessary matters as their situation required.

These were the principal objects at this time; but in the course of the war the Indians of St. Johns and Passamaquaddy, resigned to the United States, their particular claim to lands known to be within their haunts, on condition that the United States would confirm to them the ancient spots of ground which they have hitherto occupied, and a suitable tract for the use of all Indians, which might have occasion to resort there.

How far these people have complied with their engagements our present possessions eastward of Penobscot might be a sufficient proof, as it is acknowledged by all acquainted with that country, that their assistance was a principal support in its defence; but in justice to them I would take the Liberty to mention a circumstance among many others, which must evince the zeal by which they were actuated. Some time after my arrival in St. Johns, Lieut. Govt Francklin, British Super Intendent arrived with a strong Land and Sea Force furnished with every requisite to allure the Indians. Our quarters were within eight miles; only two white persons remained with me. Conferences every day alternately on both sides—and after using every stratagem and art to gain them and make me a prisoner, they (the Indians) in a body of 128 canoes, containing near five hundred men, women and children, left the River with me at the end of Ten days, only a few Families remaining to keep up a claim and give intelligence. There was not more than a weeks provisions for the whole. They left their little plantations well improved, and a good prospect; with a great part of their clothing; After 28 days Journey I arrived at Machias, suffering many hardships and difficulties by excessive heats and the lowness of the streams; which greatly obstructed the Canoes.

Their zeal and attention during the war, from the attempt made by the British under Sir Geo. Collier, is so well known in that country that it needs no comment. Their uniform conduct both in respect of humanity, as submitting with patience under every difficulty was not inferior to the most disciplined troops, and even when imposed on at a time of intoxication and fleeced of the little they had, they always sat down contented and resigned without the appearance of resentment or malice.

At the close of the war, a circumstantial account of the whole proceedings was laid before the Government of Massachusetts and Congress and approved of by them. As the Constitution invested the latter with the management of Indian affairs, they of course fixed the agency on a peace establishment, and comprehended, as before, the whole tribes eastward of Connecticut river: the appointment took place in June, 1783. In September it was communicated to the Indians, in the several parts, who signified their satisfaction. The treaty of 1777 was then confirmed and an arrangement for Future Conduct. The Indians at this time endeavored to prevent the English from making a settlement at St. Andrews, and did actually seize some persons, who attempted to survey the Lands. In January 1784 it was suggested to Congress from the Massachusetts that such an appointment was improper. (The plan adopted would have prevented much trouble and expense and given security to the country.) Consequently as no steps were taken to controvert it, the Agency was dissolved in March following. From that time it does not appear, that any notice has been taken of them (the Indians) to the Eastward of Penobscot.

The Indians notwithstanding the treatment and neglect continued sometime in the vicinity of Passamaquoddy expecting when the hurry and confusion arising from the war were subsided, notice would be taken of them, but nothing encouraging coming to view, they began to withdraw in small bodies, to their former settlements destitute of necessaries to subsist, and of friends to protect them. In this indigent state those of St. John suffered much and they felt the resentment of the Loyalist for their attachment and assistance to the United States. For near two years wandering about from Place to Place—disquieted and unsettled, they at length began again to embody, and consult more generally respecting their situation. Still attached to this country, they repeatedly apply'd to me, for a settlement, and to procure a clergyman, if nothing else could be done. I evad'd the business—they continued their solicitations. I finally gave them for answer, it was not in my power, and recommended to make application themselves to the head of Government, but in January 1791 a message came from the several Villages on St. Johns, and repeated their demands, and delivered it in such a manner, as alarmed me, consequently I consented to meet and consult with them. (this may be thought Timidity, but it is a maxim with me, never to live near Indians, except in a state of defence, without a certainty of their Friendship either in Peace or War). At a large Council it was agreed, among other things, to address the Bishop of Baltimore, praying to be considered as brothers and children of the United States, and to take them under his care as their Spiritual Father and requesting a Clergyman to reside among them.—that an address be presented to the General Court of Massachusetts, to lay out a suitable Settlement as a resort for themselves, and a residence for the Priest, the former of these were answered to their sanguine expectations and the clergyman arrived among them in October 1792—a man who appeared well qualified for the mission. In March 1793 a Speech was presented to the General Court and Commissioners were appointed, who met the Indians in October following, but their power was so limited, that no satisfactory agreement could be made. "The Indians at this time appeared very thoughtfull and anxious about the business, and the proceedings rather operated to our disadvantage.

"In November the Indians sent for me to attend. I was with them five days, in which time we had several public and private conferences. After recapitulating their Treaties and promises made them,—their conduct during the war, their sufferings, &c.,—and they demanded a fulfillment of their Promises, particular Lands for settlement, which, if refused, they should view themselves free from all engagements, and be at liberty to treat and accept of any Proposals made to them by any other Power, and in future to pursue in their own way what they thought consistent with their right and interest; but would wait to the beginning of February to know what would be done for them in Boston.

"A report prevailed this summer that the British were endeavoring to draw the Indians into New Brunswick; and in November, when at the village, I received authentic advice and information of the particulars.

"The British in those parts found it necessary to bring the Indians over for the defence of the Country, as the Marching Troops were ordered off to assist against the French; also, should any rupture take place with this Country, to secure their interest betimes. For this purpose preparations have been making since August last, supply's of all kinds have been laid in, and many things distributed among them. Several letters have been sent the Priest, promising every attention and a satisfactory compensation. During my visit a letter was received, and a vessel detained some days at St. Andrews for him. I remonstrated against his going; he promised not, as long as he could retain any Indians and procure subsistence, as he had suffered hitherto; but in April it appears that himself and the residue of the Indians had removed to St. Johns, a few struggling ones excepted. This is the true state and situation of the Indians in that country. . .

"If the foregoing statement be confided in and intelligible, it may be seen that there is no distinction to be made, but if there was, the Passamaquoddy Tribe comparatively have the least claim, both as to numbers and attention in time of difficulty, and in the Late Transaction there were five others to one of them."

THE DESCENDANTS OF PETER HILL OF YORK CO., ME.

The number of soldiers in the garrison at Fort Mary, in February, 1699, was sixteen, including officers, viz., Capt. John Hill, Lt. Joseph, his brother, Corporal Ebenezer Hill, do., Pendleton Fletcher, nephew of the Hills, Thomas Harvey, Samuel Smith, Edmund Leverett, John Crocker, Benj. Mayers, Humphrey Deering, Shubael Henning, John Sweeting, Henry Taylor, David Jones, Mark Round and Jeffry Mercy, two thirds of whom, exclusive of officers, could not write their names, as appears by the pay roll.

The following letters are worthy of preservation, as illustrative of the history of the times.

In August, 1699, the Earl of Bellamont writes to Capt. Hill :—

“His majesty’s council of this province and I have agreed that it will be for his majesty’s service, that you do with all possible speed give notice to the Sagamores of the Eastern Indians, that they come hither to Portsmouth, N. H. to make their submission, and give such assurance of their fidelity and allegiance to his majesty as shall be required of them, and that they be herewith on the 10th of this present month of August. I desire therefore you will not fail to dispatch messengers to the said Sagamores accordingly.

I am your friend and serv’t,

“I desire you will employ some people to collect some Balm of Gilead, and I will reward their pains that gather it, and be thankful to you.”
Bellamont.”

Again, Oct. 19, 1699, the Governor writes :—

“Captain Hill,—I hope you will not fail to be extremely secret in the business I now commit to you; if Bradish and Wetherby, the two pirates that escaped out of the jail of this town, be not taken and brought back by the last day of this month, I desire you will then send this inclosed letter of mine to the French Jesuit or Frier, that is with the Indians, at a fort called Norocomcock, and that by some very trusty Indian, to whom you must give a double reward, and charge him to deliver my letter to the Friar privately, that nobody may see him deliver it, if he can. If you manage this matter prudently, I doubt not but Bradish and his companion will be retaken and brought back, and your chief care must be to keep it secret that I have written to the Friar, wherein you will oblige

[Translation.]

Boston, 19th October, 1699.

Monsieur,—I am informed to-day that two English pirates, named Bradish and Wetherby, who escaped from the prison in this town more than three months ago, have taken refuge in the Indian post called Norocomcock, where you now reside. I do not believe that you intend to screen two criminals from the hand of justice; and if you please yourself with the hope of making them good Roman Catholics, I am sure that you will be deceived, for I am persuaded that such fellows as these, who are capable of piracy (which I consider the worst of crimes), would turn Jews or Mohammedans on the spot if they could save their lives by it. You will then do more credit to yourself, and a better service to the good God, by sending back these two criminals to Boston, that they may receive the punishment due to them. I will give two hundred crowns for Bradish, and a hundred crowns for Wetherby, to any one who will bring them back, and will pay the expenses of the journey in addition. I have no doubt that M. de Calliere, the Governor of Canada, will thank you for the service you will do to the public by granting me the favor, or rather the justice, which I ask. Perhaps, moreover, I shall find an opportunity to make a like return, when I shall not fail to testify that

I am, Sir,

To Monsieur

Your very humble servant,

the Missionary Father,

Bellamont.

Norocomcock.

Secretary Addington to Captain Hill :—

" Boston, Feb. 8, 1699.

" Sir,—I am commanded by his Excellency to acquaint you that by letters from Governor Winthrop of Connecticut and a narrative given to him by Owoneco, Sachem of the Mohegans, the Indians have been abused by a malicious and lying report insinuated to them, that the king of England is sending over forces to cut off and extirpate them, which has instigated them to enter into a combination against the English, and to send presents one to another to engage them thereto. And it is said some of the new Roxbury Indians are drawn off and gone eastward. It is thought necessary that you be advised hereof, that as you have opportunity you may endeavor to undeceive the Indians and to give them to understand there is nothing in said report, but that they stand in good terms with the king's government whilst they continue peaceably and orderly, and may expect protection from them. So it will be prudent to us to use all vigilance and circumspection, to observe their motions and behaviour, and to endeavor the preventing of their taking advantage by any surprise which you are directed to take care of at the garrison under your command, and to avoid all occasions of giving them any provocation. You are not ignorant of their insults and falseness; wherefore they are to be the more strictly observed and watched over. My lord has received letters from Albany dated the first of this month which advise him that all things are well there.

Your friend and humble ser<sup>t</sup>

Isaac Addington, Secretary."

Subjoined is the following :—

"Capt. Hill, Sir,—I made bold to open your letter because there came a report that the Mohegan Indians intend to fall on the English forthwith, but since I looked into it I hope there is no great danger as yet. The Good Lord fit us for his own will.

Your brother,

Joseph Hill.

Feb. 21, at sunset, 1699."

From I. Addington :—

"Boston, Nov. 28th, 1699.

"Capt. Hill,—I am commanded by his Excellency and Council to signify unto you that upon information given them by Capt. Sylvanus Davis, lately come from Casco Bay (Portland), of a considerable number of Indians gathered together in those parts, in expectation of receiving some supply for trade, and that they had brought with them stores of peltry for that purpose; the Governor and Council have thereupon thought fit to order a vessel with suitable goods, provisions, &c. to be forthwith dispatched into those parts for the supplying of and trading with the said Indians; of which you are to forward the speedy notice unto the said Indians by some prudent person belonging unto the garrison under your command, to the intent the said Indians may not draw off in disgust, looking at themselves to be neglected by the government.

I am Sir your your obed<sup>t</sup> ser<sup>t</sup>

"Boston, March 12, 1699.

Capt. Hill, Sir,—I am commanded by his Excellency and Council to acquaint you by several credible informations from divers parts they are persuaded to believe that the Indians of Pennicooke &c. are forming a devilish design of raising a new war upon the English and that they are hastening to begin to put it in execution, possibly in the moonlight nights now drawing on, and to direct that you forthwith put all things in good order within the garrison under your command, and be very careful of keeping good watches and lookouts, and observant of the behaviour and carriage of the Indians, especially of those that resort unto you on the account of trade, that they gain no advantage for the perpetrating of any mischief or surprise, withal avoiding the giving them any just provocation or beginning a quarrel with them. You are not unacquainted with their stratagems, and it is believed your prudence will direct you to do what shall be necessary for the safety of yourself and those under your command and the public peace.

I. Addington, Secy.

In November, 1699, Capt. Hill, having served through the war—over ten years—resolved to resign his commission and retire to private life. The Governor, in compliance with his request, granted him permission "to visit Boston to adjust his accounts," and in the following April received his resignation.

By his Excellency the Earl of Bellmont.

"Whereas, upon your request to be discharged from his majesty's service, I have thought fit to appoint and commissionate George Turfrey Esq. gent. to be captain of his majesty's Fort Mary, at present under your command.

You are therefore hereby ordered, upon receipt hereof (which I send by s<sup>d</sup> Captain Turfrey) to surrender and deliver up to his the said Turfrey's charge and command the said Fort Mary, and all the guns, artillery, ammunition, stores, provisions and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and the soldiers now posted in garrison there: as also to deliver unto his custody all such Goods and Effects remaining unsold in your hands of what was committed to you for trade with the Indians. Taking the said Turfrey's receipt for what you shall deliver to him. Hereof fail not, For which this shall be your sufficient warrant. And you are upon receipt hereof accordingly discharged from his majesty's service.

Given under my hand at Boston the eighth day of April 1700, and in the 12th year of his majesty's reign.

Bellmont."

To Capt. John Hill
Commander of his Majesty's
Fort Mary at Saco.

Capt. John Hill removed from Saco to Berwick, and built a house a quarter of a mile west of Great Works' falls. His brother-in-law, Ichabod Plaisted, resided between him and the falls. Mr. Hill followed the occupation of a planter, and owned mills. He was succeeded by his son, Hon. Judge Hill, who, after his father's death, built the house opposite the old residence, which is now occupied by his great-grandson, Captain Benjamin Gerrish.

In his later years he lived with his sons in Fryburg, Lyman, and elsewhere. He died at Meredith, N. H. in 1819, aged 85. He was a justice of the peace, a man of great conversational power, and deeply imbued with religious feeling. He m. Sarah Prentiss of Cambridge, who died in April, 1802. She was the mother of fourteen children, viz: 1. John; 2. Sarah; 3. Sarah, 2d; 4. Charles; 5. Henry; 6. Sarah, 3d; 7. Elizabeth; 8. Leavitt; 9. Thomas; 10. George; 11. John, 2d; 12. Amos A.; 13. Charles Hill, the son of Charles and grandson of Hon. John, had four wives. By the first (Martha Day) he had one son, named Charles, born in 1788, and settled in Lyman. By the second wife no children. By the third he had eight children, viz: Martha, m. J. W. Roberts, Lyman; John, a printer, died in Louisiana in 1819; Deborah, m. By the fourth wife he had Henry Hill, a farmer in York, Me.; Samuel P., merchant, Charlestown; Lucy, died in 1816, an infant.

Henry Hill, son of Charles and grandson of Hon. John, had six children, viz: Sarah, Henry, Hypsebeth, Elizabeth, Amos A. and Thomas P.

Sarah Hill, 3d, daughter of Charles Hill, the son of Hon. John Hill, married Moses Yeaton, and had eleven children, viz: Lucy, Alice, Cyrus, Mahalah, Mary, Elizabeth, Susan C., Caroline S., Leavitt H., Sarah P. and Moses.

Leavitt Hill, son of Charles and grandson of Hon. John, m. Miss Russell, and had eight children, viz: Sarah, John, Abigail, Eunice, Thomas, Mary, Leavitt and Charles.

George Hill, son of Charles Hill, great grandson of Hon. John, married Penelope Parker, and had eight children, viz: Mary, Caleb m. and settled in Dorchester, Samuel in South Carolina, Naomi, Sally, Joshua, Betsy and James.

Thomas P. Hill, son of Charles Hill, born May 23, 1781; married, 1818, Sophia — of Conway, by whom he had one child, born Oct. 1819. He was married the second time to Mrs. Phebe C. Marsh of Bath, Me.

Mary Hill, daughter of Charles Hill, the son of Hon. John, born 1785, married John Evans of Fryburg, Me. 1804, and had ten children, viz: Henry H., Thomas S., John, Charles, Amos, James O., Preatiss H., Sarah E., Stephen and George.

Hon. John Hill, son of Capt. John who commanded at Saco, was born, as before stated, in 1703, and married Eliza —. He was commissioned as ensign in 1727 by Gov. Dummer, and in 1729 as lieutenant; as first lieutenant by Burnet in 1729; as captain by Belcher; again as captain in 1744 by William Shirley, and in 1754 as major by Shirley.

He was elected to the house and senate of the legislature of Massachusetts, and was a member of the governor's council from 1755 to 1771. He was appointed a justice of the peace, and associate justice of the court of common pleas, and chief justice of the same, also judge of probate for a brief period.

He was distantly related to, and an intimate friend of Sir William Pepperrell, who reposed every confidence in him, and made him the depositary of his will for many years before his decease. When appointed judge of the court, Sir William notifies him from Kittery point by letter, thus:—

“Hon. Sir,—If you will come next Saturday and take a fish dinner with me, I will deliver you your commission for one of the judges, and do what I can to qualify you, not pretending to add anything to your qualifications, but to assist in administering the oaths.

With the best respects to our reverend and worthy friends, Mr. Wise and lady,

Your sincere friend and servant,

Wm. Pepperrell.”

Major Hill performed a vast amount of business as justice of the peace. He often received orders from Pepperrell respecting the training of his company. One of them, dated Sept. 18, 1746, soon after Sir William's return from Louisburg, reads thus:—

“Sir,—There is a talk of a French fleet being on our coast; if so you may depend there will be an army of French and Indians upon our backs. Pray be careful and direct all the captains in Berwick to see that all the men are provided arms and ammunition, and let there be a good watch kept in your town and be much upon your guard.

Your affectionate friend,

Wm. Pepperrell.”

One from Governor Shirley, dated July 12, 1745, says :—

"This comes to give you intelligence that the French Indians have already broke out in the western part, and have killed two of our men and scalped them. This intelligence you must send to all the exposed places near you, that so all persons may be upon their guard to prevent a surprise. I am not without hope that when the Eastern Indians find that we have succeeded at Louisburg, they will not be forward to break with us.

Your friend and servant,

W. S."

When Sir William's son-in-law, Sparhawk, was compelled, by the pressure of the times in 1758, to go into bankruptcy, he entreated Major Hill with great earnestness to act as one of the commissioners to settle the estate, which he accordingly did, and in the following year he attended the baronet's funeral as pall bearer. He died March 2, 1772, aged 69.

Major Hill seems to have been a man of stern integrity and of extensive influence and usefulness. He was deeply interested in religion, and a leading man in the church and in high public stations.

The other children of Hon. Judge Hill were—

VI. A child, stillborn.

VII. Eunice, born April 19, 1739, married Capt. George March of Stratham. Their children were, Elizabeth, who married John Wallingford of Berwick; Eleanor, who married Dr. Fogg of Deerfield; Eunice, who married James Haggens of Berwick; John and Patty, who died unmarried.

VIII. and IX. A son and daughter, stillborn.

X. Mary, born Dec. 6, 1748, died April 14, 1754, of throat distemper.

ELISHA HILL, brother of the judge, left one son and perhaps more. This son, named Elisha, resided at Great Works near his father and grandfather, Capt. John. He had twelve children who followed him to his grave—six sons and six daughters. Of the sons, except John the oldest, we have no account. Their names were John, Elisha, Jeremiah, Samuel, Ichabod and James. The daughters m. Deacon Dominicus Goodwin, a Mr. Morrill, a Mr. Ladd and afterwards Rev. Dr. Buckminster, a Mr. Cutts of Saco, a Mr. Fernald in or near Saco, a Mr. Widden of Portsmouth, and a Mr. Taylor of Canada.

Deacon John Hill, the eldest son of Elisha, Jr. above mentioned, was a justice of the peace and member of the legislature, and died in 1810, leaving three or four children. He was much respected for his useful and exemplary life.

The foregoing account of the Hills was gathered chiefly from manuscripts found in an old chest in the garret of Capt. Gerrish in S. Berwick, where they had been nailed up seventy years. All the commissions held by the Hills, both civil and military, were among them, and forty letters from Sir William Pepperrell, some of which were used in writing his life. I have also gathered some important facts from Folsom's history of Saco.

GLEANINGS.

MR. EDITOR :

Dear Sir,—I hand you herewith a number of unconnected memoranda, some referring to subjects already discussed in the Register, and others suggesting new topics of a similar nature, none of them being sufficiently long to form a distinct paper.

Your success in examining J. Boyse's correspondence with Ralph Thoresby (see January No., 1858) has led me to examine the book in relation to the Rayners.

I find that, in 1677, Thoresby lived at London with Mr. Dickinson, whose wife's sister was Mrs. Madox, mother of the antiquary. This I presume to be the John Dickinson, Jr., of the Lane Papers.

Oct. 22, 1680, he went to "Brotherton and visited old Mrs. Rayner, being my great grandfather's father's third wife, now a great age, having lived to see many of her grandchildren's grandchildren."

Feb. 28, 1682. "Most of the day spent in company at the marriage of Mrs. Mary Sykes with Mr. Thomas Rayner. This was the elder sister of Thoresby's wife, whom he married Feb. 25, 1685."

May 9, 1695. "Rode with relations to Ledsham, to the funeral of my brother Rayner's father, an excellent person."

How to explain this Mrs. Rayner being his great great grandmother is difficult. He was son of John and Mary (Idle), grandson of John and Grace (Clouesly), great grandson of George and Isabel Curtis, and great great grandson of Ralph Thoresby, whose wife's name is not given in the Ducatus Leodonsis. His mother's pedigree is also untraced there.

His brother-in-law, Thomas Rayner, was of Beghall, and had issue : John, Thomas, Joshua, Elizabeth, Mary, and Sarah.

About 1695 he commenced to write the life of Rev. — Rayner, of Lincoln, "who was born in this neighborhood," and lived in Halifax, Pudsey and Woodchurch, from his own diaries and letters. The next year Mr. H. Sampson writes that this MS. is in Mr. Disney's hands, and he hopes soon to receive them. [Query, was this life ever published?]

3.

As to Joseph Boyse (see January No., 1858), a passage in the Lane Papers makes it clear that his father returned to England early in 1657, or late in 1656. This confirms your conjecture that Joseph was not born in this country.

I find by the Thoresby Papers that he had a brother Elkanah; a brother Samuel, who had a daughter, Dorcas; sisters Priestly and Fentoa; nephew Wm. Jackson; and cousin Hicksoa. He died in 1728, leaving an only son, Samuel, the spendthrift poet, and friend of Johnson, of whom a good biography is given in Chalmer's General Biog. Dict.

4.

The elaborate pedigree which Mr. Pavor of York, Eng., sent you, contains a reference to the same Boyse's family and its offshoots. Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Hobson of Ufflete, married John Johnson, Rector of Sutton-upon-Darwent, who died in 1657.

Incorporation of the Town of Lexington.

The records of the town of Lexington commenced March 30th, 1713. Previously the records stand in the name of Cambridge Farms, or Cambridge Precinct; but a year or two previous to the above date, it had been decided that an order of incorporation should be obtained if possible. The following terms were offered to the town of Cambridge to secure her consent to the separation, viz.: 1. that the inhabitants of the precinct would pay one third part of two thirds of the cost of the maintenance of the great bridge until there should be a new establishment of court; 2. that they would pay their proportion of twenty-five pounds to clear off the arrearages of the town. The following order was accordingly made:—

At a Great & General Court or Assembly for Her Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, began & held at Boston upon Wednesday the 20th of May 1712 & Continued by several Prorogations unto Wednesday the Eighteenth of March following in the same year 1712 (3). being their fifth session

The following Order pass'd in Council & Concur'd by the Representatives, viz

Whereas upward of Twenty Years since the Inhabitants or farmers dwelling on a certain Tract of Out Lands within the Township of Cambridge in the County of Middlesex, living remote from the Body of the Town towards Concord, Obtained Leave of the General Court with approbation of the Town to be a Hamlet or separate Precinct & were set off by a Line, viz beginning at the first run of Water or Swampy place, over which is a kind of a Bridge in the Way or Rhode, on the southerly side of Francis Whitmore's House towards the town of Cambridge aforesaid, across the neck of Land lying between Woburn Line & that of Watertown side, upon a Southwest and Northeast Course, commonly called the Northern Precinct, & being now increased, have obtained Consent of the Town & made Application to this Court to be made a Separate & distinct Town, upon such Terms as they & the Town of Cambridge have agreed upon,—That is to Say that the s<sup>d</sup> Northern precinct when made a Township shall bear such a part of the two thirds of the Charge of the Great Bridge over Charles River in Cambridge as shall be according to their proportion with the Town of Cambridge annually in the province Tax, And they shall annually pay to the Treasurer of the Town of Cambridge their part of the Charges as aforesaid.

And such other Articles as the s<sup>d</sup> Town & the Precinct have already agreed on by their Committees

Ordered that the aforesaid Tract of Land known by the Name of the Northern Precinct in Cambridge be henceforth made a separate & distinct Town by the Name of Lexington; upon the Articles & Terms already agreed on with the Town of Cambridge & that the Inhabitants of the said Town of Lexington be entitled Have, Use, Exercise, & Enjoy all such Immunities, Powers, & Privileges as other Towns of this Province have & do by Law Use, Exercise & Enjoy

And the Constable of the s<sup>d</sup> Precinct is hereby directed & empowered to Notify & summon the Inhabitants duly qualified for Votes to Assemble & meet together for the Choosing of Town Officers.

SANBORN GENEALOGICAL HISTORY.

[By DYER H. SANBORN.]

Most of the matter that follows was furnished by John S. Sanborn, Esq. of Sherbrooke, Canada East, member of the Provincial Parliament, copied from the Government Archives at Toronto, Canada West.

Extracts from Robson's British Herald of English Nobility and Gentry, relating to the name "Samboure," or "Samborne:"

(1.) Samborne, Moulsoford, Berks; Hants; and Somers.

Arms, ar. a chev. sa. between three Mulletts gu.

(2.) Samborne, (same arms,) Crest, a dexter hand holding a sheaf of arrows, ppr.

(3.) Samborne, [Worc.] ar. a chev. between three mullets pierced, gu.

(4.) Samborne, Sa. (another az.) a lion rampant.

Explanations of the preceding contractions:

(1.) Samborne, the name is found in Moulsoford, in Berkshire; also, in Hamshire and Somersetshire.

Arms, argent, a cheveron, sable, between three mullets, gules.

(2.) Samborne, (arms found to be the same,) the Crest consists of a dexter [right] hand holding a sheaf of arrows [ppr.] (purpura,) purple (color.)

(3.) Samborne, (name in Worcestershire.) Arms, argent, (silver,) a cheveron between three mullets, pierced gules (red.)

(4.) Samborne, Sable, (another azure,) a lion rampant.

Explanations of technical terms used:

A cheveron is an ordinary, representing two rafters joined together in chief, and descending in the form of a pair of compasses to the extremities of the shield.

The mullet is supposed to be the rowel of a spur, and should consist of five points only, whereas stars consist of six.

A mullet pierced is where the groundwork is gules, or red; there are small white spots where the field is seen through it. The ground-work is silver, and is a five-sided figure.

The cheveron, the rafters inside of this figure, is black; the mullets are red; the Crest a right hand standing upright holding in the clenched hand five arrows. There are two coats of arms belonging to the name. The other is a lion rampant. The field, or ground-work, is black, (sometimes azure,) and the lion, gold.

The name is spelled Sambourne in Berkshire; Samborne without the letter u in the other counties.

In Sims' Index to the Pedigrees and Arms containing the Herald's Visitations, and other Genealogical manuscripts in the British Museum, is found of the pedigrees in Somersetshire—

"Samborne, of Timsbury, 1141, fo.* 88; 1385, fo. 70; 1445, fo. 122b; 1559, fo. 85.

In Berkshire, is found

Sambourne, of Moulsoford, 1097, fo. 9; 1483, fo. 186b; 1530, fo. 71b; 1332, fo. 96b; 1982, fo. 96b; 1982, fo. 115b; 5865, fo. 16; 6173, ff. 86b, 87, add Mss. 4961, ff. 30b, 31, 14; 283, ff. 30b, 31, 14; 284, p. 102.

Sambourne, 4108, fo. 5."

* Fo. for folio; ff. for folios.

County Genealogies in Hampshire, taken by William Berry, from the Visitations of the British Museum, in 1634.

John Rogers married the daughter of John Sisley, after the decease of Sir Thomas Sisley, Knt. S. P.

John Brocas married Anne, daughter of John Rogers.

Elisabeth, daughter of John Rogers, married Nicholas Samborne.

John Sanborne of Berkshire married Dorothy Tichborne about the year 1600. She was a descendant of Sir Roger Tichborne who was knighted some two generations prior to the time of Edward III.

It appears from the examination of early town, church, county, and State records, that the sons of our progenitor John Samborne of Derbyshire, England, Lieut. John, William, Esq., and Stephen, spelled their name Samborne, and not Sanborn. The letter e was dropped in the 3d generation. The writer, in a recent examination of the Church and Town Records of Kingston, N. H., found the name Capt. Jonathan Samborn, (15.) b. May 25, 1672, of the 3d generation; Dea. Tristram Samborn, (30.) b. in 1683, and the primitive members of the Congregational Church registered Samborn. In the 5th generation the name in most instances is spelled Sanborn, some exceptions. Dr. William Prescott, the New Hampshire Antiquarian, this winter, at Salem, Mass. furnished me the following record, found in examining the "Old Norfolk County Records," which embrace Essex County and the county of Rockingham, N. H. This record of births, marriages, and deaths has been legibly transcribed by order of the Essex County Commissioners. These records extend from 1640 to 1680, inclusive, and contain much that cannot be found in Town Records prior to 1660.

Wherever our name occurs in these records it is invariably spelled Samborn.

Issue of Stephen Samborn, (4.) third son of John of Derbyshire, England, and his wife Sarah.

THIRD GENERATION.

1. Sarah Samborn, b. June 4, 1651.

2. Dorothy Samborn, b. March 2, 1653.

No record is found when Stephen was married, nor what Sarah's surname (maiden) was before marriage. Since Stephen returned with his grandfather, Rev. Stephen Bachilor to England, in 1654, probably his wife and daughters accompanied him; and the births of his then living children were registered in Norfolk County Records for preservation.

"The ancient Stephen Bachilor of Hampton, N. H., died at Hackney, a Village and Parish in Middlesex, two miles from London, in 1660, in the one hundredth year of his age."

1. Abial, (7.) Sanborn Gen. in these records is plainly written out Abigail, b. Feb. 23, 1653.

2. Richard, (8.) b. Feb. 4, 1655, instead of Jan. 4, 1655.

3. Stephen, (11.) b. Nov. 12, 1661.

4. Sarah, (20.) b. Feb. 12, 1667, instead of Feb. 10, 1667.

It seems that the name Samborne and Sambourne were not uncommon in Somersetshire and Berkshire, in the Parishes of Timsbury and Moultsford. It is, also, found in Hamshire, Shropshire, and Worcester-shire, but not in Derbyshire.

SAVAGE'S GLEANINGS.

[Correction explanatory.]

S. G. DRAKE, Esq., Editor "N. E. Gen. Reg."—

Sir,—In "Gleanings for New England History," by James Savage, Esq. ("Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll's;" 3d ser., vol. 8th, pp. 316 and 317), I find the following passage:—

"Examination of a Register of the diocese of Sarum, from early in the 13th century, printed by Sir Thomas Phillips, a distinguished Antiquary, but never published, helped me to one or two of our New England divines from Wiltshire: Wilhelmus Noyes p. m. at the church of Choldrington 1602, and Nathaniel Noyes p. r. W<sup>m</sup> Noyes at the church of West Chaldrington 1621. I conjecture the meaning of p. m. here to be, by removal; and p. r. pro rector."—

Mr. Savage's conjecture was not a happy one; but, fortunately, a communication from Sir Thomas Phillips* enabled him to correct the error into which he had fallen, and he has done so (same series, vol. 10th, p. 133) in his second interesting collection of "Gleanings." He therein informs us that "'p. m.' is an abbreviation for per mortem, and 'p. r.' for per resignationem." Before reading Mr. Savage's correction I had inserted the following note, opposite the erroneous passage, in my copy of the "Collections." The mistake, made by so old and distinguished an antiquary, induces me to believe that the information will prove serviceable to others who may have occasion to examine registers of the English clergy.

A clergyman was presented to a benefice, made vacant by the death, or resignation, or other avoidance of the preceding incumbent. The character of this voidance was usually expressed, in the registers, in abbreviated terms. Occasionally the sentence was fully written out. I will give a few examples of the latter class, which will render all the customary abbreviations easily intelligible. They are as follows: "Gul. Watson, Cler. 1. Nov. 1662. vacavit per amonionem A. Burgess propter Nonconformatem."—"vacari per mortem Walteri Franceys ult. Rect."—"quem nuper obtinuit Dns. J. Burdett, vacantem per ejus assecutionem Archidiaconat Cestrie."—"vac. eo quod Mr. John de Severley adeptus est dignitatem, viz. Archd. Wig."—"vac. per cessionem ult. incumbentis."—"vac. per negligentiam dni. Ric. Kylner," (in not paying his "tents.")—"vac. per deprivationem."—"vac. per legitimam deprivationem."—"vac. per resignationem."—"vac. per lapsum temporis."—finally, in cases of exchange of benefices,—"permutavit cum."—These are all the different examples I found, in the examination of many lists of the clergy, in "Dugdale's Warwickshire," 2d Edit. by Thomas, 1730. As removal, death, promotion, surrender, negligence, deprivation, resignation and delayed-acceptance are included among the causes of vacancies, the summary seems to be quite complete.

Trusting that the above may be thought worthy of a place in your valuable and interesting "Register," I remain, very respectfully, &c.,

BOOK NOTICES.

The Vinton Memorial, comprising a Genealogy of the descendants of John Vinton of Lynn, 1648; also Genealogical Sketches of several allied Families, namely, those bearing the names of Adams, Alden, Allen, Boylston, Faxon, French, Hayden, Holbrook, Mills, Niles, Penniman, Thayer, White, Richardson, Baldwin, Carpenter, Safford, Putnam, and Greca. By JOHN ADAMS VINTON. Boston: 1858. 8vo. pp. 534.

This work bears evidence of thorough research, and in many particulars may be recommended as a model genealogy. Some of the Sketches, as the author terms them, are fuller than many genealogies that have been published in separate form. In his Appendix he has given a very good history of the introduction of the Iron Manufacture into New England; and scattered through his pages are curious and interesting illustrations of the manners and customs of other days.

In the Preface Mr. Vinton offers some conjectures upon the native country of his blood, and the origin of his name. The materials he has collected are scanty; and of these he seems not to have made that earnest use, which marks his labors in genealogy. Having caught the echoes of a tradition among his aged relatives, that their ancestors emigrated from France, and found the name of Petrus de Vintonne, at Reims, in 1326, he forgets the great mass of testimony adduced in his subsequent pages, leading to a diverse conclusion. We admit the probability that John Vinton of Woburn, came from France, and that his ancestors may have fled from intolerance there. But we shall proceed to show that long before the exodus of the Huguenots, before St. Bartholomew's, before Protestantism itself, men bearing the name Vinton were found not only in France, but in many parts of England and Scotland. The French Vintons were, therefore, but one branch of a family widely diffused; or else, the name was adopted in various countries, by men bearing no blood relationship to each other.

To arrive at some satisfactory conclusion, let us examine the meaning and origin of the name. Mr. Vinton rightly connects it with Winchester, without seeming to perceive the precise mode and degree of the connection. That it is far closer than a mere "Latinizing" of that name, may easily be shown. In the "Codex diplomaticus ovi Saxonici,"* the name of that city, is found more than seventy times, occurring in ancient charters, of the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries. But the forms of the name are as various, as of all others discovered through the mist of the middle ages. They may be arranged in the order of their resemblance to Winchester, as Wintecastre, Wintancastre, Wentana, Wintonia, Vintonia, Wynton, and Winton.

It is easy to see that Wintecastre is Winte-castrum, that is, the camp at Winte, or Wenta, or Venta. For, Venta was the Roman name of Winchester, as may be seen on maps of Britain; and it is so (Overea) mentioned by Ptolemy, the Greek geographer, 150 years after Christ. Mr. Vinton quotes from a Celtic dictionary (by J. B. Bullet,) the assertion "Vinchester est l'ancienne Vintonia, grande ville située dans une île formée par un partage de l'Iching Vin, rivière, tonn, partage." "Prodigious as the erudition in which Bullet summons to his aid, the judgment he exhibits is not equal to his scholarship; nor do we know less satisfactory authority than the Dictionnaire Celtique." We are not inclined to accept this etymology; for it seems more probable that the second syllable was formed, as we have indicated, through the corruptions the name endured from popular use, in a barbarous age. Certainly the original Celtic word was Went, (meaning river,) which is still preserved in Caerwent, and Derwent. From this the Romans, having no W, formed Venta, a noun of the first declension. The monks afterwards changed this to Wintan, for more distinctness of sound, as we see in two of the forms given above. Bullet's hypothesis is built on the occurrence of the syllable ton, in many names; as Witon, Boston, Trinnton, and the like, where the meaning is said to be "habitation." But if, as he says, "tonn" means "partage," (division,) and Winchester was named from the branching of the Iching, then a similarity of circumstance occurring elsewhere, might occasion the same name to be given in other places. Wherever a stream was divided by an island, in Celtic countries, a Winchester might arise, (or rather, if no castrum stood near, a Venta might be built,) the town taking its name from the local situation. There are, in fact, two other towns of this name, on Roman maps of Britain, suggesting the probability that there might have been more, not mentioned by Latin writers. Winchester, the "grandeville" in Hampshire, was called Venta Belgarum, to distinguish it from Venta Icenorum, the present Norwich, and from Venta Silurum, now Caerwent in Wales.* In this last name we see the ancient Venta still preserved, with the prefix "Caer," meaning habitation. In all three we have the presence of a river, the Itheg at Winchester, the Yare at Norwich, and the Wye (!) at Caerwent.

The syllable Vin, or Ven, followed by a dental, was in fact of very frequent occurrence in British geography. On maps of Roman Britain, we find in the south of the island, Vindonnm, (now Silchester), Vindomes, (now White-Church), and Vindogladia, (now Gnessage.) In the north were Vindolana, Vindobala, Vindomora and Vinovia. Other cases are those in which the order of syllables is inverted; as Benaventa, Glanoventa, Derwentio and Magioventum. On the continent, were Ventium, and Ventisponne, Vindo, Vindobona, Vindomagus and Vindonissa.

Remembering how easy it is to make ludicrous blunders in ancient and foreign etymologies, we poach no further in this Celtic field. But we submit that there must have been a common idea at the root, blossoming into these analogies at the top, and we feel an impregnable confidence, that at least in Britain, the syllable Vint, or Vent, possessed an extreme antiquity and a wide diffusion. The name Vintred occurs on many old British coins, and Vint still survives among the gentry of Essex.

The city of Winchester, a thousand years ago, possessed much more than its present relative importance. Edward the Confessor held very extensive lands in its vicinity. In early Norman times, moreover, it was often the regal residence. Henry III., in this battle of Evesham, (1265,) saved his life by exclaiming, "I am Henry of Winchester, your king." The survey of the royal lands, made in the time of Henry I., (1101-1135) is still known as the "Winton book." It was also quite a matter of course, that the Earls of Winchester, should write themselves Winton, when they could write at all, for such was the common abbreviation of Wintonensis; and the priors, bishops and cardinals named from that city, who certainly could write, would use no other signature. We do not mean to contend that the family name, Vinton, originated thus; for these were mere official designations. But in very early times we meet with names which certainly are not official, but names of persons called after their estates, or place of abode. Such was Robert de Winton, precentor of York, in 1250, and Robert de Winton, prior of St. Andrews, in 1255. Such also was Talceris de Wynton, who died in 1332, and Roger de Winton, prior in Southwark, in 1304. Mr. Vinton enumerates no less than thirteen de Wintons, mentioned in local histories, as living prior to Henry VIII. He might have added to his list the names of Peter de Wintonia, mentioned by Rymer, as "clericus garderobe," from 1257 to 1272, and of Johannes de Wintonia clericus, appended to an instrument dated 1306. The preposition de at length disappeared from most names in which it occurred, and in the fifteenth century we meet with the name Vinton standing alone.

There is no need of supposing that all who bore this name were connected with Winchester. The numerous names of places identical or similar to the ancient form of this, show that the family name might have been adopted from estates elsewhere situated. Beside the village of Venton, in Cornwall, there still remain Winton in Suffolk, Winton in Cumberland, Winton in Yorkshire, and Allwinton in Northumberland. The name, also, of the Scottish Chronicler, Andrew of Wynton, as well as Richard of Winton, found in the Rotuli Scotiae, render it probable that such a place existed in Scotland. The name of "Petrus de Vintonne, chanoine de Reims," in 1326, makes it probable that the name was also attached to the soil of France. But the great mass of evidence adduced above, unites with national feeling, to make us prefer the English origin of the name.

One thing, we own, seems unaccountable to us—the almost utter absence of the name from all English lists of persons. Except a few in London, and in Glasgow, Mr. Vinton is not able to find his family in England or Scotland. In the south of Ireland we have heard the name is common. In this country it is somewhat extended, and the ancestor, to whom a great number have been traced, seems to have sprung from a family who had resided in France. We incline to think they were emigrants from England in a distant age. No claim to distinction can be advanced in favor of the race; but we think there is something venerable in a name rooted in the geography of Britain, and traceable in its elements back to the time of Christ.

Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Vol. iv. of the Fourth Series. Published at the charge of the Appleton Fund. Boston: 1858. 8vo. pp. 514.

The Committee of Publication for this volume consisted of Richard Frothingham, Jr., Thomas Aspinwall, George Livermore, and Lorenzo Sabine. In our opinion, no volume of Historical Collections, or any publication of ancient records, (wanted only for reference) need or require to be got up, any better than this volume. It is occupied, mainly, with a "Correspondence, in 1774 and 1775, between a Committee of the Town of Boston and Contributors of Donations for the Relief of the Sufferers by the Boston Port Bill." For the editing of this part of the volume, the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Frothingham, is peculiarly qualified. Indeed the whole volume bears evidence of his care, diligence and accuracy, and is alike creditable to his good taste and sound judgment.

Besides the important Correspondence above mentioned, the volume contains a variety of other articles from unpublished materials of great value; among which may be mentioned letters from Samuel Adams, Joseph Hawley, Andrew Eliot, a Petition of Roger Williams, Phineas Pratt's Narrative and Petition, &c. &c. All these are elucidated by Mr. Frothingham with judicious notes. An Index, or suitable table of contents, would greatly facilitate the examination of the volume. As usual, probably, in such cases, nearly the whole labor of editing the work fell upon the Chairman of the Committee. In this case he has done all that could, in reason, be required of him; and we hope the editor of the next volume of the Society's Collections, will, in accepting his charge, make it a condition that those associated with him, shall prepare an Index to their work.

The Life of John Fitch, the Inventor of the Steamboat. By THOMPSON WESTCOTT. Philadelphia: 1857. 12mo. pp. 415.

We did not imagine that so much interesting matter could be found about John Fitch, as we find in the volume before us. In the Preface is plainly told what the reader may expect in regard to Fitch's claim to the discovery of applying steam to propel vessels. He says, "By the general voice, Robert Fulton has been most unjustly lauded as the inventor of the steamboat. Honor is paid to his memory by statesmen, orators, and writers, and 'poor John Fitch,' if ever alluded to, is spoken of as one who knew not how to produce the effects which he was ingenious enough to conjecture were possible. Perhaps a stronger instance of the tendency of mankind to elevate the fortunate and degrade the unfortunate, cannot be adduced."

John Fitch was truly a man who had to struggle with misfortune, and we can heartily recommend this attempt to do justice to his memory to our readers. The Fitch family to which John belonged, came from near Braintree, County of Essex, England, and settled in Connecticut. There is in the volume a pretty good genealogy of the family.

Third Annual Report and Collections of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, for the year 1856. Vol. 3. Madison: 1857. 8vo. pp. 547.

Few works of the same extent contain a more valuable body of Western History than the one before us. Its list of Papers or Articles occupies a page in small type—so numerous that our limits will not allow of their enumeration; nor can we give some of them without seeming to do injustice to others. We observe many valuable notes, illustrative of the various papers, from the hand of the corresponding Secretary of the Society. The Hon. Lyman C. Draper, a gentleman to whom the West is under great obligations for his persevering efforts in recovering materials for its history.

A Genealogy of the Descendants of David Goddard. By WILLIAM AUSTIN GODDARD. Worcester: M. Spooner, Printer: 1833. 8vo. pp. 39.

This work may be fairly termed one of the pioneers in the great field of genealogy, and would even now be considered very creditable to the author. Of course there is a lack of that system which now characterizes books of this nature, but the reader will find little trouble in holding all the threads of the pedigree in his hands. It is a singular proof of the necessity of a Genealogical Association and Journal, that this book has so long eluded the search of the collector. It has already been availed of by the authors of the "Watertown Genealogies" and the "Rice Family;" and their sanction is sufficient proof of the accuracy and fidelity with which the author fulfilled his task. Annals of the Minnesota Historical Society, 1856, containing Materials for the History of Minnesota. Prepared by EDWARD D. NEILL, Secretary of the Society. Saint Paul: 1856. 8vo. pp. 141.

Books without some kind of pictorial illustrations, now-a-days, appear in a sort of unfinished state. The spirit of illustration is extensively abroad, and an author can hardly expect his work to sell, however good it may be, without pictures to set it off. Even historical collections are beginning to partake of the spirit of the age. This volume of the Minnesota Society has many neat and appropriate wood engravings. The headings of some of its chapters are—"Who were the first men?" Gov. Ramsey's Address at the Second Annual Meeting of the Society. "Early Notices of the Dakotas." "Louis Hennepin." "Sieur du Luth." "Explorer of the Minnesota River," and a great number of other topics, chiefly illustrative of the Dakota Indians and their country.

We are indebted to Mr. William H. Kelly of St. Paul, (formerly of Boston,) for a copy of the Annals here noticed.

The Paine Family Register, or Genealogical Notes and Queries. Nos. 5 & 6. Albany: Jan. and May. 1858.

Though confined principally to the Paine race, this work forms a highly interesting miscellany, to those engaged in kindred pursuits. No. 5 opens with a neat account of Robert Treat Paine, the signer of the Declaration of Independence, tracing his pedigree to his emigrant ancestor, who came into Plymouth Colony in 1621. Every connection of the family should patronize the work. It is conducted by Dr. Henry D. Paine of Albany, to whom, if one dollar be remitted, he will forward to the address of such patron four numbers of the work.

The Sheldon Magazine, No. IV. October. Or, a Genealogical List of the Sheldons in America, with Biographical and Historical Notes, and Notices of other Families with which they Intermarry'd. Embellished with Portraits and Fac-similes. By the REV. HENRY OLCOTT SHELTON. Sidney, O., 1857. 8vo. pp. 33.

The character of this number of the Sheldon Magazine not differing from its predecessors, it will be necessary only to refer our readers to previous notices, for our opinion respecting it. We are glad the editor is encouraged to continue the work, and hope he will soon complete it, so that we can bind the numbers in a permanent volume.

Memoirs of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. Vol. VI. Philadelphia: 1858. 8vo. pp. 429.

This volume is entitled "Contributions to American History, and the expense of its publication is defrayed by a fund; to which fund, any person contributing twenty dollars, entitles such person to all the publications issued by the Society during life. The first article in the volume under notice is "Some Account of the Society of the Cincinnati." 2. Journal of the Meeting of the Society in 1784. 3. The Insurrection in the Western Counties of Pennsylvania. 4. Presentation to the Hist. Soc. of Pa., of the Belt of Wampum delivered by the Indians to William Penn, at the great Treaty under the Elm Tree in 1682, Penn's Letters to the Indians, &c. 5. The Acadian Exiles. 6. The case of Major André. There are several fine illustrations in the volume. Among them a curious representation of the Belt before mentioned. The paper, typography, &c., is fully equal to any volume of historical collections issued by any of the historical societies in the country.

A History of the Rise, Progress, and Present Condition of the Bethlehem Female Seminary. With a Catalogue of its Pupils, 1785—1858. By WILLIAM C. REICHER. Philadelphia: 1858. 8vo. pp. 468.

This is a very large as well as a very magnificent volume, illustrated with a great number of fine plates; consisting of Views and Portraits. It is, altogether, the most superb work of the kind which has fallen under our notice. It contains many pieces, prose and verses, by pupils, or those who have been such, which do them much credit, and reflect honor upon the conductors of the institution.

A Sermon on the Re-opening of Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass., preached on the 24th Sunday after Trinity, Nov. 22, 1857; with an Historical Notice of the Church. By the REV. NICHOLAS HOPKIN, Rector. Boston: 1858. 8vo. pp. 79.

Everything about this production is excellent; an excellent sermon, valuable historical notes, fine engravings representing the church edifices in 1792 and 1838. The original petitioners for a church (1759) embrace the since well known names, Henry Vassal, Joseph Lee, John Vassal, Ralph Inman, Thomas Oliver, David Phips, Robert Temple, James Apthorp. The first minister was the Rev. East Apthorp, who was born in Boston, and was the fourth son of Charles Apthorp, Esq., an eminent merchant.

Memoirs, Counsels, and Reflections. By an OCTOGENARY. Addressed to his Children and Descendants, and printed for their use. "The father to the children shall make known thy truth."—Isa. xxxviii. 19. Cambridge: Metcalf and Company, printers to the University. 1857. 8vo. pp. 119.

This work of the venerable Rev. Dan Huntington of Hadley, consists of two sermons and notes, an autobiography, and a brief genealogy of the Huntingtons. We do not presume to make any extracts from the former, as they treated of private affairs. The genealogy is brief, and the author, by assuring us that the Rev. E. B. Huntington of Stamford, Conn., has an elaborate work on the subject, soon to appear, relieves us from the task of reviewing the present book at length. We trust soon to report the appearance of the new book. W. H. W.

American Annual Obituary.

There is in press, and soon to be published, a volume, entitled "Annual Obituaries." This work has been undertaken by the Hon. NATHAN CROSBY of Lowell, Mass., for the editorship of which he is well calculated; and, judging from the facilities at his command, and the industry which he has bestowed upon it, the volume must be highly valuable to the public. We understand that Phillips, Sampson & Co., are the publishers.

The Morse Monument, erected at Medfield, Mass., April 27, 1858, by their Descendants in reverence for their Memories, and gratitude for their Benefactions.

Such is the inscription upon a fine lithographic print, representing the Morse Monument. This monument is wrought out of the most durable stone, and consists of three square obelisks or columns, united at the base. The centre column is thus inscribed: "To the Memory of Seven Puritans, who emigrated from England to America in 1635-9." On a tablet on the same column below is this:—"Samuel Morse, born 1585; settled in Dedham, 1636; died at Medfield, 1634. Joseph Morse settled at Ipswich, where he died, 1646." The other two columns represent two other families of Morses. On the one:—"John Morse, born 1604; settled at New Haven, and died at Wollington, Ct., 1707, æt. 103." On the other: Anthony Morse, born at Marlboro', England, 1606; died at Newbury, 1686. William Morse, born 1608, died 1683, at N. Robert and Peter, their brothers, settled and died in New Jersey."

In justice to the Rev. ANKER MORSE, it should be stated, that it is through his untiring exertions, that this Monument, at a cost of 300 dollars, has been erected.

A VIGOROUS OLD AGE.—Mrs. Lucy Osgood, of Salisbury, who is now in her 97th year, for two years has attended the "Cattle Show" in this city. A year ago she stopped at the north end with her friends, and after walking three quarters of a mile, stood for two hours about the mall to see the balloons ascend, and then walked back. When the stage called for her in the evening, she for some time declined entering it, because it was crowded, saying she could walk to Salisbury, which was some three miles. This year she walked from the north end and visited the Fair, apparently no more fatigued than half the girls who had never seen twenty summers. Since she was ninety years old, she has walked from Salisbury, and experienced no inconvenience therefrom.—Newburyport Herald, Oct., 1857.

He was first commissioned by Gov. Shirley, under King George II., 1 March, 1747, as "Ensign of a company of Volunteers raised for his Majesty's service for the defence of the western frontiers." He was subsequently commissioned as lieutenant, then captain, and finally as major, by Gov. Pownall, in 1760, in the thirty-third year of the reign of King George II. He was in active service in the French and Indian war, and was at the surrender of Fort William Henry, Aug. 10, 1757, at which time he narrowly escaped from massacre, losing all his clothing except his deerskin breeches and his silver watch. He lost property at that time valued at £328 8s., continental currency—probably about $50 in specie. He died at Deerfield while attending the public service, in 1784, æ 67 yrs. The following is the inscription on his gravestone in the old burying-ground in Bernardston:

CROSWELL, Rev. Harry, D. D., New Haven, Ct., in his 83d year; had been Rector of an Episcopal (Trinity) church there 43 years. To Jan. 1, 1856, he had officiated at 2,553 baptisms, 873 marriages and 1,842 burials. He was father of the late Rev. Dr. Wm. Crosswell of Christ church (Boston), and Sherman, for many years editor of the Albany Argus, and Frederick, many years judge of the Probate court of New Haven. A newspaper, called the Balance, published at Hudson, was edited by him from 1803 to 1808, making 6 vols. in 4to. A copy of this work is in the Editor's library. It was rather a violent anti-Jefferson paper. For some of his remarks on Mr. Jefferson's conduct, Mr. Crosswell was prosecuted for a libel. An account of his trial was published.

CURTIS, Mrs. Ann, Somerville, 24 Feb., æ 72 yrs. 7 mos.; widow of the late Noah Curtis, Esq. of Quincy.

CURTIS, Joseph, Esq., Jamaica Plain, West Roxbury, 13 Feb., æ 85 yrs. 4 mos. 20 days. His great-great-grandfather, William Curtis, with his wife Sarah and four children, came from England to America in the year 1632, and settled on a farm lying on Stony river in Roxbury, where he had four more children born to him. His youngest child, Isaac, born in 1642, inherited the homestead, with the condition that he should take care of his parents in their old age. The emigrant, William, died 8 Dec. 1672, æ 80. His wife, Sarah, died 20 March, 1673, æ 73. The old homestead is now in possession of the fifth Isaac C., who has also a son of that name.

The eldest Isaac had a son Samuel, born 2 Sept. 1688, who married, 6 June, 1711, Hannah Gore of Roxbury. In 1712 he purchased twenty acres of land on Jamaica Plain, bounding on the pond, and, in 1722, built the house yet standing on the premises. By two later purchases he increased his premises to thirty-one acres, which constituted the original Jamaica Plain farm. Samuel and Hannah (Gore) Curtis had eleven children, of which number Joseph and Benjamin, twins, were born 11 Jan. 1721-2. Samuel C. died at J. P. 19 Feb. 1772, æ 84. His wife, Hannah, died there 13 Oct. 1775, in her 88th year.

Joseph, twin brother of Benjamin C., remained at home with his father, Samuel, until the age of 21, when he purchased a negro man and horse, and began farming on his own account. He was the first person who sent vegetables to Boston market in a cart—they having been previously carried in panniers. He came into possession of the family estate by buying out the other heirs, paying one half of the purchase money at the decease of each parent, and agreeing to support them comfortably during their natural lives. He lived a bachelor until the age of fifty. His house was the seat of hospitality for his relations and friends, and the poor and needy were refreshed by his bounty.

He married, 3 July, 1771, Katherine, born May, 1735, youngest daughter of Timothy and Mary Parker of Jamaica Plain, Roxbury. She was a very superior woman, possessed of a strong, discriminating mind, with great wit and turn for repartee, and was universally beloved by old and young for her cheerfulness and benevolence.

Joseph Curtis, Sen. was born in the house built by his father, Samuel, in 1722, and died there 28 Jan. 1792, æ. 70. His wife, Katherine, died there 16 June, 1802, æ. 67. Their eldest son, Joseph, Jr., was born in the ancient house 23 Sept. 1772, and there married, 27 May, 1800, Bethiah Allan, daughter of Jeremiah and Abigail Parker of Roxbury. He inherited the homestead, and, from time to time, added to its dimensions. He also inherited the kind and benevolent dispositions of both his parents. [From Miss C. P. Curtis's manuscript genealogy of the descendants of William Curtis.] L. M. H.

For his adoption of the American side he was disinherited of another family estate, Ashley Hall, on Ashley River, by his uncle, William Bull, the loyalist Governor of South Carolina during the revolution. ### GROTON EPITAPH.

Inclosed I send you a copy of the oldest inscription in the Groton burying place. Mr. Butler, in his History of Groton, page 253, thus alludes to it:—"It is supposed that the first settlers buried their dead in this place, though there is no monument bearing an inscription, to tell whose dust lies there, earlier than that of James Prescott, 1704. This is an unwrought flat stone, the name, age and time of death indented with a common pick." He was the son of Jonas and Mary [Loker] Prescott, and was born March 16, 1684. See Butler's History, page 428.

A LINEAL DESCENDANT OF DEFOE.—Walter Savage Landor and Charles Knight have discovered a great-grandson of Defoe, the author of Robinson Crusoe. He is seventy-eight years old, living in London, in a state of destitution. Landor has addressed an appeal to every school-boy, and every one who has ever been a school-boy, to subscribe one penny each for his immediate relief. James Defoe is a box-maker and undertaker; has had a family of eight children—two of whom are yet living—James and Priscilla. Mr. Knight has received and expended about £50 during the year for him.—19 November, 1855.

HERALDRY IN AMERICA.

It may seem a contradiction of terms to speak of so aristocratic an institution as heraldry as being of interest or value to democratic Americans; but a little reflection will show us how this science will be of vast importance to our genealogists.

Coats-of-arms may be divided into three classes,—first, those belonging to any man's ancestors, and used by them for a long time. This is the most important class, and in most cases the original cause of the adoption of the arms is not to be discovered, and we must trust to the strictness with which this privilege was formerly guarded, for a guarantee that the arms were justly appropriated.

The second class embraces such arms as have been granted by the Herald's College by royal command, as a reward for distinguished services to the state. These instances are comparatively rare, and are very honorable to the recipient.

The third class consists of the coats-of-arms granted by the Herald's College on payment of certain fees, which, though legal, are not of any value at present to the genealogist, and hardly a source of much comfort to the possessor. This class of coat armor has been a comparatively modern institution, though some instances are recorded of a date prior to the settlement of New England.

It is with the first class above enumerated that we have at present to deal. Though some abuses had crept into the system, it is a fair assertion to make that coats-of-arms, used prior to 1625, were generally the rightful property of the users.

If we find, then, any person using a seal with a shield thereon engraved, in New England, during the score of years following the first colonization of Plymouth and Massachusetts, we may fairly conclude his social position in England was among the gentry or yeomanry. Even in times subsequent to the date I have thus fixed, considerable reliance may be placed upon the use of seals, as affording a clue to trace a family. We must consider that the high moral sentiment of our forefathers, their cheerful acknowledgment of the different social distinctions, and even the lack of any conceivable motive for fraud, alike forbid the suspicion that any man here, in the early days of the Colony, would have wished or dared to use a coat-of-arms when he was not entitled to it.

Again, as these seals require a skill in cutting and setting them not possessed by any one here, I believe, before 1700, or perhaps 1750, the appearance of a seal on the documents referring to the second or third generation, should not call for any expression of suspicion of its genuineness. It may well have happened that a Puritan, disregarding and undervaluing the deeds of his gallant and roystering ancestor, did not choose to use a seal which recalled his exploits; or where one had separated from a household of Cavalier relatives, he might have been loth to use an emblem which proclaimed his origin much more strongly than an identity of name. Yet in either case, his children or grand-children might use his seal, carefully transmitted as an heir-loom.

When wealth began to increase in the larger towns, and the seaports became the resort of visitors and officials from England, there no doubt sprang up here a desire on the part of the leading families to rival the heraldic glories of their guests. A man, apparently a herald-painter, appears to have visited New England a little while previous to the Revolution, and to have furnished all applicants with a tricking of their arms. I have not been able to learn his name,* and can only fix the date of his visit by tradition. His paintings—I speak from an inspection of a score or so—have all a palm branch on each side of the shield, and, entwined around the interlaced ends, is a wreath inscribed “By the name of —” Jones, Brown, or the patronymic of his deluded patron, whatever it might be. In some cases he gave the arms used by an English family of the same name, but at others he boldly drew on his fancy, and depicted “gorgons and chimeras dire.” I need hardly say that the only importance these documents have to the genealogist, is the vexatious reliance still placed on them, in some cases, by the present proprietors.

To revert to our first point, having settled what coats-of-arms—whether found as seals, embroidered by gentle fingers two centuries ago, or crowning some mossy tombstone—may be considered as proper evidences in a genealogical investigation, we have to inquire how valuable they will prove as evidence.

When we remember that the number of emigrants hither, whose previous habitation has been discovered, is but a very small proportion of the whole body, we shall recognize the importance of any clue, however faint, which shall aid our searches. On investigation it may be taken as a rule, that any given name found on our annals, with a few obvious exceptions, has not been represented in England by more than two or three distinct families of the required rank. Hence in any large “encyclopedia of heraldry,” or any “armoury,” we have, as it were, a large directory, whereby our labors may be much lessened. For example, JOHN GIFFARDE, of Lynn in 1683, used a seal bearing three lions in pale. Now these being the arms of the Giffords of —, I should at once, in tracing his pedigree, turn my attention to that branch of the family, as the first and most important source to be searched.

These seals are by no means of unusual occurrence, and I have been mainly influenced to make these few notes in the hope of calling attention to the subject. Many autograph collectors will find the seal as well as the name on their cherished manuscripts. The early governors used their own coats-of-arms, as province seals on commissions, and similar documents, and several of them, like Bellemont and Hutchinson, are very large and richly emblazoned.

It is by no means a proof of the falsity of a coat-of-arms that it is not recorded in printed works like Burke's or Berry's volumes; there being no official record extant, these books can only verify those arms they record, not damn those they ignore.

In a few instances authentic documents are still extant confirming the right to bear these arms. Thus the WINTHROPS have a certificate, dated before 1600, acknowledging these claims. The MINERS of Connecticut have a curious pedigree; and several families have recently been successfully traced by H. G. Somerby, Esq., whose labors are well known to the readers of this magazine.

But I can state without fear of contradiction that any family, whose ancestor used a coat-of-arms, possesses a noble corner-stone to erect its English pedigree upon.

On the other hand, I cannot too strongly express my regret and surprise at the attempts daily made, by many, to assume a property not belonging to them. Many American genealogies, even the pages of this magazine, have been marred by the introduction of a coat-of-arms, to which the user had not a shadow of right.* A man using a coat-of-arms, by that act asserts that his ancestors have been of knightly rank, as contemporary evidence declare, or have so distinguished themselves as to receive from the crown permission to assume similar rank. An Englishman may be pardoned, perhaps, if he obtains by purchase a right to maintain a spurious ancestry—but for an American to take this dubious privilege without purchase, is too absurd to be tolerated.

It is useless to allege that a man has a right to use any badge he may like, to put on his carriage, his plate, or the covers of his books; he cannot hoist the revenue flag on his boat, and he should be equally debarred, by custom and the rules of society, from sailing under a false flag, as the proved descendant of a knightly race.

There is no cause for pride in the accident of one's birth, but it remains a fact; and if a Gradgrind deserts his principles and adopts a badge whereby he drops his honest and obscure parentage for a fictitious and more distinguished one, he should be arraigned by the collective body of genealogists, as trying, for the sake of increasing his own pomp and glory, to destroy the noble work of perpetuating our annals, for which they all labor.

Names.

ON the Medford records will be found the following curious name, MENESING, daughter of Richard and Menesing Penhallow, born June, 1768.

At Lexington it is recorded that JONATHAN and CHERRY STONE had four children, born 1715—1723. The youngest was called LOVE.

I would make an inquiry, whether the name LOVISA, now sometimes seen, is not clearly a mispronunciation of LOUISA. I can well imagine some rather illiterate man seeing LOVISA (Louisa) on the tombstone of a deceased progenitress, and giving his child the same name, but pronouncing it as the modern pronunciation would require. I have known the name LOVICE given, but though usually pronounced the same, it was an Italian name, and given by a sailor to his child.

I have met the name LUSANNA, but its origin is beyond my ken. ANSTERS, thus pronounced, puzzled me much, until, in a recent genealogy, I found ANSTRUTHERS, a well-known Scottish family's name, was the proper spelling. REVILO would have been a most difficult name to trace to its derivation, had I not learned from the bearer that his father made the name by reversing OLIVER. MEPHISHBOSHETH ADAMS was of Lexington in 1734. CIBLE BOWMAN I found, on examination, to be a SIBYL. MILICENT, a most charming name, as well as EDITH, is sometimes found. ELIOT, as a Christian name, bespeaks the veneration of our ancestors for the "Apostle to the Indians." ELIOT BROWN, ELIOT REED and ELIOT WHITMORE are on our records; the latter, at least, a relative of the famous JOHN. BATHSHUA and AMMI-RUHAMAH must have been puzzles to the abbreviator. Mr. CUTTELLER would no doubt resent our present curtailment of his name to CUTLER. MIRIAM, as a family name, affords grounds for a suspicion of the origin of the race. AMMITAI PHASSETT was, after all, only the gentle AMITY FASSET; but PHILLEBROWNE maintained the primitive spelling till a recent date. The marriage of MARRETT MUNROE and DELIVERANCE PARKER must have afforded the small wits of the day a rare chance for puns.

KETTLE was a name at Medford a century ago; LE BOSQUET, a French neutral, gave his name to a house long standing there. I have the name written by an inhabitant LEBOSKY, as being the modern method of spelling. GOLDEN MOORE was an early settler on the Mystic. ALLEN NEWHALL had LOVE for his wife. I have had letters from a VENUS, and know a TANERLANE VITRUVIUS.

Almost any of our larger genealogies will give much stranger names than those I have noted.

Note on the Lawrence and Page Families.

In the recently published Lawrence Genealogy—page 78—it is stated that Abel Lawrence (family No. 112) m. Abigail, daughter of Daniel Page of Groton. I am well assured, however, that the lady was the daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Page of Medford, and was born Feb. 11, 1758, which date exactly tallies with her recorded age at her decease.

Samuel Page of Carolina m. Susanna Lawrence, May 20, 1719, at Medford,—perhaps the father of the foregoing. Abel Lawrence was great-grandson of John Lawrence of Groton, whose sister married a Samuel Page, probably about 1700. This connection, in three generations, between these two families, is certainly remarkable, unless the three Samuel Pages were in one line of descent.

In the 11th volume of this work, page 315, I gave copies of some English wills relative to the Perkinses; and I now continue the series, tending to strengthen the tradition relative to the birthplace of the emigrant hither.

Thomas Perkyns of Harthury, will proved April 12, 1602; wife Felix, son James.

Elizabeth Perkins of Hartbury, will proved Sept. 11, 1594; son-in-law Richard Jeffries.

Eastington lies six miles south of Minsterworth, at which former place were—

George Perkins, 1623, who had wife Joan, sons Walter and George, and daughter Elizabeth, and mentions Roger, son of John Perkins, deceased.

I have been much puzzled to trace the pedigree of the General who is mentioned below. I have but little doubt that he was an Englishman, but the pertinacity of some rumors to the contrary make me inquire if any one can decide the point.

Gen. Edward Whitmore, July 17, 1747, seems to have received a commission as lieutenant-colonel, 36th foot. 1759, he was colonel of the 22d foot, Lord Rollo being lieutenant-colonel, and — Way, major. 1761, the same officers were in command, the regiment being at both dates in America. At the siege of Louisburg, June 2, 1758, he arrived from Halifax, and on the 8th, with the right wing, effected a landing. July 27, he received a notice of the surrender of the garrison, and remained as governor of the town. In this capacity he issued a proclamation, Nov. 22, 1758, dated at Boston, announcing that Louisburg would be a free port for all fresh provisions. In February, 1761, he was drowned in Plymouth barbor, as noted in Drake's History of Boston. His property, delivered here, consisted of about £2,700 in specie and mov-ables. A negro servant Jack is mentioned, as also his steward, James Gray, and six other servants. He was buried from Hannah Cordis's house, and among the expenses of his funeral are these items: Paid Thomas Williston for himself and ten porters to attend the funeral; fourteen mourning rings; eight escutcheons; mourning badges for the Cadet company.

In Mr. S. G. Drake's library there is an incomplete file of the Boston Evening Post, which fortunately contains an account of Gov. W.'s funeral. The first paper is dated Monday, Dec. 14, 1761, and says: "Yesterday arrived here Capt. Church, in 13 Days from Louisburg, and informs us, that his Excellency Brigadier General Whitmore, Governor of that Place, and Colonel of the 22d Regiment of Foot, embark'd on board his Vessel in order to proceed hither, but that by contrary Winds they were obliged to put into Plymouth last Friday, when between 11 and 12 o'Clock at Night, his Excellency occasionally going upon Deck, he by some Accident fell overboard, and was unfortunately drowned, no Body being upon Deck to give him any assistance; his Body was taken up the next Morning near the Gurnet and is bro't up by Capt. Church, in order for a decent Interment. The Jury of Inquest who sat upon his Excellency's Body yesterday, bro't in their Verdict, Accidental Death."

The next paper, dated Dec. 21, 1761, gives the following account of his funeral:—

"On Wednesday last the Corps of Major-General Whitmore was interred in the King's Chapel with all the Honors which this town could give. The Procession went from the Town House to the King's Chapel in the following Manner:

A Party of the Troop of Horse-Guards,
The Company of Cadets,
The Officers of the Regiment of Militia,
The officiating Ministers,
The Corps,

WILLIAMS FAMILY.

[By D. W. HOTT.]

THE writer is descended from HENRY WILLIAMS, who married Deborah Davis in Haverhill, Dec. 5, 1726, and settled at once in AMESBURY, West Parish, where he had eight children, and died in 1750 or 1751. The object of the present article is to ascertain the ancestry of this Henry Williams. Below will be found all the information which the writer has been able to gather respecting the earliest Williams families of that region. Any additional items will be thankfully received, and may be sent to the editor of the Register.

(1) JOHN<sup>1</sup> WILLIAMS moved from Newbury to Haverhill about 1643, and resided in Haverhill till his death, Feb. 10, 1673-4. His widow, Jane, died Nov. 21, 1680. In his will, dated Dec. 9, 1670, proved 1673-4, he mentions his children John, Joseph, Mary and Lydia, and his daughter Sarah's child, Sarah Evers. The births of Mary and Lydia were recorded at Newbury, Lydia and Joseph at Haverhill.

- (2) I. SARAH,<sup>2</sup> b. —; m. John Ayer (or Evers), Jr., at Haverhill, May 5, 1646. [It is possible that she may have been the child of a previous wife, as she must have been ten or fifteen years older than Mary.]
- (3) II. JOHN,<sup>2</sup> b. —; m. 1st, Rebecca Colby, Sept. 9, 1661(7); and 2d, Widow Esther Bond, May 5, 1675. Wife Rebecca d. June 10, 1672. He d. April 30, 1698, his widow surviving him. He and his brother Joseph took the oath of allegiance and fidelity at Haverhill, Nov. 28, 1677. He resided in Haverhill, and undoubtedly died there. [It will be seen that the date given in Coffin's History of Newbury is incorrect. It was John, Sen., who d. in 1674.]
- (4) III. MARY,<sup>2</sup> b. Sept. 20, 1641; probably m. Daniel Bradley, at Haverhill, May 21, 1662.
- (5) IV. LYDIA,<sup>2</sup> b. March 15 or 16, 1642-3 [15 on Newbury and 16 on Haverhill and Old Norfolk records.] Her name was Lydia Williams in 1677; hence she was probably unmarried at that time.
- (6) V. JOSEPH,<sup>2</sup> b. April 18, 1647; m. Mary Fuller "of Bastable," Nov. 18, 1674 (13). He lived in Haverhill. The last trace we find of him there, however, is the record of the birth of a child in 1683.

- (7) I. SARAH,<sup>3</sup> b. June 27, 1662; m. Joseph Bond, at Haverhill, Nov. 26, 1679.
- (8) II. MARY,<sup>3</sup> b. Nov. 24, 1663. A Mary Williams m. Thomas Silver, Dec. 28, 1681, by the Haverhill records, but Jan. 4, 1681-2 by the Newbury records.
- (9) III. A DAUGHTER,<sup>3</sup> b. May, 1666. A Rebecca Williams m. Samuel Marble, at Haverhill, Oct. 14, 1686.
- (10) IV. A DAUGHTER,<sup>3</sup> b. Aug. 1, 1668; d. same month.
- (11) V. MERCY,<sup>3</sup> b. Dec. 4, 1669.
- (12) VI. SUSANNA,<sup>3</sup> b. April 11, 1672.

- (13) I. SARAH,<sup>s</sup> b. Nov. 17, 1675.
- (14) II. MARY,<sup>s</sup> b. Nov. 29, 1677.
- (15) III. JOHN,<sup>s</sup> b. Feb. 17, 1679.
- (16) IV. HANNAH,<sup>s</sup> b. Sept. 30, 1683.

A marriage is recorded at Newbury between Daniel Jaques and Mary Williams, March 20, 1692-3.

The following entries are also taken from the Newbury records; but we are unable to say whether Thomas and Richard were brothers, or whether they were at all connected with the families given above.

Thomas Williams m. Mary Lowle, dau. of Serj. Benj. Lowle of Newbury, Jan. 15, 1695-6. Wife Mary d. Dec. 31, 1711. A Thomas Williams, probably the same one, m. Ruth Woodman, Dec. 30, 1713.

Children of Thomas and Mary Williams.

- I. MARY, b. July 2, 1697.
- II. HENRY, b. Sept. 27, 1699. [Is this the one who m. Deborah Davis, in 1726, and settled in Amesbury ?]
- III. HANNAH, b. May 4, 1701.
- IV. ABIGAIL, b. June 4, 1703.
- V. SARAH, b. Dec. 27, 1705.
- VI. JUDITH, b. Dec. 7, 1707.
- VII. BENJAMIN, b. May, 1708 (?).
- VIII. THOMAS, b. June 24, 1710.

Richard Williams m. Ruth Rogers, June 11, 1703.

- I. RICHARD, b. April 6, 1704.
- II. JOHN, b. April 29, 1706.
- III. THOMAS, b. Aug. 13, 1708.
- IV. THOMAS, b. Aug. 9, 1709.
- V. ISAAC, b. Nov. 15, 1711.
- VI. DANIEL, b. Aug. 9, 1715.
- VII. RUTH, b. Aug. 13, 1716.

It would appear that the last two families could not have been descended from (1) John<sup>s</sup> of Newbury and Haverhill; for the only male descendant of the third generation was (15) John,<sup>s</sup> unless (6) Joseph<sup>s</sup> had a son born later than 1683. Both Thomas and Richard were probably born prior to 1683.

ORIGINAL LETTER OF THE REV. JONATHAN PARSONS.

[Communicated by SAMUEL H. PARSONS, Esq., of Middletown, Ct.]

*Newbury, Jan'y 8, 1749-50.*Very Dear & Hon<sup>d</sup> Sir,

The News of your being ship'd and gone for England was quite unexpected & very surprising to me, (tho I heard three or four months ago you talk'd of such an undertaking) Because I had enquired of Justice Griswold who was at my House not long since, and he told me that he thought there was nothing at all in it. I wish God may give you a prosperous voyage & Favour in y<sup>e</sup> sight of our Rightful & Gracious Sovereign King George, in all matters that you shall spread before him agreeable to Righteousness: and I have no Jealousie that you will ask for any things in your own or others behalf but what you think so. As soon as I thought of writing I long'd to hear of y<sup>e</sup> particular circumstances of your Family & friends, that I might write to you of them, tho' you so lately took your leave of them, but I could hear nothing in particular tho Capt. Sheldon of Lyme wrote me a Letter y<sup>e</sup> 28th of Decr, wherein he signifies y<sup>t</sup> it is a General time of Health in those parts. What affairs you are entrusted with to take up your time & employ your great abilities I know not, but I can't think you would so embarrass yourself with business as to take you quite off from speaking a word in y<sup>e</sup> Dear Cause of Liberty of Conscience, if a fair opportunity presented, you have often espoused in Connecticut Assemblies, as well as more privately, with arguments y<sup>t</sup> can never be answered any other way than by a Majority of Hands. And if need be, I persuade myself y<sup>t</sup> you will not be silent upon y<sup>t</sup> Head, now you are on y<sup>e</sup> other side of y<sup>e</sup> water.

With these Hopes, Hon<sup>d</sup> Sir, I am encouraged & beg leave to lay before you some few hints of y<sup>e</sup> Circumstances of a considerable Congregation of Presbyterians in Newbury with whom I am settled as their Pastor by y<sup>e</sup> Concurrence of y<sup>e</sup> Presbytery of Boston. They are a People constantly harrassed by y<sup>e</sup> Parishes wherein they Dwell on account of Taxes towards the support of those ministers in y<sup>e</sup> Independent Churches on whose ministry they cannot attend; and can't get any relief from y<sup>e</sup> General Court of this Province, tho they have frequently sought for y<sup>e</sup> same, they seem'd very loath to expose the Conduct of the Province in such an affair, & therefore waited with long Patience & went often with prayers to y<sup>e</sup> Assembly. But since they find no Intreaties will prevail, they have, after seeking to y<sup>e</sup> Father of Light for Direction, Unanimously agreed that Duty to God, themselves & their fellow sufferers obliged them to prefer an Humble Address to our gracious Sovereign imploring y<sup>e</sup> Interposition of his Wisdom & Authority & to leave the Event to God.

I am sure you'll allow me to speak a word or two about y<sup>e</sup> People, since it is on such an occasion; and I have had more than four years opportunity to observe them; They appear upon this long acquaintance, to be a kind, well Disposed, peaceable people in General; and a great number of them are in a Judgment of Charity, solid & excellent Christians. Some of them are esteemed y<sup>e</sup> most capable men for Publick Business of any in this Great Town, and even their adversaries thro' necessity are glad to make use of them in y<sup>e</sup> most Difficult Affairs of a Temporall nature which they meet with. And as to their Religion, they are not among y<sup>e</sup> number of those wild, friekish People y<sup>t</sup> are scattered about in some parts of y<sup>e</sup> Country, but seem to be as careful to avoid an ~~A~~piish sort of Religion, as any Congregation that I know. Their withdrawal from y<sup>e</sup> former places of Publick Worship was more than seven years ago, & was then & is still look'd upon Warrantable by some of y<sup>e</sup> most substantial ministers in Town & Country, as I could easily make appear were it needful. And as to their Temporal Circumstances, some of them are, I suppose, as wealthy as any in Newbury, except some of y<sup>e</sup> Church of England. Others are Honest, Industrious People; but some are poor, & particularly we have many Poor Widows, left so by y<sup>e</sup> Death of their Husbands in Cape Breton Expedition. Perhaps we have more Poor Widows than there is in several of y<sup>e</sup> other Congregations in Town put together; for the People tell me it appears by y<sup>e</sup> List that more went from our Congregation upon that Expedition than from all y<sup>e</sup> Congregations besides, altho there are seven Worshipping Assemblies in all besides our Church.

These things in General, I think represent y<sup>e</sup> Disposition, Conduct, & Temporal Circumstances of y<sup>e</sup> People—And these people are drest up in Bear-Skins & worried by their fellow creatures, their money is taken from them, some have their goods sold for a song; their bodies drag'd thro' y<sup>e</sup> Streets & imprison'd with a "Lie you there till you have paid y<sup>e</sup> uttermost farthing." I dont remember to have met with any instances, in y<sup>e</sup> History of New England equal to what I have seen of this nature with my Eyes, except y<sup>e</sup> strange treatment of y<sup>e</sup> Quakers; And it all arises from no other cause than y<sup>e</sup> Lusts of Men; unless the Conscientious Scruples of our people, (all things considered) refusing to help their neighbors support those ministers on whose ministry they never attend, may be called a cause. 'Tis enough to move an heart of Stone to see one's neighbors, but especially to see sober, honest & pious friends, Drig'd about upon y<sup>e</sup> ground, throw'n into Carts or upon Sads & hall'd to Prison by fellow Protestants who have no better claim to Liberty of Conscience than their oppressed Brethren. If I understand our charter, the Usage that I have seen & y<sup>e</sup> Language that at such seasons are not fit to be named among a professing People. My Heart dreads the doleful consequences that must follow such things unless God in Mercy prevent. And can you, Honored Sir, hear a sketch of these things & not exert yourself in favour of y<sup>e</sup> oppressed to y<sup>e</sup> utmost of your power, if God should give you an opportunity? I am sure you cannot. I know your Attachment to Liberty too well, to think you would not do every thing that appear'd proper to be done by you, upon all seasonable opportunities & before all men. I have still a grateful remembrance of your indefatigable efforts with the Court in Connecticut for the Liberty of the People, & Remember y<sup>e</sup> Thanks which y<sup>e</sup> Government gave you for y<sup>e</sup> same. Had some gentlemen laid by all prejudice, a great deal of y<sup>e</sup> Confusions that have arisen about Religion had never been known: Will you, Dear Sir, Nay can you forget y<sup>e</sup> miserable State that your Mother Country is coming into thro oppression, merely from violences used for conscientious scruples in matters of Religion? Now you have crossed the Ocean and are at an higher Board than any here, only look back upon us, & think how many, directly against Charter Privileges, are Rending their fellow servants to pieces, because they dont see with their eyes; Have you the Bowels of a Father & y<sup>e</sup> abilities of a Master? Surely y<sup>e</sup> one will be burned within you, & y<sup>e</sup> other you will make use, for y<sup>e</sup> Relief of Distressed Children! I am persuaded that our gracious Sovereign y<sup>e</sup> King has not any subjects more Dutiful, nor more strictly attached to y<sup>e</sup> House of Hanover than those that are trampled upon in the manner that I have related; and if you should exert yourself in some proper way for their help, I think it will be a clear Evidence of your approving the Happy Establishment in that Illustrious Family; And besides there is Reason to hope that you will do more service for God & your Country by using your Interest and Influence for the redress of this Evil, while you are waiting His Majesty's Pleasure, than you can possibly do in a neglect. I believe you think that Abundance of that wildness which has prevailed in C——t and spread from thence, has been very much owing to y<sup>e</sup> Strange proceedings of some Courts with y<sup>e</sup> People that were called New Lights; and there is Danger in this Province not only on y<sup>e</sup> one hand, of an Increase of y<sup>e</sup> like Evils, but on y<sup>e</sup> other of y<sup>e</sup> most open & growing contempt of all Religion by Multitudes, unless the Lord should help us respecting y<sup>e</sup> article of Liberty & y<sup>e</sup> King's most Excellent Majesty should be most graciously pleased to discharge us from supporting a Ministry which we think is not safe & which we can't in Conscience attend upon. Therefore I beseech you once more, Hon<sup>d</sup> Sir, for God's Sake, for Religion's Sake, & for the sake of y<sup>e</sup> Peace and Happiness of the People that you would (as need may call for it) kindly interpose & help us in these matters; Our Committee have mentioned you to Mr. Parbridge who is Agent for us before the King in Council; & probably he will show you their Letter, if you should have an Inclination to see it.

I wrote to Dr Avery in y<sup>e</sup> Fall of the year, & if he should think worth while to take notice of us, you will be able to let him know who I am, and what you apprehend of me, if you think proper; I ask no favor but y<sup>e</sup> naked Truth, and that you will speak if you say any thing. Herewith I send you a true copy of the Recommendation which Mr Beckwirth drew up, & both y<sup>e</sup> ministers of Lyme sign'd it just as I was taking my Leave of those parts & expected to go & Preach at Newbury where I am since settled. You'll see that y<sup>e</sup> Recommendation refers to a Council which gave me my Liberation. Perhaps you may see some occasion to Improve it, & if not it may lie with other waste paper.

That you may be continued for a Blessing to y<sup>e</sup> World—may be abundantly succeeded at y<sup>e</sup> Court of Great Britain—find much favour in y<sup>e</sup> sight of our Gracious King & be Returned safely to your Native Country for a Greater Blessing than ever, is the Prayer of Hon<sup>d</sup> Sir your most obedient Son & Servant,

Jonathan Parsons.

P. S. Salute Dr. Avery for me and all other Friends.

Yrs ut supra.

Excuse my using a Clerk to write over my Letter from my short hand; The want of Time obliged me to do it.

To Elisha Williams, Esq., London, England.

(Answered by Mr. Williams, August 11, 1750.)

(NOTE.)—"Elisha Williams, Esq.," (to whom the preceding letter was addressed,) was the son of the Rev. William Williams of Hatfield. He was born August 24, 1694, graduated at Harvard College, 1711; studied Divinity with his father, and was ordained as a minister in Newington, in Wethersfield, Conn., October 22, 1722. After his marriage with Eunice Chester of Wethersfield, he studied law and was frequently elected a member of the Legislature from Wethersfield. In 1726 he was installed Rector of Yale College, the duties of which he faithfully discharged until 1739, when ill health obliged him to resign. He returned to Wethersfield and was elected to the Legislature, and appointed Judge of the Superior Court. Afterwards he was appointed Chaplain of the Regiment sent by the State of Connecticut to Cape Breton, and was subsequently appointed to the command of a regiment of one thousand men in an intended expedition against Canada. In December, 1749, he went to England to receive the wages due to himself and his regiment. While there his wife died, and before his return he married Miss Elizabeth Scott, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Scott, of Norwich, England. He returned home in April, 1752, and died 24th, 1755, as will appear by the following inscription in the burial ground at Wethersfield:—

"The Hon<sup>ble</sup> Col<sup>l</sup> Elisha Williams, shin'd in excelling Gifts of Nature, Learning, and Grace, in Benevolence universal. Firm in Friendship, in Conversation pleasant and Instructive. In Religion Sincere, unaffected, cheerful; Truly Humble, of conjugal & Parental Affection, and Humanity. A Wise, Great & Good Man. 5 Years he was an Hon<sup>r</sup> to the Sacred Ministry, in Newington. 13 years Yale College flourished under his Pious, Learned, & Faithful Instruction and happy Govern<sup>t</sup>; the Glory of ye College & Ornament of his Country. He often filled & adorned several Civil & Military Characters. Heaven claimed what was Immortal that Glad obeyed, & cross'd here the Dust to Rest till Jesus comes. Obit 25th July 1755, Ætatis 61 yrs."

Trumbull, in his History of Connecticut, Vol. II., p. 303, says of Mr. Williams: "He was well furnished with academical literature, was a thorough Calvinist, and is characterized as one of the best of men." Dr. Doddridge, in a letter to a friend, writes thus: "I look upon Col. Williams to be one of the most valuable men upon earth; he has joined to an ardent sense of religion, solid learning, consummate prudence, great candor, and sweetness of temper."

He published a Sermon on Divine Grace, 1727. A Sermon on the death of Thomas Ruggles, 1728; and a Pamphlet of 66 pages, entitled "The Essential Rights and Liberties of Protestants."

The Society, of which the Rev. Jonathan Parsons was the first Pastor, had its origin in the time of the great excitement produced by the labors of Edwards, Whitefield and others, one of whom was the Rev. Joseph Adams, who preached to the new Society, consisting at first of only 12 families, until by the advice and commendation of Whitefield, Mr. Parsons was called from Lyme, Conn. (where he had been settled as a Minister from March, 1731, till October, 1745,) to take charge of the new Society. In November of the same year he came to Newbury, and took the Charge of the Congregation in March, 1746, &c. In this Church, which from small beginnings arose to be one of the most numerous on the Continent, Mr. Parsons labored with great diligence and success until his death in 1776, when he was buried by the side of his friend Whitefield, beneath the pulpit which he had for so many years occupied.

MODE OF PROCEEDING IN THE SETTLEMENT OF

*In the early period of Rhode Island's History, from the Records and Files

[Copied for the Register by the Hon. G. A. BRAYTON.]

Warwick the 14th of May 1656

Mr James Greene Walter Tod and Henry Reddocke being desired to scan and value the estate of Robert Potter lately deceased have to the best of our understandings brought in a true inventory of cattels and moveable goods and moneys and we find that it amounts to forty and two pounds and ten shillings besides his housing and lands which we leewe to the consideration of the Counsell to determine as they shall find cause

Also John Potter the sone of Robert Potter late deceased is to be maintained in apparel for four years out of the estate above mentioned.

We also find that the said Robert Potter lately deceased is engaged in New England as appeareth to us to be in debt the sum of Twenty and nyne pounds and twelve shillings besides other uncertaine debts which are not yet brought in

Moreover we find him to be engaged to the wife of Captaine Lawton for twenty pounds borrowed of Capt Lawton in his life time in the year 1646 which is not yet paid with the use annexed for ten years time which likewise we leave to the consideration of the counsell.

Wee the towne Counsell of Warwick being assembled the 15th of february 1695 at the house of Capt Peter Greene upon the application by petition presented unto us by Samuel Stafford and Abraham Lockwood in behalf of the widow Deborah Westcot concerning a controversie raised concerning the estate of Mr Stukely Westcot late of Warwick deceased which estate the abovesaid widow hath been peaceably possessed on several years past, and to make the matter more plainly appeare before the Counsell have produced the last will and testament of the said Stukely Westcot deceased as being proved by three positive testimonies taken before Major John Greene Deputy Governor the first of Novemb<sup>r</sup> 1695 Whereupon the present Town Counsell saw cause to peruse what had bin done by the former Counsell in the year 1677 January the eleventh and upon examination of the matter do find that the Counsell then through a misunderstanding being ignorant of the law of England that approves of a will so made and witnesses thereto although a person be disabled to signe and seal thereunto shall be effectual and also wee being better informed that the town Counsell have not power to dispose of lands in case a person had died intestate But the Counsell taking the matter into their serious consideration concerning the written will bearing date January 12th 1674 and atested before the Deputy Governor John Greene the first of Novemb<sup>r</sup> 1695 by three witnesses We cannot but declare our opinions that it is a sufficient probation thereof

LONGEVITY.—The recent statement of remarkable longevity in the family of the Almys, in Rhode Island—the average age of six of the family being more than 88 years—has called out a statement in regard to the longevity of the children of William Clark of Townsend, Mass. He had twelve children, one of whom died at the age of 16. Of the other eleven, five are now living at ages ranging from 90 to 79 years. The united ages of those who have died and of those who are living is 928 years, and the average for the eleven is 84 years and nearly 5 months.—May 8, 1855.

HARVEY FAMILY.

[From the North Carolina University Magazine for March, 1856. Communicated by Prof. F. M. HUBBARD.]

GENEALOGICAL TABLES.—Among the earliest enactments of the Proprietary Government to be found in Swaim's Revisal (the Yellow Jacket) ch. xxxviii, p. 69, is the Act to appoint Public Registers, &c. The 15th section makes it the duty of the register of every precinct, when there is no clerk of the church in that precinct, "to register all births, marriages and burials, and imposes a penalty of one shilling per month, on every master or mistress of a family, for each month's neglect in supplying the register with the necessary information to enable him to comply with the law upon the subject."

To what extent the law was obeyed by the clerks of the churches and the register of the precinct we have not at present the means of ascertaining. No such register has ever fallen into our hands.

Barren and unmeaning as such lists of names might seem to be at the first glance, they would not be without value in the dearth of materials which exists for the elucidation of the annals of the Proprietary Government, and gentlemen who have possession of such records would perform an acceptable service by transmitting them to the President of the Historical Society of North Carolina.

The only genealogical table of any family in this State, we have ever seen in print, is the subjoined. We give it a place in our pages, not merely to insure (to the extent of our own immortality) its preservation, but for the purpose of attracting attention to this department of historical literature.*

THE GENEALOGY OF THE HARVEY FAMILY IN AMERICA.

John Harvey was Secretary to Governor Jenkins; he settled on Albemarle Sound, the place is now called Harvey's Neck, in Perquimmons County. John Harvey married Elizabeth, the widow of Governor Jenkins; they had one son, Thomas; he married Elizabeth Cole, daughter of Col. Cole; they had four sons, whose names were Thomas, John, Miles and Benjamin. Thomas, their first son, died without marrying. John, the second son, married Mary Bonner of Beaufort; their family consisted of eight children, Thomas, John, Miles, James, Henry, Edward, Martha and Joseph. Thomas, first son of John Harvey and Mary Bonner, married Mary Blount, daughter of Charles Worth Blount and Mary his wife. Their descendants were as follows:—Sarah, who married John Skinner, had two sons; John Harvey, married Lavinia Skinner, had three children; Charles Worth Harvey, married Ann Wyns Gregory, had one son; Mary Harvey, married James Granbery, had three children; Margaret Harvey never married; Thomas Harnet Harvey, married Elizabeth P. Barnes, had two daughters—second, Mary Ann Clayton, had four children; Richard Henry and Joseph Edward,

* A Genealogy without dates is scarcely worth putting in type at all; but we insert this because it is so uncommon to get anything of the kind from the quarter whence this comes.

OLD PEOPLE.

[Communicated by WILLIAM WILLIS.]

By the census of 1850, there were found in Maine 13 persons over 100 years of age; of whom 9 were males and 4 females. This was one to every 44,755 of the population of the State. In New Hampshire and Vermont, the proportion was much larger, being in the former State 11 in a population of 317,456, or one to 28,860; in the latter 8 in a population of 313,402, or one to every 39,175. In the United States I am astonished to find that the proportion of centenarians is much larger than in any of the New England States, being as one to 24,845 among the whites; one to 1,267 free colored, and one to 2,249 of slaves. The aggregates in the United States are 787 whites over 100 years, 343 free colored, and 1,425 slaves.

I have not the means of determining the number of that age of persons now in Maine, and can speak only of two, viz: Father Sawyer, now residing in Bangor, who was born in Hebron, in Conn., Oct. 1755, and consequently is 102½ years old; the other is Mrs. Wilson, who is now living with her son, Col. John M. Wilson, in Oxford county. I have requested Col. Wilson to furnish me an account of his mother, which I think is interesting enough for an article in the newspaper. I therefore offer it you for publication.

Wilson's Mills, Oxford Co., Me., March 17, 1858.

WM. WILLIS, ESQ.:

Dear Sir,—In compliance with your request, I send you the following facts and incidents in relation to the life of my mother, as she has given them mostly from her present recollection.

She was born in Scarborough, County of Cumberland, on the 28th of February, 1756, and is the daughter of Samuel March and Anna Libbey, who kept what was called the March Tavern, in that town. Her father was a native of Kittery, and by trade a shoemaker. He was the representative of the town of Scarborough to the Massachusetts Assembly, at the time of its removal for safety from Cambridge to Salem, and was by that Assembly commissioned as lieutenant-colonel, with orders to raise a regiment for eight months' service; which, on returning home, he accomplished in his own vicinity in about six weeks, the place of rendezvous being at his tavern.

He was ordered the next year to join the north-western army, and served two years, when he became disabled by sickness. He was previously a lieutenant in the French war.

Her mother was the daughter of John Libbey, one of the first inhabitants of Scarborough.

My mother was the fourth of fourteen children—six sons and eight daughters. She is now the only survivor of the family. Three of her brothers served in the army of the Revolution. Her brother, Col. James March of Gorham, who died about thirty years since, served in Portland, then Falmouth, as musician, at the age of fourteen years. Another brother was lost in a private armed vessel from Portland in the war of 1812. Three of her sisters were of the first inhabitants of the town of Limington, whom she often visited by following a spotted line through the woods on horseback, before there was any road above Standish Corner.

Remaining at home until past forty years of age, the chief care of the house—which was much frequented by travellers—devolved upon her during the absence of her father, and the feeble health of her mother. She has a distinct recollection of many incidents of the Revolution, particularly of the destruction of the American fleet at Bagaduce, the retreat from that place through the then wilderness, and the burning of Falmouth. The men returning from Bagaduce received supplies provided by Government at their house. The man who was sent on shore by Capt. Mowatt to set fire to the first parish meetinghouse in Portland, was brought to their house a prisoner on his way to Boston. He was made prisoner by Solomon Bragdon and Major Libbey, who were guarding the meetinghouse. She thinks that if the Committee of Safety had followed the advice of Capt. Thompson, who had made a prisoner of Capt. Mowatt when he was on shore (on the neck then so called) on a gunning excursion, the town would not have been destroyed.

On receiving the threat from Mowatt's lieutenant, that he would open his fire upon the town unless the captain was liberated at a certain hour, Capt. Thompson, who had an impediment in his speech, answered verbally, P-f-fire away! f-f-fire away! every gun you fire I will c-c-cut off a joint!

A British ship, loaded chiefly with fish for the British army at Boston, went ashore in a snow storm on Blue Point, was broken up on the beach, and the fish drifted high upon the shore. The old gentleman who first discovered the wreck, supplied himself liberally, and then informed his neighbors. This was a seasonable relief to the inhabitants, who were at that time in great destitution.

A few incidents will show the privations of those days. My mother, on losing her metal thimble, was obliged to supply its place with a leather one. She had a set of pins which she used for dressing on Sundays and special occasions. They were carefully laid away at other times and thorns used instead of them. A neighbor having obtained a small quantity of coffee, invited her friends to a treat. Coffee-pots being out of the question, an earthen jug was substituted in this case. The coffee was excellent.

In 1797, she became the second wife of my father, Nathaniel Wilson, who had been an officer of the Revolutionary army, serving in a volunteer company raised in Portland, then Falmouth, and commanded by Captain Partridge. He was at the time a major in the Massachusetts militia, and resided in what is now the town of Westbrook. My father having died in 1818, at the age of seventy-eight years, my mother was left to my care, and she has resided with me until this time, for the last twenty-five years in Township No. 5, R. 2, in the County of Oxford, thus being subjected again to privations similar to those of her early life. She is free from disease, cheerful and contented, sensible of gradual decay, waiting patiently for her final change, and relies upon the faith and hope of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. WILSON.

WILL OF MOSES TYLER.

I, Moses Tyler of Andover, in the County of Essex and Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, husbandman, being at present of sound mind and memory, but considering my mortality, have thought meet to make this my last will and testament. And first of all, I commit my soul into the hands of God, who gave it, and my body I commit to the earth in hope of a blessed resurrection at the last day, through the merits of my Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ;—and, as for my worldly estate, which God hath given me, I give and dispose of the same in manner following. As for my sons, Moses, John, Ebenezer, Job, Jonathan, James and Joshua, I have formerly given them their full portions out of my estate according to my ability. Also, I give to my six sons, first mentioned, ten pounds apiece, and to my son, Joshua, the last mentioned, twenty pounds, all which sums are to be paid by my executor in the space of eight years after my decease, and he shall be obliged to pay but ten pounds a year, and shall pay the younger before the elder.

(Item.) I give to my son Jacob all my homestead in Andover and my dwelling house, with all my other buildings, that are upon said homestead, and all my meadows, in Andover, and all my stock of cattle and sheep and swine and household goods, and other moveables. Excepting so much of my household goods, which my second wife brought to me, as shall be left at my decease, which shall be equally divided between my son Jacob and his three sisters, Martha, Katharine and Sarah, and the children of his sisters, Joanna and Abigail deceased; the children of each sister to have one share and my son Jacob shall have the choice of the beds and furniture thereof that was his mothers; and if my son Jacob shall die without issue, lawfully begotten, then the lands, which I have given him in this my will, shall be equally divided among my other sons. And I do hereby constitute, make and ordain my son Jacob the sole executor of this my last will and testament, and if there is any part of my real or personal estate, that I have not disposed of (of) in this my last will and testament, I give it to my said executor, and I do hereby revoke and disannul all and every other will and testament by me made. Ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this ninth day of April, Anno Domini, 1725, and in the eleventh year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, &c.

MOSES TYLER and a Seal.

Signed, sealed and delivered by the said Moses Tyler to be his last will and testament in presence of us the subscribers.

LONG-LOST PRE-REVOLUTIONARY BRITISH SONG,
THE WATERY GOD.—Tune, "Ganges."

The wat'ry God, great Neptune, lay
In dalliance soft and amorous play,
On Amphitrite's breast;
When uproar rear'd her horrid head,
The trident shook, the Nereids fled,
And all their fears confess.

2

Loud thunder shook the vast domain,
The watery world was wrapt in flame,
The god amazed, spoke!
Go forth, ye winds, and make it known,
Who dares to invade my coral throne,
And fill my realms with smoke.

3

The winds, obsequious at his nod,
Sprang quickly up t' obey their god,
And saw two fleets awcigh:
The one, victorious Hawke, was thine;
The other, Confians' wretched line,
In terror and dismay.

4

Then down descend and tell their chief,
That France was ruin'd past relief,
And Hawke triumphant rode;
Hawke! cried the chief, pray who is he,
That dares usurp my power at sea,

5

The winds reply'd, in distant lands
There lives a king, who Hawke commands;
Who spurns all foreign force;
And when his floating castles roll
From sea to sea, from pole to pole,

And when his winged bullets fly,
To punish fraud or perfidy,
Or scourge a guilty land,
Then gallant Hawke, serenely great,
Though death and horror round him wait,
Performs the dread command.

7

Neptune with wonder heard the story
Of GEORGE's rule and Britain's glory,
Which time can ne'er subdue;
Boscawen's deeds and Saunders' fame,
Join'd to great Wolf's immortal name,
And cried, can this be true?

8

A king! he needs must be a god,
Who holds such heroes at his nod,
To conquer earth and sea;
I give my trident and my crown,
A tribute due to such renown;
Great George shall rule for me.

GENEALOGY OF THE MCKINSTRY FAMILY, WITH A PRELIMINARY ESSAY ON THE SCOTCH-IRISH IMMIGRATIONS TO AMERICA.

I. JOHN MCKINSTRY, the first of the name who came to this country, was born in Brode Parish, in the county of Antrim, Ireland, in 1677. He was of Scotch descent, and was the son of Rodger McKinstry and Mary Wilson, who lived in the neighborhood of Edinburgh, until compelled by the persecutions under Charles II., about 1669, to seek security and repose with their Presbyterian brethren in the province of Ulster, and the county of Antrim. Their son John was educated at the University of Edinburgh, from which he graduated Master of Arts in 1712. It may gratify the curious to see the Diploma which that University then granted to its graduates, which we annex in the original language:—

“Ne quem forte habeat cujus scire interest, Nos Universitatis—Jacobi Regis Edinensis Professores Testamur hunc Juvenem Johannem McKinstry Hibernum, Post quam Philosophiæ & Humanioribus Literis ea Morum Integritate et Modestia (quæ Ingenuum decebat Adolescentem) apud. Translation.—“Be it known to all whom it may concern, that we, the Professors of the University of Edinboro’ of King James, testify, that this youth, John McKinstry of Ireland, after having completed the study of philosophy and human literature with the integrity and modesty of manners which is becoming an ingenuous youth, has graduated with us, and is entitled to all the privileges which the course of discipline and the custom of this Academy is accustomed to confer. And now, with the consent of the Faculty and teachers of this College, he is declared a Master in the liberal Arts, and entitled to all the privileges which are wont to be conceded to the Masters of the Good Arts. Of which fact, that there may be greater faith, we, the distinguished Governors, Teachers and Patrons of the University of Edinburgh, have placed our signatures, this 4th Calends of March, 1712.”

How he disposed of himself for the next six years we have no information; he certainly qualified himself for the ministry, and undoubtedly received Presbyterian ordination. He joined the company of emigrants from the north of Ireland in the summer of 1718, and arrived in Boston,

August 4, 1718. He followed the fortunes of that portion of the immigrants which went to Worcester County. He had not long been there before his services were sought by the people of Sutton, a new town near Worcester, the settlement of which had just commenced. At a meeting of the inhabitants, Nov. 25, 1719, it was voted that Mr. McKinstry should preach three months, and have fifteen pounds for the service. In the following March, the town voted to settle Mr. McKinstry, and to pay him £60 a year salary. In pursuance of this and other votes, he was duly settled according to Congregational usage on the 9th of November, 1720. The people were generally Congregationalists, while the pastor, born and educated in rigid Presbyterianism, could not, in his new position, lay aside his attachments to the religious usages of his life. Difficulties therefore arose soon after his settlement, on these opposite views of church government, which produced continued uneasiness in the parish, and led to a separation in September, 1728. Mr. McKinstry concluded to join his brethren of the same denomination in New York. On his way thither, his wife's health failing, he rested at East Windsor in Connecticut. The parish in the eastern precinct of the town, afterwards called Ellington, having no preacher, he was requested to supply the pulpit. This circumstance resulted in a suspension of his journey southward, and a settlement over that parish, as its first pastor, in 1733. He continued in this situation sixteen years, and remained in the town until his death, which took place on Sunday, January 20, 1754, at the age of 77 years. He preached on the Sunday previous to his death. Mr. McKinstry is said to have been a gentleman of good abilities, of popular talents, and unwavering integrity, a quality belonging to the family. His wife died Oct. 25, 1762, aged 81.

Soon after his settlement in Sutton, he married Elizabeth Fairfield, of Wenham, Mass., probably a daughter of William Fairfield, who represented his town in the General Court twenty-seven years, in nine of which he was Speaker of the House. By her he had seven children, viz.:—JOHN, b. Dec. 31, 1723; MARY, b. Jan. 24, 1726; ALEXANDER, b. May 16, 1729; WILLIAM, b. Oct. 8, 1732; PAUL, b. Sept. 18, 1734; ELIZABETH, b. May 27, 1736; ABIGAIL, b. March 26, 1739: all at Ellington but the first two.

Elizabeth and Abigail died unmarried, the latter in Ellington, in April, 1814. Elizabeth was killed by a negro servant of her brother William, June 4, 1763, while she was visiting him in Taunton. The negro was fond of Elizabeth, but had been made to believe that he could obtain his freedom by killing some one of the family. He therefore took an opportunity, when his victim's back was towards him, and struck her a fatal blow on the back of her head with a flat-iron. Much excitement was produced in that quiet village and throughout the county by this sad event; and a great crowd attended upon his trial and execution, which soon after followed.

The other five children were married and left issue, as we proceed to describe:—

II. JOHN, eldest son of Rev. John of Ellington, born in Sutton, December 31, 1723; was graduated at Yale College in 1746; was a classmate and cousin of Ezra Stiles, afterwards the distinguished President of the College. Students at that time were placed on the catalogue according to the rank of their parents; McKinstry was placed fourth in a class of twelve; he survived all his classmates by fifteen years, and died Nov. 9, 1813, at the age of 90. He was ordained the first pastor of the 2nd Church in Springfield, now Chicopee, Mass., in 1752; the church was formed in September of the same year. He continued the active pastor of the Church and Society until 1789, when he was released from preaching, but discharged other duties of the pastorate until his death. His salary for the first ten years was £45 lawful money; this was raised to £62 and fire wood, and "a load of pine knots yearly to study by." After being relieved from preaching, his salary was reduced to £18. In 1760, he married Eunice Smith of Suffield, Conn., who died Sept. 20, 1820. They had seven children, viz.: JOHN ALEXANDER, b. 1760; EUNICE THEODOSIA, b. 1762; ELIZABETH LUCY, b. 1765; ARCHIBALD, b. 1767; ROGER AUGUSTUS, b. 1769; PERSEUS, b. 1772; CANDACE, b. 1774. The latter, and only survivor, is living unmarried in Chicopee (1858.) The other children died without issue, except Roger Augustus, and Perseus, at Chicopee, as follows, viz:—

II. WILLIAM, the third son and fourth child of John of Ellington, was born Oct. 8, 1732. He was a physician, and settled in Taunton, Mass. On Nov. 27, 1760, he married Priscilla, daughter of the Rev. Nathaniel Leonard, pastor of the 1st Church in Plymouth, Mass., and Priscilla, daughter of Dr. Nathaniel Rogers and Sarah Appleton of Ipswich. By her he had ten children, viz: <sup>1</sup> WILLIAM, b. Nov. 13, 1762; he graduated at Oxford University, Eng.; became Rector of East Grinstead and Lingfield, near London; was tutor to children of several noblemen, whom he accompanied in their travels on the continent. He was a good scholar and a polished gentleman, and died on a visit to this country, unmarried, in August, 1823. <sup>2</sup> PRISCILLA, b. Aug. 25, 1765; married John Hazen of New Brunswick, and had a large family. <sup>3</sup> SARAH, b. Aug. 14, 1767; married Major Caleb Stark, son of Gen. John Stark, and had a numerous family. <sup>4</sup> JOHN, b. March 6, 1769, a merchant in Boston several years; died unmarried Oct. 29, 1825. <sup>5</sup> MARY and <sup>6</sup> THOMAS, twins, b. Aug. 17, 1770. Thomas d. unmarried in 1796. Mary, married Benjamin Willis of Haverhill, Portland and Boston, Jan. 9, 1791, and had eight children. <sup>7</sup> ELIZABETH, b. Oct. 26, 1772; married to Samuel Sparhawk of Portsmouth and Concord, N. H., Secretary of that State, in 1803, by whom she had several children. <sup>8</sup> DAVID, b. 1775, and d. unmarried in New York, a merchant, in March, 1802.

They had two other children, viz: William, born and died Nov. 13, 1761; and John, who died Dec. 21, 1768, in the fifth year of his age. All in Taunton.

Dr. McKinstry had a successful business in Taunton, in 1774, although he had a feeble constitution and a consumptive habit. The Rev. Mr. Emery, in his "Ministry of Taunton," says of Dr. McKinstry, "He was a person of highly respectable personal and professional character." At that time a Capt. Gilbert, suspected of tory principles, was seized and so roughly handled by the "sons of liberty," that it became necessary to have a surgeon to dress his wounds. He protested against having a rebel doctor, but was willing that Dr. McKinstry should attend him. This suggestion excited suspicions against this amiable and popular physician. He became the subject of offensive remark, and was exposed to insult and injury. Being in feeble health and of a sensitive nature, which could not bear hard usage nor a suspected position, he thought it advisable to retire for a time to Boston. His family, which was left in Taunton, was now subject to increased annoyance. His wife, a finely educated and high spirited woman, of elegant manners, was compelled, by a large collection of females, to march around the liberty pole. She was niece of the Hon. George Leonard of Norton, and cousin of Daniel Leonard, a refugee, and afterwards chief justice of Bermuda.

This last act of insult decided the question with the family, who, not being able to enjoy repose upon their native soil, were forced to become loyalists in self defence, and they immediately joined the husband and father in Boston. So high was Dr. McKinstry's reputation in his profession, that he received from Gen. Gage the appointment of surgeon general of the hospitals in Boston.

It so happened that on the memorable 17th of June, 1775, a dinner party took place at Dr. McKinstry's house, for which invitations had been given out the day before. The dinner proved to be a solemn and silent one, and was partaken standing. Several officers were present who had been detailed to proceed with detachments of the British army to dislodge the rebels from Bunker Hill. They hastily dined and proceeded to join their corps; among them was Major John Small, a friend of the family, whose name is identified with that momentous battle. Dr. McKinstry's house stood on Hanover Street, near where the Shawmut House now is, and the children went to the top of the house to witness the cannonade. Sarah, one of them, little dreamed that, in after-years, she would become the wife of a gallant stripling of 16, who was then fighting in the opposing ranks, by the side of his veteran father, the renowned John Stark. Twelve years after, she was wedded to that gallant soldier, Caleb Stark. Another daughter, Mary, might also have been a distant witness to the flight from the flames of Charlestown of her future husband, Benjamin Willis, a native of that devoted town, who, with his mother, was compelled to make a hasty retreat, without a backward look to their perishing property.

When Boston was evacuated, Dr. McKinstry and his family went on board the fleet, which lay ten days in Nantasket Roads waiting orders. During that time, viz., March 21, 1776, Dr. McKinstry died of consumption, on board the Dutton hospital ship, and his remains lie buried on George's Island, in that harbor.

The surviving members of the family were taken in the fleet to Halifax, and were on board the same ship with lady Howe, wife of the Admiral, where they were treated with that sympathy and kindness their unhappy condition required. The fleet took away about one thousand refugees. The family remained in Halifax, with the exception of William, the eldest son, until 1778, when they returned to the States, making Newport, R. I., their place of residence, during its occupation by the British. After its evacuation, they proceeded to Haverhill, in Mass., where a sister of Mrs. McKinstry, the wife of John White, Esq., lived; and she died there, May 26, 1786, honored and loved.

Rev. WILLIAM,<sup>3</sup> died at Concord, N. H., August 28, 1823, aged 61.

JOHN,<sup>3</sup> died in Ohio, Oct. 29, 1825, aged 56.

THOMAS,<sup>3</sup> died at sea, 1796, aged 26, the vessel never heard from.

DAVID,<sup>3</sup> died in New York, in March, 1802, of consumption, aged 27.

III. The Rev. WILLIAM MCKINSTRY,<sup>3</sup> son of Dr. William,<sup>1</sup> entered the naval service of Great Britain at the commencement of the revolution. In an engagement with an American privateer, in 1776, he lost his right hand and was shot overboard. He contrived to keep himself above water until the battle was over, when he was relieved from his critical situation. This changed the current of his life, and instead of becoming a naval officer, he became an episcopal clergyman, a cultivated scholar, and a gentleman of refined manners. He happened to be on the continent, and at a hotel in Munich, when Gen. Moreau arrived at the same hotel, in a most unpretending style, to take charge of the French army in that neighborhood. In a few days after was fought the celebrated battle of Hohenlinden, and Mr. McKinstry, with the poet Thomas Campbell, had the good fortune to be near the scene of the combat; a cannon ball struck near the spot where they were standing, which rather discomposed the nerves of the poet. Mr. McKinstry had seen the article before. Campbell's immortal poem commemorates this most bloody passage of arms.

We will dispose of this branch of the family by a brief notice of descendants in the female line, all of whom married and left children.

[Samuel Hooker died November 5, 1697.]

January 6, 1668. It was voted by the church assembled at Deacon Hart's, that with respect to the Sacrament, each brother of the Church should send into the Deacon's a pack of wheat, or the worth of a shilling in current pay, for the defraying of the next Sacrament, as also, for the clearing off that little which according to the Deacon's report, was yet due for the Sacrament already past, as also, that for the future, every brother of the Church should for each Sacrament allow 6d,—except such of the brethren whose wives come not to the Supper, because not members of the Church; and to them it was permitted to put in 3d or sixpence, whichever they pleased, for each Sacrament.

June 15, 1673. The Church at Farmington assembled at Deacon Hart's, to attend the admission of James Bird. After the examination of his knowledge, and a brief narration given by the said James, of his experience,—the mind of the Church was taken. About 8 brethren voted for his admission, three against it. The major part by much, chose to suspend acting either way; but the major part of the active brethren voting his admission. Both those brethren which voted against him, as also those who neutralized, did agree that they reported it most regular that he should be accepted.

Whereupon, the Pastor told the said James, that the Church did expect of those that joined, and consequently of him, that he should promise to submit to the government of Christ in his house, walk with his brethren; and fear, and keep all the commandments of God, as far as Christ should enable.

To which the said James returned,—that as some time of old [so be in the present case] as the Lord liveth, I will not close with you thus; and so departed the house; and as he was going forth, added—I desire you to take care of my wife.

Upon which the Pastor concluded the meeting with prayer, and the assembly departed.

So that the said James, seeing so many of the brethren to hesitate and rescind, refused to close and unite with the Church; but to stand a non-member, as he was.

October 3, 1675. Capt. Lewis and Lef't Steele having twice forsaken the assembly, and turned away from the Church, when celebrating the Lord's Supper, and Mr. Wrotham once,—the Pastor commended it to the consideration of the Church, what was duty in the case.

The same day it was voted, that in case a member in full communion shall turn away from the Supper, and the Church in the celebration of it, that such a member be accountable, or shall be held bound, when called on, to give the reason of his so doing.

From this vote none dissented by voting the negative, (to my observation,) except Capt. Lewis.

At the same meeting the Pastor declared his judgment concerning such as turn away unnecessarily from the Lord's Supper,—namely, that he judged them to sin dangerously,—

1st. Because they brake the second command, which requireth us to wait on Christ with constancy and perseverance in all the duties of his worship, as be given opportunity. Now one part of instituted worship is the celebration of the Lord's Supper.

2d. Because they brake the Covenant with Christ and with the Church; for in our Covenant, we have promised to walk with Christ and one with another, in seeking and keeping all his commands,—one of which is, "Do this in remembrance of me."

3d. It is very dangerous, since thereby such are guilty of despising the body and blood of Christ, (1st Cor. chap. 11.) As he that eateth and drinketh unworthily because he despiseth, is guilty; so he that turneth away unnecessarily is guilty for the same reason.

4th. Under the law, he that unnecessarily forsook the Passover, was to be cut off from his people. So in new Testament times, he that unnecessarily forsakes the Supper which is come in room of the passover, exposeth himself to great danger.

To the 2d part,—whoever, brethren, forsaketh that part of the worship of God,—turning away from the Supper and the Church in the celebration thereof, were accountable for their so doing, i. e. were bound or obliged in case the reason of their so doing was not obvious and apparent, when called to render it.

Here the Pastor desired that if any were of that mind, that brethren were unaccountable, they would express themselves, and give the reason of their apprehension. [He was however moved and should give his reason, but it does not mind me to preoccupy or prejudice the liberty of any. To this purpose spake the Pastor.]

No brother seconding, he declared his apprehension concerning the duty of brethren in the case forenamed, that they were [reasonable,] and obliged to render the reason of their forsaking the Church and house of God, in case that the reasons were not obvious and apparent. The reasons the Pastor gave were two.

1st. I first take from the 1st of Corinthians, 10th chapter, 32d verse, "Give no offence." Now, if brethren openly forsake the Church of which they are members, and with which they are bound in [aidening] to walk in conscience and the worship of God;—the reason of their so doing not being apparent, an account, or rendering the reasons of their so doing, is necessary to their inoffensive walk.

2d. The second reason, taken from 1st Corinthians, 14th chapter, 33d verse,—“God is not the author of confusion;”—but that was, if withdrawing and rendering no reason, when called on, very unaccountable;—

did, of its own nature, tend to confusion, and to lay prostrate the worship of God among us. If brethren may from time to time do so, then 10, 20 may do so, and thus the worship of God may be laid desolate, with us, and no way of healing left;—for the reason not being known, and so the or case not being understood, could not be remedied.

On October 28, 1675. The Church had further consideration of the matter, and because of an exception put in by Lieut. Steele against a particular account, it was considered and debated whether a general account would reach the end intended in getting an account, now as the general account may be fraught with enough offence, and render hearing impossible.

Whereupon, the Church came to this vote: which was their mind,—that those that turned away from the Supper and the of the Church, therein,—and the grounds of their so doing, not being apparent, were obliged to give such an account as should evince or evidence that their withdrawing was necessary, or they under necessity to turn away.

To this none dissented; only Capt. Lewis propounded, whether it were not the Church should forbear bringing to an issue of that case at this time,—because more of the brethren were not at the meeting, or to that purpose.

The Church having considered the desires of their brethren, William, Thomas, John and Benjamin Judd,—as, also, John Standley, Jun., touching their removal from us to Mattabuck, agreed as followeth:—

1. In general. That considering the divers difficulty and inconveniences which attend the place toward which they are looking, and how hazardable it may be, (for aught that appeareth,) that the house and ordinances of Christ may not, (of a large time at least,) be settled among them,—the Church doth advise the brethren, to be wary of engaging far, until some comfortable hopes appear of being suited for the inward man, in the great things forementioned.

2. Particularly. To our brother William Judd,—that it having pleased God to deal so bountifully with him, that not many of the brethren with us have so large accommodations as himself, yet see not his call to remove on the account of straightness for outward subsistence,—and therefore counsel him,—if it may be with satisfaction to his spirit,—to continue his abode with us,—hoping God will bless him in so doing.

3. To the rest. Though we know not how much they will be bettered as to land, all things considered, by their removal,—especially John and Benjamin Judd, and therefore cannot much encourage,—yet, if the bent of their spirits be strong for going, and the advice aforegiven, touching the worship of God, be taken,—we shall not trouble,—but say,—the will of the Lord be done.

GENEALOGICAL MEMOIR OF THE FAMILY OF REV. NATHANIEL ROGERS, OF IPSWICH, MASS., 1636.

(155.) MR. FOSTER was an intimate friend of Gen. Washington, whose miniature likeness on ivory, a gift from him, is in possession of one of Mr. F.'s descendants.

A fair estimate of Mr. Foster's character, and an interesting incident connected with some of his neighbors and constituency, may be found in a letter written to a friend in New York, 1846, by the late Hon. Daniel Webster:—

"Of a hot day (says Mr. W.) in July—it must have been one of the last years of Washington's administration—I was making hay, with my father, just where I now see a remaining elm tree, about the middle of the afternoon. The Hon. ABIEL FOSTER, M. C., who lived in Canterbury, six miles off, called at the house, and came into the field to see my father. He was a worthy man, college learned, and had been a minister, but was not a person of any considerable natural powers. My father was his friend and supporter. He talked awhile in the field and went on his way. When he was gone, my father called me to him and we sat down beneath the elm, on a hay cock. He said, 'My son, that is a worthy man—he is a member of Congress—he goes to Philadelphia and gets six dollars a day, while I toil here. It is because he had an education, which I never had. If I had had an early education I should have been in Philadelphia in his place—I came near it as it was, but I missed it, and now I must work here.' 'My dear father,' said I, 'you shall not work; brother and I will work for you and wear our hands out, and you shall rest;' and I remember to have cried, and I cry now at the recollection. 'My child,' said he, 'it is of no importance to me—I now live but for my children—I could not give your older brother the advantages of knowledge, but I can do something for you. Exert yourself; improve your opportunities—learn—learn—and, when I am gone, you will not need to go through the hardships which I have undergone, and which have made me an old man before my time.' The next May he took me to Exeter, to the Phillips Academy, and placed me under the tuition of its excellent preceptor, Dr. Benjamin Abbott, still living."

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GEN. HENRY BURBECK,

Dated New London, March 8th, 1848, addressed to Col. Samuel Swett, of this city.

[Notice of the death of Gen. Burbeck will be found in the Register, Vol. III., p. 101. He died in New London, Oct. 2d, 1848, a. 94.—Ed.]

You express a wish to know something concerning my father's history. He was from the humble walks of life, by trade a carver. If you wish to see a specimen of his work, call at the King's Chapel, (opposite the Tremont House); the Corinthian capitals of the pillars, &c., were all done under his direction. There was a vacancy happened at "Old Castle William," of the second officer, or gunner, (then so called,) about 1760, which he applied for and obtained. Being very diffident and of a retiring habit, but fond of reading and study, by close application he made himself a proficient in mathematics and teacher in gunnery. He next applied himself to artillery and its different branches, and having obtained Muller's works, he made great proficiency in artillery, in short a complete master in every branch of its apparatus; also in pyrotechnics in which he was very competent in his day. He prepared the fire-works for the celebration of the Stamp Act, which was considered a great work at that period; wheels, rockets, &c., never were better.

He received an appointment, (or rather, made an agreement,) with his friend, Dr. Warren, in 1774, who was "Chairman of the Committee of Safety," that in case hostilities commenced with Great Britain he should join the American standard; and it was further stipulated that he should receive for life the same pay and emoluments he then received, provided we obtained and established our Independence. The contract was always fulfilled by the State, and he received the pay to his death. I cannot inform you of the date of the agreement, but I presume it was in the fall of 1774. There was a third person, who I generally supposed was Col. Gridley, (but secrets could be and were kept at that day;) this is only a supposition of mine. My father was to superintend the laboratory and artillery and see that everything was prepared for service. I can say without fear of contradiction that then there was no man more capable in this country. My father came up from Castle William in his own canoe to receive his quarterly payment, which happened on the day of the battle of Lexington; he did not return. The next day the cockswain of the boat, (a sergeant,) came to the bouse, by order of Col. Leslie, to bring him down, but he had gone out. My father soon met with Mr. Harry Williams, who lived on Noddle's Island, (now East Boston,) who asked him if he wished to leave the town; he answered, Yes, but he knew of no way or means to accomplish it, as all communication was stopped both by land and water. Williams had free access to cross to the ships and Boston as he supplied them with milk, vegetables, &c. To make the story short, Harry Williams told him if he would disguise himself and come down to where his boat landed, about one o'clock at noon, (at which time all the mechanics, &c., were at dinner and not so likely to be observed,) and row his bow-oar over to the Island, he would run the risk and land him safe. He did so and crossed to the Island for Chelsea, from thence to Cambridge, and hired a carpenter's shop on the northeast side of Cambridge Common to prepare ammunition. My father was appointed ordnance storekeeper when the British took possession of old "Castle William," in the fall of 1770; before that, it was a State garrison and supported as such by the State. The Lieutenant Governor was always the captain, and the pay was considered a part of his emoluments. After the peace of 1783, Old Castle William went back to the State, and my father commanded until his death, which took place in 1785.

At the close of 1775, Col. Gridley, from infirmity and age, declined accepting the command of the Massachusetts regiment of artillery. My father being the lieutenant colonel it was right and of course offered to him; but being nearly sixty years of age and nothing of a military man about him, (rather a quaker in manner and appearance,) declined and recommended Knox in the strongest terms, and the latter being known to the State was readily accepted with, and a happy choice it was to the regiment, State and country; he was an officer highly appreciated by Washington, for his talents and soldier-like conduct during the whole of the Revolutionary war. When the army marched from Cambridge, in 1776, my father thought he was bound by his contract made with the State if they required his services to remain; he resigned and remained with the State. Gen Washington was much disappointed and disapproved of his conduct.

AN EXTRACT FROM A SERMON

[Communicated by W. GREENOUGH WHITE.]

The Reverend Francis Gardner was born at Stow, February 29, 1736. He was son of a minister of that town, still remembered for the soundness of his understanding; for fidelity in his sacred office; and for exemplary piety. In 1755, the deceased received a degree at the University in Cambridge, and always retained a profound respect for that ancient seminary of learning and piety. Having spent some years in study, with a view to the work of the ministry, he gave the evidence which is desirable that he was qualified for being "an able minister of the New Testament." On December 22, 1762, he was ordained as a minister in this town. It was a time* when a series of perplexing difficulties had produced much excitement, and when the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove were peculiarly needed in a spiritual guide. Ample testimony is preserved of the diligence, circumspection, independence and firmness which marked his conduct, and how he walked amongst the parties who had been in controversy "as a nurse cherisheth her children." He possessed a talent for colloquial intercourse which rendered him highly estimable in private life. This enabled him with ease and familiarity to impart useful instructions and counsel. He left with each person who heard him an impression of the advantage which the Christian cause derives from "the priest's lips keeping knowledge."

As an adviser in cases of controversy he was happily free from precipitancy and prejudice. He had a single eye to the investigation of truth, to the dispensing of justice, and to the promoting of "pure and undefiled religion." In forming and preaching his religious principles I have always considered him, in some respects, a model for all ministers and Christians.

LETTER OF GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Dear Sir

A person of the Name of Patterson (an Inhabitant of Wilmington) can give you a particular Account of the Situation Strength &c. of the Enemy at that place; from whence you may judge of the practicability of attempting something by way of Surprise (if your numbers are adequate) upon the Garrison. After having made every necessary enquiry proper for an Enterprize of this kind let me know the result by an Officer, and whether the undertaking is feasible, with or without, a little aid from hence.

Your Enquiries into these matters should be made with much Circumspection, to avoid giving Alarm—And your Manœuvres should be towards the Enemy, and retrograde occasionally, to lull them into security, unless your own strength is sufficient to effect the work, in that case the rapidity of the attempt may perhaps contribute to the Success of it.

You will readily perceive that nothing herein is positive, but altogether discretionary; to be undertaken or not as Circumstances & Information shall warrant. If a Successful Blow could be aimed at Wilmington, very happy consequences would result from it, besides possessing ourselves of the wounded which now are there, for the purpose of exchanging for such Prisoners of ours as are in the Enemy's hands—but in the midst of this, it is not to be forgotten, that one great Object of your Expedition is to deprive the Enemy of Supplies from Chester County, & to interrupt their Convoys from Chester Town, Wilmington &c., whilst our Defence upon the River obliges them to have recourse to a transportation of Necessaries by land from their Shipping—Watch the communication between Philad<sup>a</sup>. & the Enemy's Shipping, well, & let me hear from you frequently, especially on the Subject of the proposed Expedition—Patterson can point out others to you (Inhabitants of Wilmington) who he thinks would give every Aid in their power; but then, danger may attend the Communication of the Scheme to too many—If an Idea was thrown out that the Corps you command was the Eastern Shore Militia returning, it might possibly remove a Suspicion of the real design, if it should be found practicable to make an attempt upon the Enemy at Wilmington with your troops alone. I am Dear Sir

BOOK NOTICES.

A History of East Boston; with Biographical Sketches of its Early Proprietors, and an Appendix. By WILLIAM H. SUMNER, A. M. Boston: 1858. 8vo. pp. 801.

Persons who have only seen the outside of General Sumner's book, have exclaimed, at least some of them, "What in the world can there be about East Boston to require so large a volume." It is true that East Boston was of but small account, comparatively speaking, until a very recent period. But let any one open this work anywhere, and read but a few lines, and he will see that he is not in a beaten path; and it will be safe to say that there has not appeared a local history of late with a greater proportion of original matter.

During most of the time General Sumner has been engaged upon his work, he has labored under the disadvantage of ill-health, and has been obliged to employ several persons to aid him on different parts of it. This may account for a seeming inequality in those parts. But, in the collection of his materials, he has been very fortunate in being able to avail himself of the labors of that industrious and scrupulously accurate antiquary, Mr. William B. Trask of Dorchester. He was also assisted by the quick and ready hand of Mr. Samuel Barnham; and in carrying the work through the press he had the valuable and efficient assistance of his friend and neighbor, the Rev. Mr. A. H. Quint.

Notwithstanding the author has been suffering from increasing infirmities during the several years which he has been employed upon his history, his clear and judicious mind is traced throughout the work. As much as we have studied the history of Boston, and the sources of its materials, we confess we were surprised to find so much entirely new to us. General Sumner had preserved, with great care, all the papers relating to Noddles Island which had fallen in his way by accident, or which his business transactions had produced. By the most careful comparison of these materials, he has been able to lay before us numerous new items of great interest and importance, and, at the same time, to correct many errors long ago committed by historical writers, and perpetuated by later ones.

Important Boston families, hitherto almost unknown, except by name, now occupy a prominence in the history of the metropolis which hitherto they had not enjoyed, but to which they were eminently entitled. There are the Mavericks, the Shrimptons, the Yeamanses, the Hyslops, Williamses, Montforts, Temples, &c., &c. The first white occupant of Noddle's Island was Mr. Samuel Maverick, son of Mr. John Maverick, an early minister of Dorchester. This gentleman was a man of much consequence in the first years of the Colony. Concerning him and his family General Sumner has published much that is new, and set his character and standing in their proper light. He was most unjustly abused and vilified in his time, and it is surprising that there are some, in our time, who pretend to investigate, and yet revive the old cry of "bad man" against him, without any of the motives which influenced his early slanderers.

A fine feature of General Sumner's book is its numerous illustrations—nearly all of which are now for the first time published. Facing the title-page is an admirable likeness of the author. We next have a plan of the island in 1801; portraits of Samuel Shrimpton, Elizabeth Shrimpton, Simeon Stoddard, David Stoddard, John Yeamans, Shute Shrimpton Yeamans, Governor Sumner, Mrs. Elizabeth Sumner, Henry Howell Williams, and General Gage. These are all from paintings in the author's possession. Then there are fine views of the Starveant House, Church of the Holy Cross, and Map of East Boston in 1858. There are also many facsimiles of autographs and other engravings. The work has a most excellent INDEX.

An Historical Account of American Coinage. By JOHN H. HICKCOX, Member of the Albany Institute. With Plates. Albany, N. Y.: 1858. 8vo. pp. 151.

We have here an exceedingly beautiful specimen of a book in all respects—paper, type, plates and so forth. When our readers are told that it is from the press of Mr. Munsell, they will doubtless say, "We had a right to expect this."

A work on the coinage of this country was very much wanted. It fills a place in our libraries hitherto vacant. Mr. Hickcox says, in his preface, "The design of this work is, to give an account of the legally authorized coinage of the United States of America, during the periods of their colonial history and their existence as a united republic. Nothing as comprehensive has heretofore been attempted, nor is there any separate publication on either our colonial or federal coinage. The materials have been collated by consulting early periodical, congressional and legislative documents and other works, and through an extensive correspondence with gentlemen in other States."

Our limits will not allow of any extended analysis of Mr. Hickcox's work. But we heartily recommend it as a manual of great value in a department where it will stand almost alone. We are surprised that but an edition of two hundred is printed.

Records of the Colony of New Plymouth in New England. Printed by order of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Vols. 1—6. [Bound in four.] Boston: Printed by William White. 1855-6.

[The following notice of the Plymouth Colony Records has been handed us, but as it is not such a notice as we had intended to write for the Register, we submit it with a few words of prefatory remarks. Our correspondent, as will be seen, expresses himself a little ironically, and seems disposed to treat the subject rather too lightly; while we hold that a work which has cost the State above two hundred thousand dollars! is not a very light matter, and deserves, at least, serious consideration. In another volume we have incidentally spoken of the Massachusetts Colony Records, and intended to speak directly of the whole, when they should be finished. That time has arrived, so far as respects our present purpose.]

In the first place, we have the Massachusetts Colonial Records, in six volumes, though, in the most hanging manner, called, or divided and lettered, as five. For this perplexing sort of a division we are wholly unable to account. Was it to make the number of printed volumes correspond to the original manuscript volumes of records? If so, nothing could be more absurd. By the same rule, we might have had twenty volumes where we have but five, or even but one volume, if our records had happened to be in one large volume. Some people have the remarkable faculty of failing in all practical undertakings. The form in which these records are printed is about as objectionable. They are neither quarto nor folio, but a sort of betwixt and between form—illly suited as books of reference. And then the paper! Who ever heard of printing books for use on such paper? It is no more suited to the work than bonnet board is for a child's spelling-book. Now all this work together—making six volumes read as five, putting them into such a form, printing them on such paper—shows the manager of the matter to have been utterly unworthy of any such trust. It is perfectly obvious that that vain and ambitious individual cared for nothing but a hobby by which he could make a dazzling and ostentatious display out of the money of the Commonwealth, on which he could ride into political position. But, fortunately for him as well as the people, in this expectation he signally failed, as every unscrupulous demagogue should fail.

One of the most astonishing follies of the publication of our colonial records is, that the work should have been stereotyped! This was unnecessary in every view which can be taken of the matter. A fair edition would have supplied all wants for at least fifty years. Suppose, at the end of fifty years, an edition to be wanted—calculate the interest on the cost of this job, and see what the figures are! On the score of economy it was exceeding bad policy to stereotype these records. They should never be republished as they now are; hence the stereotype plates are of no value, or only of the value of type metal. That they never ought to be used can be made clearly manifest; for, if ever the records are republished, they should be edited. Indeed, they never ought to have been issued without being edited. This elicits the remark that it is a pity any one should attempt to impose on his readers by endeavoring to make them think a work is edited when there is no editing about it; unless reading the proofs, writing a page or so of preface, explanatory of abbreviations, (which never had ought to have been used,) and displaying his name and titles in the title-page.

We have said the work should have been edited. By editing, we mean its text should have been elucidated by notes founded upon original papers, and the original papers themselves should have been brought in whenever practicable. This was the only way to make them fully useful. Why was this not done? There has been more than enough money lavished in this job to have secured proper editing. But, instead of editing the records, the manager of the job had other work on hand. It would have required a close application to the old documents in the State archives, (and there are enough of them there,) and required his undivided attention to them. Had this been done by a competent person, we should have—not a meagre legislative record—but a record which may be compared to a beautiful river, with golden sands at the bottom. We know there are thousands of old papers which ought to be used in this work. They are generally, or at least very often, of far greater value than the mere record.

We have said the manager had other work on hand than bringing to light gems of this kind. He had log-rolled himself into a fat job, and now he used nearly all his time to log-roll into another and more important one. His failure we have stated. No personal remarks are intended in this notice, but so much was necessary to be stated that the readers of the Register may understand what the State of Massachusetts has published and what it might or ought to have published.

An expense to the State of some two hundred thousand dollars for the publication of its records, we repeat, is not a trifling matter. In proper hands, that sum would give us the records as they should, and must, at some day, appear. The work of printing must be done over again before it will be what is wanted. About twelve thousand five hundred dollars was taken by the manager of this job for alleged services performed upon it during some four years. This was not all. He laid his hands upon some eighty copies of the work for his own use. These copies, or the most of them, probably, he gave away! What did he do this for? To whom did he give them? We shall not take upon us to say he gave them to secure the votes of some, and to stop the mouths of others who he feared would or might expose him. But we have our opinion, and it is a pretty fixed one, so far as regards this matter.

We believe, that by law, this editor was entitled to but one copy of the published records. Now, if he took more than that, he committed a crime for which he ought to suffer. For a much less one hundreds now lay, deprived of liberty, in this Commonwealth. So equally are our laws administered!

We have been particular in speaking of these records, because they are a part of the corner-stone of the history of all New England; and when unskilful hands are employed upon such a piece of masonry, it is the duty of a New England man to protest against such quackery—for a greater piece of literary quackery than this practised upon our Colonial records, we have not met with.

Perhaps it may be said that the authorities under whom this quackery was practised deserve a rebuke, also. They undoubtedly do, and they got it at the ballot-box some-time ago. Thanks to the returning common sense of the people, the demagogues have been "sconced from the temple." A new order of things exists. The work of superintending the publication of the records is in other hands. A gentleman now fills the office of superintendent on a salary of eleven hundred dollars—the same gentleman on whom the former manager depended for all difficult labor in the department of the records. But we candidly confess that it is our opinion that Mr. Pulsifer (the present conductor) is too poorly paid for his labor, making the old proverb true, namely, that "one extreme usually follows another."

Let it not be supposed, by these remarks, that we have met with any disappointment respecting the matter of these records. We had no "axe to grind" there. We never applied for, or even wished for any finger in that pie. No political scramble ever tempted us, and we never had any ambition for office or its spoils. But we claim to know something of the duties of those who meddle with our ancient records, and if they do not perform those duties as we think they ought, they must expect our displeasure. We speak with confidence, because we know we speak the mind of every honest man in the community who takes any interest in our early history. We hope not to have further occasion to refer to this subject. If we do, we shall feel compelled to exercise less forbearance than on this occasion. Robberies committed against the State are more nefarious than when committed against single individuals—because, in the one case they generally go unpunished, while in the other they are pretty sure to get their reward.

Finally, we have no sympathy with robbers of any sort, and very little with those who hold fellowship with them. A continuation of fellowship with individuals of that class is to countenance rascality, and thereby lower the standard of public morals.]

Six large and beautifully printed volumes, edited by Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, M. D. (asking the editor's pardon for stopping, we must make a little digression.) It seems that, on the 26th of March, 1855, Ephraim M. Wright, Secretary of the Commonwealth, appointed Dr. N. B. Shurtleff to prepare for the press these Records, and superintend the printing of the same to their completion.

Let us see. Dr. Shurtleff has edited these records, not exactly by copying the originals for publication, or bestowing upon us the fruits of his historical studies in the form of illustrative notes,—as the more foolish editors of the New York or Rhode Island records have done,—but it seems by superintending the printing and by putting his name on the title-page.

Well, now we recollect that Dr. S. not only conducted the Massachusetts Records through the press, but continued his fostering care to the bound volumes. We have an indistinct idea that a committee of the legislature was somewhat confounded last spring by finding that the editor had preserved a number of copies from harm by depositing them where he thought proper. Nay, they seem to have censured this excessive zeal, and to have thought it unnecessary for him to send copies to England. Well, committees will judge harshly of the best intentions, but the books have gone and —.

Dr. Shurtleff is a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London. We forgot that we left off the enumeration of his titles. It is a capital thing to have the right men in the right place—and our records were supposed to have had the care of one of our most distinguished antiquaries. Editors are commonly supposed to be hard-worked and ill-paid members of society; but this can only mean poor devils of newspaper editors—for our editor is a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, of the American Antiquarian Society, and—we really do not know what else, though that formidable etc. on the title-page leaves room for much conjecture. Let us see, he also has superintended the registration returns, is a member of the City Library commission,—(didn't some one suggest his name as a willing candidate for the superintendency of the library?) Why, altogether, this editing must be easy work, for he will take charge of any other little matter that offers, and still do all that is expected.

Well, merit creates envy. We believe that the learned doctor no longer devotes his energies to the public records. We have heard that a Mr. Pulsifer, who copied the old records for all these works, has become the sole editor. We have heard that the pittance paid for this important labor was thought to be too little to offer the doctor (and too much to pay for the work.)

Well—jesting apart—we think these volumes will convince the reader that it was a mistake for the secretary to choose the late editor. That it was a mistake for Dr. Shurtleff to allow the style of publication he used to be chosen for the books, as it made them cost about three times as much as was necessary, and brought a “retrenchment” legislature at once on his head. That it was a mistake for him to ignore his humble copyist. That it was a mistake for him to take the title of editor when he did not make a single note, and thus cause uncomfortable comparisons and investigations; and, finally, that it will be a mistake if we waste any more shot on such small game. Reminiscences of John Bromfield. [Not published.] Salem: Printed at the Gazette Office. 1858. 8vo. pp. 210.

Having acquired this volume by the natural and lawful course of purchase, we feel authorized to make some extracts from it for the enlightenment of our friends.

John Bromfield, we learn, April 11, 1779, the son of John and Ann (Roberts) Bromfield. This John was the son of Edward, the son of Hon. Edward Bromfield. This latter gentleman “was the third son of Henry Bromfield, Esq., the son of Arthur Bromfield, Esq., and was born at Haywood House, the seat of the family, near New Forest, in Hampshire, in England, on January 10, 1648. . . . He came to this country in 1675.” It is curious to learn from it that “he turned the pasture behind his house (situated in what is now Bromfield Street) into a very shady grove, and in the midst he built an oratory; where, even in his most flourishing circumstances and heights of business, he would retire several times a day, that he might turn his eyes from beholding vanity,” &c.

The descendants of this upright merchant continued the fame of the family, and we will now see if the subject of this memoir is to be regarded as a degenerate scion.

Of the private worth of the subject of this memoir, no one who peruses it can remain unconvinced. The fondness with which his memory has been cherished by his friends proves his possession of most amiable qualities. The number and extent of his benefactions to the public, as provided in his will, and the humane purposes to which his generosity was directed, prove not only the bounty, but also the kind and sympathizing feelings which must have inspired him. †

The History of Minnesota; from the Earliest French Explorations to the present time. By EDWARD DUFFIELD NEILL, Secretary of the Minnesota Historical Society. “Nec falsa dicere, nec vera reticere.” Philadelphia: J. P. Lippincott & Co. 1858.

“A country which boasts but nine years of civilization—or to speak more properly of our present social condition, which counts but nine years of political existence—presents apparently a barren field for the historian. And if this were all there would be little to record, little but a repetition of the marvels of Western growth, which have grown almost monotonous, from the uniformity of the conditions on which they repose. But this is simply the crust of our history, and underneath it lie strata, reaching away down to the beds of extinct fossils, and rich with glittering mines of historic wealth. No part of America more abounds in gallant adventures than the Northwest. Its very distance from the Atlantic settlements, and the mystery that enshrouded it, has deepened into the colors of romance, the incidents of its early explorations. There was something sublime in the risks which those intrepid explorers ran in penetrating the vast wilderness of the Continent, and in threading its vast rivers that led, they knew not whither, through strange and barbarous tribes, to their sources, thousands of miles away from their homes. Very few connected histories still remain, but hundreds of fragmentary allusions to them are buried in obsolete tomes and documents, which have followed the national origin of their writers, to the libraries of France or to the Escorial, or to the archives of Canada, or of the early American Colonies.

"Mr. Neill has performed an immense labor in collating from sources so widely apart and so inaccessible to the common reader, so much that is new and valuable. If the resources of previous writers had simplified some of his work, by amassing a large portion of his materials, still much more remained for him to do—and that he has done it well, is paying but a poor compliment to the elaborate conciseness of narration, and severe but graphic chasteness of diction, in which he has woven together the materials gathered with such labor and care."—St. Paul Advertiser.

Boston: printed for private circulation. 1858.

We trust that we commit no deadly breach of confidence, in attributing this neat pamphlet of 14 pages to W. W. Greenough, Esq., of this city.

We presume, though not expressly stated in the book, that this contains but a single branch of the somewhat extended Gardner Family. This branch includes Rev. John Gardner of Stow, Ex-Governor Henry J. Gardner, Rev. Francis Gardner of Leominster, and Francis Gardner of this city, well known to the younger part of our scholars as the worthy successor of Master Lovell.

It is always an encouraging sign to chronicle the breaking the first ground in the history of a family, and though we cannot desire a better genealogy of the Gardners than this one, we trust that the author may be stimulated to perform for the remaining branches, the pious task of preserving their records, already so acceptably achieved for one.

A Short Poem, containing a Descant on the Universal Plan. Also, Lines on the Happy End of the Righteous, and Prosperity and Death of the Rich Man. . . . By JOHN PECK. Fourth Edition . . . with a Preface. Boston: 1858. 18mo. pp. 52.

To say the least of this curious production, it treats Universalism in a humorous and interesting manner, and in the same strain of argument in which Universalists employ against their opponents. The first verse is a fair sample of the whole:

"What if the author is no bard, but writes a dog's tail song;
What if the muse her aid refuse, while he doth creep along?"

We give a few specimens of the arguments which he attributes to Universalists:

"Huzza! brave boys—loud be our joys, your sins shall be forgiven;
O! skip and steg, our God and King will bring us all to heaven.
Repent we may, reform and pray; if not, all will be well;
For do our worst we shant be cursd, nor can we get to hell.
Some think the just alone reach Heaven; but all who curse and swear,
And lie and steal, get drunk and kill, find sure admittance there.
So all the filthy Sojournites, when God bids Lot retire, Went in a trice to Paradise, on rapid wings of fire."

The Prince Society—for Mutual Publication. (A Circular.)

This Society was organized on the 25th of May of the present year. It took the name of PRINCE from the Rev. Thomas Prince, one of the most careful and devoted historians and antiquaries that New England has ever produced. It is well known that there are numerous treatises upon our early colonial history, both printed and manuscript, of great value to the general historian, which are entirely inaccessible to the public; and it is equally well known, that Historical Societies fail to bring out these works, except at long intervals, and then they encumber them with matter foreign to them.

Any person becomes a member of the Society, by signifying his acceptance to the Secretary, or any member of the Council, and agreeing to purchase the works issued by the Society. By which acceptance he will be bound to take and pay for such works. Any person can withdraw from the Society at any time, having paid for all issues, inclusive of any which may be in press at the time of notice of withdrawal.

No member is called upon for a subscription until a volume is issued, and the price fixed by the Council. Should a volume be issued the present year, its cost cannot exceed three dollars. The number of volumes to be issued in any one year is to be decided by the Council also.

Officers of the Society for the present year:—S. G. Drake, President; Thomas Waterman, Frederic Kidder and Jeremiah Colburn, Vice Presidents; J. W. Dean, Corresponding Secretary; W. H. Whitmore, Recording Secretary; J. W. Parker, Treasurer. These constitute the Council.

Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England. By JAMES SAVAGE.

Proposals have been issued by Little, Brown & Co., for this long expected work of Mr. Savage. In these Proposals it is stated that the work will consist of four volumes, octavo, of about 500 pages each, at ten dollars the set, in cloth binding. Two volumes will be issued in 1859, if sufficient encouragement be given.

The Publishers have issued also a specimen of the work; but we hope it is not a sample—if it is, the work will be woefully disfigured by unnecessary abbreviations—unnecessary, inasmuch as no space is to be gained by their use, or none worth taking into consideration. Therefore, we cannot think the specimen printed is to be followed in the printing.

Such are desired to take notice, that, though the amount of their subscription is to them a small matter, it is not so with him who must promptly pay the printer. If any of this class do not receive the work hereafter, they may consider it not sent to them because they are in arrears.
